THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE HAT-HAMPER.

"The bee that gets the honey doesn't hang around the hive," nor does the retail florist who has always something new to show his customers get his novelties by sitting down and waiting, like Micawber, for "something to turn up."

How well the wide-awake florist can turn current events to account is shown by the accompanying illustration, made from a photograph of an Easter hat-hamper, originated by George Wienhoeber, of the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago. This has been previously described, but not hitherto illustrated. Mr. Wienhoeber's attention was attracted by the great amount of comment created by the current styles in women's hats. So pronounced are the shapes this season that almost every morning paper has a fresh cartoon on the "inverted waste-baskets," and Mr. Wienhoeber conceived the idea of using the milliner's "shapes" in the manufacture of hampers for corsage bouquets of violets or orchids. He simply went to a millinery wholesale house and bought a lot of the straw shapes in various colors. Taking these to his box-maker, he had a pasteboard bottom sewed across the opening in the hat, the crown removed and hinged for a cover, a box set in the hat, and it was ready for the decorator. The hats were trimmed variously, according to the price to be asked and according to the color. They were of the right size to hold a corsage of 200 violets and when a window of them, no two alike, was shown, they made an instantaneous hit.

Of course, a novelty like this, selling for from $8 to $15, takes only where a high class trade is handled, as at Fleischman's store in the Railway Exchange building, and is good only for a short time, but during the period that it remains exclusive, it is well worth the trouble it takes to get it. The success of the hat novelty depended upon current fashions, and when this style has passed on, the hat-hampers also probably will fail of success, but by that time the novelty will have worn off, anyway, and Mr. Wienhoeber will have his eyes open, on the lookout for a fresh inspiration.

THE EASTER BUSINESS.

Easter has for years been the big day with the retail florists. This year it was no exception to the rule. Every retailer throughout the whole country had a big trade, in most cases as large as the help could handle in so short a time. It seems that every year the holiday business, both at Easter and at Christmas and other times, must be handled in shorter and shorter time. Years ago the customers placed their orders several days in advance, but now it all comes at the last minute. It adds greatly to the strain of doing business, exhausting nervous energy and subtracting from the profits. It would be in order for retailers to make a united effort to educate the public toward earlier buying. Something can certainly be done in this direction if everybody tries and keeps at it.

It has become the regular thing to report an increased Easter business with blooming plants. Year after year the sales of these increase. The lily is the leader, and probably always will be, but the lily forms only a small part of the blooming plants that are sold. The azalea was a particularly good seller this year. The pink rambler roses are better Easter plants than the red ones. A good many retailers found it does not pay to overbuy on plants. Plants may not be as perishable as cut flowers, but they still cost money and if not sold out pretty clean there is a loss of profits.

The supplies of cut flowers were large this Easter and in general the stock was of splendid quality. Most of the retailers did a big business with cut flowers, in spite of devoting a large share of their energy to plants. In the larger and medium sized cities it is noticeable that the regular flower stores push plants at holidays, but the Greeks do not handle many plants and by devoting their energies to buying and selling cut flowers in large quantities, are gradually getting to have a larger and larger share of the cut flower business at such times. The large supply this Easter favored the operations of the quantity merchants. Prices generally were at a reasonable level.

It is interesting to note the advance made in the consumption of pot covers and other plant embellishments. Not all the stores can sell the fancy hampers and baskets of plants, and a good many stores in the smaller cities quite recently thought their trade did not care for even crepe paper pot covers, but as soon as one florist in a town started decking out his plants, even in the most simple manner, all the others found it necessary to follow suit. The increase in the use of plant decorations recently has been more rapid than the increase in the sales of plants themselves.

On the whole, it was a good Easter for everyone, but there probably is no one who would not be glad to see a good month's run of regular business and cut out the holiday push.

NEED SMALL BLOOMING PLANTS.

"What there is most need of, in the plant line, is small stock that can be used in the great variety of small dishes now available, and that can be sold at moderate prices."

The speaker was one of the women who know the flower business, and who deals with the best class of trade in Chicago.

Fleischman's Hat-Hamper.

"We find only a limited number of people to buy the high-priced plant arrangements, but there are plenty to buy the moderate-priced ones. Even the best of customers limit their purchases of large plants, but where something at from $1.50 to $2 or $2.50 is offered they will buy liberally, and in the end their purchases run to a great deal larger sum. Nowadays there is an infinite variety in small, artistic china jardinieres and those of brass and unglazed pottery, to say nothing of small baskets, hampers, etc. These articles are offered without end, but the difficulty comes in filling them satisfactorily. The Baby Rambler roses are the best material now available, though we can use Dutch hyacinths, primulas, valley and a few other flowering plants. The Baby Dorothy rose will have a wide sale and the plantsmen will extend their business more than most of them suppose if they will give attention to supplying the need for small flowering plants, particularly for Christmas and Easter."

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The amount of advertising the average retail florist does depends as much upon the manager of the advertising department of the local newspaper, and upon the skill and persistence of the paper's solicitors, as it does upon the initiative of the florist himself. It takes a lot of urging to get a retail florist to spend his money for printer's ink. The high class florists think newspaper advertising is not dignified, not stopping to consider that it may be dignified or the reverse, as they choose to make it; and the retailers who have not so large and less wealthy patronage, think they can't afford newspaper space!

A good many times a newspaper's advertising solicitor has been considered a general nuisance, but the fact is that when the florist has listened to the solicitor, and spent a little money with his paper, he almost always has found that the solicitor was in reality a benefactor. It pays to advertise. It pays florists as well in proportion as it pays department stores.

At Washington, D. C., there are one or two natural advertisers among the florists, and these gave just enough business to whet the appetites of the newspapers. The result has been that the advertising of the retail florists in Washington has developed steadily until nowhere in the United States is there a city in which more newspaper advertising is done by the leading retailers. Newspaper advertising in Washington is both dignified and attractive. It brings business. Nowhere is there a set of more successful retailers than at the national capital.

In this issue there is a small reproduction of a full page of a Washington paper the Sunday before Easter. Of course the newspaper worked up this page, but it didn't specially have to urge the florists to come in; indeed, some of them wanted larger spaces than any on this page and this by no means represents all who were advertising that day.

WREATH OF GALAX AND LILIES.

At this time, when there are likely to be available a considerable number of lilies that were too late for Easter, the accompanying illustration of a wreath of galax leaves and lilies should be of special interest. The wreath is the work of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox calls it a study in silver and green. The lilies are arranged over half the wreath, balancing the half formed only of plain galax. Mr. Fox calls special attention to the care bestowed on the arrangement of galax, which is graceful, entirely avoiding the stiff, nailed-down appearance so often seen.

Phil.

SMYTH'S ANNUAL "OPENING."

It always is a source of regret to a retail florist when circumstances compel him to make the same sort of window display for two holidays in succession. And Easter is not generally the season for "openings" in flower stores, but W. J. Smyth, who has two of the largest pieces of plate glass in Chicago, at the corner of Thirty-first street and Michigan boulevard, has had the same Easter decorations two years in succession. In neither case has he been in any way responsible, and no one has regretted the circumstances more than he.

It is not because this form of window decoration has proved so much better than others, from a business point of view, that Mr. Smyth appears to have adopted it; the fact is, he has confidence in his ability to devise some more attractive form of display at this season of plant arrangements bright and gay.

The character of Mr. Smyth's window displays for the last two Easters is shown in the accompanying illustration, from a photograph made April 8. For Easter, 1908, the other window was employed, and it also was possible to change the display on the eve of Easter, but this year the glaziers are on strike and the best that could be done was to board up the store front and paint a neatly lettered sign thereon.

The big wind which swept through Chicago April 7 burst Smyth's rear doors open and blew the glass in his front window out into the street. It fell with a crash that could be heard a block above the hardest gale the neighborhood has known in years. Many other show windows in different parts of the city were broken by the wind, and none of them could be replaced because the glaziers haven't cared to work in Chicago for some little time.

Last year it was an intoxicated chauffeur who did the damage. Coming down the avenue, he found the street repair workmen had blockaded the boulevard at Smyth's corner and rather than run over a frail fence with a red light, he took his automobile into Mr. Smyth's west window, the glass in which cost $500.

It is a peculiar coincidence that each time the accident occurred three days before Easter—looks like a case where lightning struck twice within six feet of the same place. Mr. Smyth says he isn't sure how much business he may have lost through this peculiar form of Easter window decoration. He had a big Easter each year, and the talk created by the tricks fate played him may to some extent have offset the advertising value of the windows he couldn't use. But just the same he says he hopes for a different form of display next year.

HOW OLD IS ANN?

William F. Gude is 41. Born at Lynchburg, Va., he was elected president of the S. A. F. the only time it met west of the Mississippi river and now is president of the Chamber of Commerce at Washington, D. C., as well as president of Gude Bros. Co.

L. A. Budlong, onion-set grower, pickle packer and Chicago's largest market gardener, is 79. He was born at Cranston, R. I., December 22, 1829. He employs Polish women to put a polish on his crops.

Peter Fisher, who gave the trade its two most widely grown carnations, Mrs. Lawson and Enchantress, to say nothing of other good sorts, is 51. He is a Scot, from St. Colmes, Parish of Dowally, Perthshire.

W. H. Siebrecht, of Astoria, L. I., is 32. He was born April 1, but it wasn't All Fools' day that time, for he saw quicker than older growers that it would pay to have cut valley every day in the year, and found a way it could be done.

Robert Craig, who is said to make as good a speech and have as quick an eye as any man in the trade when it comes to spotting a good plant novelty, is 62. He was elected president of the S. A. F. at its second meeting, in 1886, in his home town, Philadelphia.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., whose collection of geraniums is said to be the largest in the United States, is 66. He was born at Rugby, England, where the game of football came from.

William Murphy, who will be superintendent of the big trade exhibition at the S. A. F. convention at Cincinnati in August, is 51. There were fireworks at Quincy, Ill., the day he arrived in the Murphy family—it was July 4. Now he's carnation grower and wholesale florist, except for the six weeks each year he seeks the northern woods to escape hay fever.

E. C. Ludwig, who opened the first all-night flower store in the United States, at Allegheny, Pa., is 49. He was born in Pittsburg and has lived all his life under the smoke made in creating its millionaires.

W. J. Lawrence, rose grower at Eglinton, noted in Canada for his Killarneys, is 42. Born in Toronto, he finds his recreation singing in that city's famous Mendelssohn Choir.

CLEANING GREENHOUSE GLASS.

In the REVIEW of April 1, O. J. P. asks for information on the cleaning of greenhouse glass.

The glass can be easily cleaned by using muriatic acid, either on the roof or on the loose glass. For cleaning the loose glass, have a wooden trough larger than the glass. Take the pure acid in an earthenware jar and apply it to the glass with a swab or a piece of stick with a rag tied on the end. Be careful not to get any of the acid on your hands. Lay the glass on a box or table, level with the trough. Apply the acid evenly and rub only a little. Turn the glass over by means of another stick and rub the other side. Then slide it into the trough, into which a stream of water is running continuously from a hose. After applying plenty of water, you may then remove the glass with your hands and set the panes on edge to dry off. You will find them as clean as when they left the factory. This acid will remove anything, but be careful in using it, as you are up against the real thing.

they will buy liberally, and in the end their purchases run to a great deal larger sum. Nowadays there is an infinite variety in small, artistic china jardinieres and those of brass and unglazed pottery, to say nothing of small baskets, hampers, etc. These articles are offered without end, but the difficulty comes in filling them satisfactorily. The Baby Rambler roses are the best material now available, though we can use Dutch hyacinths, primulas, valley and a few other flowering plants. The Baby Dorothy rose will have a wide sale and the plantsmen will extend their business more than most of them suppose if they will give attention to supplying the need for small flowering plants, particularly for Christmas and Easter."

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The amount of advertising the average retail florist does depends as much upon the manager of the advertising department of the local newspaper, and upon the skill and persistence of the paper's solicitors, as it does upon the initiative of the florist himself. It takes a lot of urging to get a retail florist to spend his money for printer's ink. The high class florists think newspaper advertising is not dignified, not stopping to consider that it may be dignified or the reverse, as they choose to make it; and the retailers who have not so large and less wealthy patronage, think they can't afford newspaper space!

A good many times a newspaper's advertising solicitor has been considered a general nuisance, but the fact is that when the florist has listened to the solicitor, and spent a little money with his paper, he almost always has found that the solicitor was in reality a benefactor. It pays to advertise. It pays florists as well in proportion as it pays department stores.

At Washington, D. C., there are one or two natural advertisers among the florists, and these gave just enough business to whet the appetites of the newspapers. The result has been that the advertising of the retail florists in Washington has developed steadily until nowhere in the United States is there a city in which more newspaper advertising is done by the leading retailers. Newspaper advertising in Washington is both dignified and attractive. It brings business. Nowhere is there a set of more successful retailers than at the national capital.

In this issue there is a small reproduction of a full page of a Washington paper the Sunday before Easter. Of course the newspaper worked up this page, but it didn't specially have to urge the florists to come in; indeed, some of them wanted larger spaces than any on this page and this by no means represents all who were advertising that day.

WREATH OF GALAX AND LILIES.

At this time, when there are likely to be available a considerable number of lilies that were too late for Easter, the accompanying illustration of a wreath of galax leaves and lilies should be of special interest. The wreath is the work of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox calls it a study in silver and green. The lilies are arranged over half the wreath, balancing the half formed only of plain galax. Mr. Fox calls special attention to the care bestowed on the arrangement of galax, which is graceful, entirely avoiding the stiff, nailed-down appearance so often seen.

ORCHIDS

BRASSO-CATTLEYA SUSANNAE.

The interesting new orchid, Brasso-Cattleya Susannæ, is the result of a cross between Cattleya Thayeriana and Brassavola Digbyana. The cross was made in October, 1900, and seed sown in December, 1901. The resultant offspring is fairly intermediate between the two parents, the top showing especially the influence of the brassavola, although in a less degree than in some of the other crosses where B. Digbyana has been used.

The plant carrying two flowers, as illustrated, was exhibited by the raiser, E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, Mass., at the Boston spring show, March 24, 1909, and received a first-class certificate. Mr. Orpet has raised many other seedlings, but this is the first Brassavola Digbyana cross he has flowered. It is also, I believe, the first in America, although in Europe a considerable number have been raised. W. N. Craig.

THE EASTER LILY.

[A paper by George Bartholomew, read before the Dayton Florists' Club April 5, 1909.]

The principal varieties grown are Harrisii, longiflorum and giganteum. The Harrisii lily not so long ago was the only lily relied on and grown for the Easter trade, but of late years it is being relegated to a place among the "has beens," for various reasons, in regard to which a good many people differ. Some think they are cut for the bloom, which we all know has a tendency to interfere with the proper development and ripening of the bulb, while others say it is the fault of the importers, who are so anxious to obtain orders that they promise extra early delivery and then ship the lilies before they have had a chance to ripen. "We can give you your Harrisii," they say, "two or three weeks before our competitors can." I myself think we can trace the decay to both causes.

Not so many years ago, Lilium Harrisii were cut in Bermuda, in bud, and shipped to New York for Easter, to compete with our florists who were buying from them, with the expectation of realizing a fair profit from their investment. Now, as I say, it appears to me that this is where the Harrisii seems to get worse every year. I have received bulbs of the Harrisii which, from all appearances, were good and solid. When grown on, they came up and made a promising appearance, with plenty of buds, but the results were no texture to the flowers. I have been growing Harrisii for the last twenty-five years, and up to twelve years ago I had no trouble, growing them from four to five feet high, with the best of flowers, but to be candid with you, fellow members, Lilium Harrisii, as far as I am able to see, are a thing of the past.

Longiflorum and Giganteum.

Not so many years ago, our enterprising little Japs came forward offering us lilies for Easter, including the longiflorum and giganteum, which we all find much more profitable to grow, especially the giganteum.

A few years ago no florist, or even the public, thought of buying Easter lilies except for Easter. Now, by a system of keeping them in cold storage, we can have them the year around. They are kept at a temperature as near freezing as possible, in order to retard them from starting to grow. Any grower or florist can have Easter lilies the year around, by potting them at intervals, allowing what he thinks to be a reasonable time between and estimating the quantity necessary to supply his demands. We grow about 50,000 Easter lily bulbs each year and expect to grow more if the demand requires it. Here is where every florist should keep posted, whether it be on Easter lilies or anything else. If your patrons know you make a specialty of any particular thing, they will look to you when in need of it.

Easter lily bulbs, when received, should be taken from the case they are shipped in immediately and put in a cool place. A little moss thrown over them will be a benefit, providing you are unable to pot them at once.

Culture.

Take good, rich, open soil and do not use too large a pot. Always use drainage. Cover the bulb one-half inch to an inch with soil, water thoroughly and place outside in a coldframe. Cover with well rotted manure, about two inches thick; this will hold the moisture for a long time. If they are exposed to dry weather, examine them; thus you can tell whether they need water. If, however, there are occasional showers, they will need no more water until you remove them inside. A good many growers make a mistake here, not only with lilies, but with other stock. If the pot is not full of roots, be careful in watering. There are a number of growers asking today, "What is the trouble with my lilies—the stems are so short?" when the trouble or fault is all their own. So I always say, if a plant is not thirsty do not water it. If a person is not thirsty he does not want a drink.

Regarding Easter lilies for summer and fall blooms, the same method may be carried out, with the exception of taking weather conditions into consideration. We grow or start them under the bench, or on top, where the glass has been shaded, but we always use a covering of sphagnum moss. You will find that with this method they will grow longer stems, where there is an abundance of shade, but plenty of air at all times. They can be grown to meet your demands until your Formosas come in, which should be by the first part of February. The same culture may be used in growing Formosas as is used for the giganteums.

BERMUDA.

Where Easter Lilies Grow.

South of the gulf stream and 600 miles from New York is a group of coral islands called The Bermudas. They were discovered by Juan Bermudez about 1522, while en route from Spain to Cuba. Observing that vegetation was luxuriant and food for animals plentiful, he conceived the idea of leaving a number of hogs on the largest island. It seems that nature had a more poetic use for Bermuda than hog colonization, for as the seamen were about to land the animals a fierce storm arose, causing them to abandon the project. The islands were next visited by an Englishman named May, and probably much against his will, too, for his vessel was driven ashore and wrecked. The party remained on the islands five months, during which time they built a large boat of native cedar, in which they set sail for the mainland. Storms seem to have been responsible for our early knowledge of these beautiful islands, for in 1609, sixteen years after May's unfortunate experience, another Englishman, Sir George Somers, was wrecked on the second largest island of the group. At this time he took formal possession of the islands in the name of England, and, again, like his predecessor May, he and his crew built boats of native cedar. In these boats they sailed westward to Virginia. On St. George's Island a memorial tablet has been erected bearing the following inscription: "Near this spot was interred in the year 1610 the heart of the heroic Admiral, Sir George Somers, Kt., who nobly sacrificed his life to carry succor to the infant and suffering plantation, now the State of Virginia. To preserve his fame to future ages, near the scene of his memorable shipwreck of 1609, the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of this Colony, for the time being, caused this tablet to be erected, 1876."

For many years the islands were used by England as a penal colony, but as the misuse of such a beautiful spot became apparent, the idea was abandoned, and the convicts who chose to remain were granted a pardon, and a portion of land allotted to each on which to make a fresh start in life. Many of their descendants still own and cultivate extensive lily and onion farms. The hog having failed to gain a foothold, the plebeian onion became the staple industry and for generations millions of bushels of Bermuda onions were exported to England and America. Between 1870 and 1880, the onion encountered an opponent in the Easter lily, and now one can ride for miles over beautiful natural roads of soft coral formation, through frequent fields of the pure white flowers, growing in such profusion that the ground is not visible—nothing but masses of white and green.

There are over 200 farms devoted exclusively to the lily, some being thirty to forty acres in extent," says A. D. Dart in the Rural New Yorker. "Travelers, as well as natives, become very tired of the heavy perfume, which can be discerned a mile or more away, the odor of the onion, which is still raised to some extent, being a welcome change. The natives, however, are quite resigned to the heavy perfume, knowing that acre for acre, the growing of the lily is three or four times as profitable as if planted in onions, potatoes, or fruits.

EASTER TRADE REPORTS.

LEBANON, PA.—C. C. Yost opened two branch stores for Easter and did a big business.

PORTSMOUTH, O.—The Herms Floral Co. got into its new store, at Sixth and Chillicothe streets, for Easter.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—August F. Beyer & Sons say the Easter business was better all around than it was in 1908.

LINCOLN, ILL.—Gullett & Sons had a downtown salesroom for the Easter trade and did a big business, W. H. Gullett being in charge.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—J. F. Horn & Bro. had an extra store at 612 Hamilton street for Easter. They had 1,800 splendid lily plants, among other stock, and did a big business.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Easter display at Jacob Schulz's Fourth avenue store was so handsome as to be worthy of special note. The lilies, which were grown in his own houses, were particularly fine.

ALLIANCE, O.—The Lamborn Floral Co. shipped two carloads of Easter plants from the greenhouses here to the store at Canton and did a big business at each place.

RICHMOND, KY.—Albert Richfar says Easter business was grand this year. The blooming plants were in strong demand and cut flowers sold well. Good stock was wanted more than cheap stuff.

WELLINGTON, O.—T. G. Yale says: "I would report the Easter trade a little better than ever before. Everything that looked like an Easter plant or cut flower went and we had nothing left."

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—I. Nusbaum & Son did a fine Easter trade at its store on Main street, and in the Waldo building Chas. Dudley had a large business. It seemed that plants and cut flowers sold equally well.

HAMILTON, ONT.—Easter business was excellent. The Vossen Co. had a large display of lilies and violets, which sold at good prices. The Connon Floral Co. had a fine display of pot plants in considerable variety and cleaned them all out.

ANNVILLE, PA.—D. A. Whiskeyman furnished the Easter decorations for the First Evangelical and Christ Reformed churches. He also had charge of the decorations for the anniversary of the Kalozetean Literary Society, April 9.

ARE PLANTS TAXABLE?

Are plants and flowers which grow in greenhouses real estate, or are they personal property? This is the question which the Hennepin county courts (Minneapolis) may be called upon to answer and upon the answer depends the right of the county to receive $185.17 in personal property taxes.

Assessors and the county authorities say that greenhouse plants are not real estate. As a result they placed a valuation of $6,385 on the plants and flowers in the greenhouses at Park avenue and

Many of their descendants still own and cultivate extensive lily and onion farms. The hog having failed to gain a foothold, the plebeian onion became the staple industry and for generations millions of bushels of Bermuda onions were exported to England and America. Between 1870 and 1880, the onion encountered an opponent in the Easter lily, and now one can ride for miles over beautiful natural roads of soft coral formation, through frequent fields of the pure white flowers, growing in such profusion that the ground is not visible—nothing but masses of white and green.

There are over 200 farms devoted exclusively to the lily, some being thirty to forty acres in extent," says A. D. Dart in the Rural New Yorker. "Travelers, as well as natives, become very tired of the heavy perfume, which can be discerned a mile or more away, the odor of the onion, which is still raised to some extent, being a welcome change. The natives, however, are quite resigned to the heavy perfume, knowing that acre for acre, the growing of the lily is three or four times as profitable as if planted in onions, potatoes, or fruits.

EASTER TRADE REPORTS.

Lebanon, Pa.—C. C. Yost opened two branch stores for Easter and did a big business.

Portsmouth, O.—The Herms Floral Co. got into its new store, at Sixth and Chillicothe streets, for Easter.

South Bend, Ind.—August F. Beyer & Sons say the Easter business was better all around than it was in 1908.

Lincoln, Ill.—Gullett & Sons had a downtown salesroom for the Easter trade and did a big business, W. H. Gullett being in charge.

Allentown, Pa.—J. F. Horn & Bro. had an extra store at 612 Hamilton street for Easter. They had 1,800 splendid lily plants, among other stock, and did a big business.

Louisville, Ky.—The Easter display at Jacob Schulz's Fourth avenue store was so handsome as to be worthy of special note. The lilies, which were grown in his own houses, were particularly fine.

Alliance, O.—The Lamborn Floral Co. shipped two carloads of Easter plants from the greenhouses here to the store at Canton and did a big business at each place.

Richmond, Ky.—Albert Richfar says Easter business was grand this year. The blooming plants were in strong demand and cut flowers sold well. Good stock was wanted more than cheap stuff.

Wellington, O.—T. G. Yale says: "I would report the Easter trade a little better than ever before. Everything that looked like an Easter plant or cut flower went and we had nothing left."

Clarksburg, W. Va.—I. Nusbaum & Son did a fine Easter trade at its store on Main street, and in the Waldo building Chas. Dudley had a large business. It seemed that plants and cut flowers sold equally well.

Hamilton, Ont.—Easter business was excellent. The Vossen Co. had a large display of lilies and violets, which sold at good prices. The Connon Floral Co. had a fine display of pot plants in considerable variety and cleaned them all out.

Annville, Pa.—D. A. Whiskeyman furnished the Easter decorations for the First Evangelical and Christ Reformed churches. He also had charge of the decorations for the anniversary of the Kalozetean Literary Society, April 9.

ARE PLANTS TAXABLE?

Are plants and flowers which grow in greenhouses real estate, or are they personal property? This is the question which the Hennepin county courts (Minneapolis) may be called upon to answer and upon the answer depends the right of the county to receive $185.17 in personal property taxes.

Assessors and the county authorities say that greenhouse plants are not real estate. As a result they placed a valuation of $6,385 on the plants and flowers in the greenhouses at Park avenue and Thirty-fifth street. The plants and the flowers were either directly or indirectly connected with the soil, but the assessors argued that they were to be sold as personal property, and should be taxed as personal property. A valuation of $18,360 was placed on the greenhouses as real estate.

The tax on the plants as personal property has not been paid and a penalty of ten per cent has accrued. No objection has been raised to the tax on the property as real estate, but it is probable that the question of whether or not the plants in the greenhouse can be taxed as personal property will be taken to the district court.—Minneapolis Journal.

[The Review will be pleased to hear from any grower who has successfully contested an assessment on the growing stock in his greenhouses after such an assessment once had been made.]

SOME MORE FIGURES.

We have been quite interested in your publication of the figures on crops of carnations that have been cut by the different growers. We have noted some inquiry as to how Beacon would compare with Enchantress in quantity of blooms per plant, and we would submit the following, if you think it would be of interest to your subscribers.

We will not attempt to give cuts of all varieties grown, but will give our cut of Winsor, Beacon and Enchantress from September 1 to March 1. The figures include nothing but salable flowers, but including splits, but do not take into consideration any cuttings taken from plants from which we propagated quite heavily, especially of Beacon. The following are our cuts:

Variety.	No. of plants.	Blooms cut.
Winsor	3,952	40,398
Enchantress	3,400	43,481
Beacon	975	11,635

From the above it appears that in less than six months we averaged 10⅕ blooms per plant from Winsor, 12⅘ blooms per plant from Enchantress, and practically twelve blooms per plant from Beacon. There was this further difference, that the Winsor and Enchantress were plants propagated in January and February, while the plants of Beacon were from late struck cuttings, taken the latter part of March and early part of April.

According to these figures, we believe Beacon is well able to hold its own as a producer. White Bros.

CARNATION SHASTA.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph of a few blooms of Carnation Shasta, which has been favorably commented upon a number of times in these columns since the annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis, in January, when it was shown for the first time and attracted an unusually large amount of attention.

Shasta originated with Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, and is the result of a cross between Enchantress and a pink seedling. It is glistening white and is said never to show a trace of color. The blooms are of moderate size, being between three and three and one-half inches in diameter, but the form is its most noticeable characteristic of flower. It is almost perfectly round, full and high built in the center, with a regularity exceptional among later day carnations. The growers state that it gives a stem of good length, strong enough to hold up the flower, and that the calyx never splits; that it comes into bloom early and is both free and continuous.

Baur & Smith have a stock of some 12,000 plants of Shasta and are planning its distribution in the trade. An arrangement has been made with Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., to grow part of the stock and look after the distribution in eastern territory.

TOPPING THE YOUNG PLANTS.

My carnations are well established in 2-inch pots and stand about six inches high. When and where shall I give them the first pinching? D. S.

A pretty safe rule to be governed by, in topping young carnation plants, is to wait until they begin to lengthen out between the joints. When you can see plainly the stem between the leaves, then is the proper time to top them. To allow them to run up until the bud appears would be wasting just that much time, which might as well be given the plant to make new breaks. And besides that, some few varieties, if allowed to go too long, will harden the stem so that the breaks do not come freely, and poor, straggly plants are the result.

As to how high to cut, that is another question, which will have much to do with the kind of plants you will have finally. Varieties vary so much in habit of growth that one can hardly lay down a hard and fast rule to govern this part of the operation. On any variety which naturally makes a bushy, well formed plant, such as Enchantress, Beacon, May, Bountiful, Winona, Victory, Winsor, etc., we top above the highest joint which will not throw a bud. Usually this will give us from five to seven joints, according to the variety. If conditions in the field are favorable later, nearly every eye above ground will break, and fine, bushy plants will result.

Such varieties as White Perfection and Aristocrat you must be very careful with. They need to be topped when the wood is in good condition to break; that is, not too hard. As soon as you can see the stem, as I said before, then take off the top, leaving about five joints on the plant. We like to have these two varieties with the first break just started at planting-out time, as in that condition the plants are not so apt to harden on account of the change from inside to outside. Better breaks will follow subsequent toppings, and bushy plants will result.

If the young plants have been allowed to become potbound and hard, it is better to top them low, say three or four joints above the soil. The reason for that is this: When plants are cut back it is natural for them to break from the eye or eyes nearest the cut. When a young carnation plant is in such condition that it will break from only two or possibly three eyes, it is better to have these not oo high. Some growers advocate topping high at all times, with a view to getting a long stem between the roots and the breaks. In some cases this may be right, but only when the young plants are in perfect condition. It is not a cure, however, for what it was supposed to cure—stem-rot. When the stem of the plant is quite long you will have trouble in getting well shaped plants. You may plant them upright in the field, but soon there may come a heavy rain which will beat the top-heavy plants over, and unless you go over them after every such experience, the plants will break along the stem on the upper side and one-sided plants are taken up later.

We always prefer a plant which sets close to the ground, because it is much less troublesome at all times in keeping the growth upright. As to there being a clear stem between the soil and the first break, there is nothing in it. We have had many plants break from eyes below the soil surface, and have experienced no more trouble with stem-rot on such plants than on any other. When an eye breaks below the soil, the stem of that branch becomes the same as the original stem up to the surface and will rot no more than the other. When a low-set plant is benched, it is apt to be planted about the same as it was in the field, while a long-stemmed, top-heavy plant is likely to be set a little deeper into the soil, to make it stand upright. Which do you think will cause the greater amount of stem-rot? So the question of when and where to top young carnation plants is a far-reaching one, and needs careful study. A. F. J. B.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Spiraeas.

There is always a good call for spiræa in a cut state for Memorial day, the sprays being excellent in bouquet or design work. Now that Easter is over and more bench room is at disposal, the plants should be given a light position and encouraged in every possible way. If the young leaves are just pushing up they can be flowered all right by the end of May, as spiræa takes kindly to quite hard forcing, provided it always gets an abundance of water at the roots.

The old S. Japonica is now largely displaced in favor of improved varieties, but for bouquet work is still good. Of the newer sorts, S. astilboides is much the best, either for cutting or as a pot plant. S. grandiflora compacta and Gladstone produce dense spikes, which renders them less desirable for bouquets.

Always remember that spiræas are easily injured by tobacco smoke. The warmer the weather, the greater the danger of injury. If you must fumigate, let the doses be light or cover the plants with paper. If stood on the floor, they escape injury, unless you are giving the house a heavy dose. It is always safest, however, not to use smoke in any form where spiræas are being forced.

Candytuft and Feverfew.

Those two useful Memorial day crops, the candytuft and feverfew, should now receive close attention. Keep the surface soil scratched over, weeds removed and, as the plants begin to fill the benches with roots, apply a mulch of well rotted manure. This helps to keep the soil moist and reduces the necessity for such constant watering. Do not on any account try to force either of these crops. If planted when previously advised, they should come along for Memorial day in any ordinary greenhouse. Let them have an abundance of ventilation and do not apply any shading until the flowers are well open, when a little coating helps to keep the houses cooler.

Gladioli.

The early forcing varieties of gladiolus, such as Colvillei The Bride, Peach Blossom, Ackermanni and others of the nanus or cardinalis section, are now selling well and are in steady demand at all the better class stores. If you grow these, you probably have them in flats, which is preferable to bench culture, as you can then move them around at will. It is an advantage to be able to place a few flats in warmth each week to keep up a steady succession. For Memorial day this section of gladioli is not half enough grown. It is easy to hold them back for that day, using a cold house or frame, and they will bring even better prices then than at Easter.

The large-flowered, or Gandavensis section, growing in benches, usually make their appearance in the markets about March 20 each year. Those planted in February should be in season for Memorial day, but it is impossible to get a whole bench ready at once, the bulbs flowering a month apart. Any which are running up to flower had better have a wire stake to support them. If allowed to fall over and become twisted, their selling qualities are practically nil.

The first batch of outdoor gladioli should be planted as soon as the ground is in condition. Always give them an open, sunny spot and land which has been liberally manured. Do not make the mistake of planting all your bulbs at one time, but put in successional batches until June. Keep the bulbs in a cool, dry shed or cellar and spread them out thinly, so that they do not become an entangled mass of roots.

Do not fail to plant a good batch of that finest of all varieties, America, now that its price has become so moderate. No other sort will sell in the market like it. Choose either named varieties if you are growing for market, or particular shades of color; pink, white and clear scarlet are the best sellers.

Ten Weeks Stock.

There is never an oversupply of cut flowers at Memorial day and, while the rather commonplace stocks may be a drug at times in the flower markets, they will always sell at Memorial day. Stocks can be produced cheaply and to those looking for a large bunch of flowers for their money, stocks will always appeal. Such varieties as the beautiful Beauty of Nice and the giant forms of ten weeks' stocks, when well grown, will attract anyone's attention. The plants, even if but recently benched from 3-inch pots, should flower for May 30 if well looked after. Remove all singles as soon as you can detect them. They are of little value, and the space they take up will be more profitably used for the doubles. A good water supply, when well established, loosening up the surface soil, and plenty of sunshine and fresh air are what the plants need. Never try to coddle them.

THE ROSE GROWERS' PROBLEMS.

[A paper by W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., read before the New York Florists' Club, April 12, 1909.]

I do not think there was ever a time when I felt so hopelessly unable to rise to the demands of the occasion as at the present. To interest in any way the members of this club, or the rose growers of this, the greatest flower center in the world, would seem enough to undertake under ordinary conditions; but it seems hard indeed, coming as I do now, with a sorrowful and heavy heart caused by the going out of that brilliantly beautiful personality that it has been our great privilege to know, to honor and to love. No matter how bright the light of his genial, kindly countenance shines in our hearts and memory, or how thankful we may feel to have known him, it will be impossible to go on with our ordinary, everyday affairs without something of that serious and thoughtful life entering into our thoughts and meditations.

Under these conditions I know you will expect the few words I have to say to you tonight will be a deeper, more serious view of the rose grower's problems.

You who are rose growers know, and those thinking of entering upon that career should know, that it is necessary to consecrate your lives to this work. It must not be taken up without very serious consideration. The only way to succeed is to pay the price, and that is an overwhelming and everlasting determination to put forth every ounce of energy you have. You must make it your religion and your life,—and why not? You must enter into partnership with the power that moves the universe. What grander work than developing the beauties of nature that thousands may have pleasure?

Site of First Importance.

To those starting new, and to many who are not well located, a proper site for a rose growing plant is of the greatest importance. First, a good soil, an abundant water supply, a large, level tract of land near the railroad station. It is better to go twenty-five miles farther out into the country, if you can get two miles nearer the railroad station, as the extra cost of teaming coal over that two miles will a great deal more than make up for the extra expense in express. A large farm in a small town will usually solve this problem best, as in larger towns, farms are too great a distance from the station.

A full and complete plan of an up-to-date rose growing plant will require a great deal of care, time and serious thought. All of us should plan ahead carefully what we intend to do, changing and rechanging for years, that we may develop along the best lines.

Large Houses Best.

My recommendation is the large house. My latest house, 60x1340, I find none too large. The advantages over smaller houses are many and are summed up in the fact that they produce better stock and more of it. We do not find that those that have built the large houses have given them up and gone back to the smaller ones. Those who have built large houses build still larger when they build again.

The report from North Wales, Pa., is that their house built two years ago is too small, although 150 feet wide. They have now planned, and I believe have under way, the construction of a house that is 172 feet wide and 700 feet long; over 110,000 feet under one roof. With proper construction (and good construction is absolutely necessary in these large, high houses), I believe that such a house will be a success, although I might hesitate to recommend the building of such a house.

An investment is necessary to carry out a properly planned rose growing business. First of all, you will have to invest your whole heart and soul, all your courage, and be ready to put in, at all times, good, large amounts of patient, untiring, hard work. Also a love for your business and the rose, like the love of a mother for her offspring. You will also need some money, but that is quite a secondary matter to the stock of courage that you should have on hand.

Eternal Vigilance the Price.

The best roses are not grown by any secret process, but by the most careful attention to every detail. Eternal vigilance is the price of good roses. You will find it true every time that the man who produces superior stock, does so by a more careful and painstaking method.

If anything has been accomplished by the use of chemicals, I should like to know it. I have not been able to obtain good results from their use. I find plenty of care and cow manure produces much better and surer results.

Do not deceive yourself in regard to reasons for success. We sometimes know why we fail, but why we succeed is much harder to answer.

When they grow well, there are 4,000 reasons why they do so. We may know what a dozen of them are, and if, by chance, we learn one or two more, we then think we have solved the whole problem.

Are we getting from the experiment stations all we should? How many of us make any effort to get that knowledge, or to assist them in any way with the work that they are doing? I don't think we have used the experiment stations fairly. They are doing a great work and should be called on to help us in the solving of many of our problems.

What to Grow.

Aim to cut your roses when the demand is good. The grower who produces a large supply on an overstocked market and a small supply when the market is short, must not expect to get a large return. In Boston we have a good demand in August; in October the rose market seems always to be overstocked. From the middle of January to the middle of February is a short time. This is the time that takes our best efforts to cover.

Is the demand for the best grade roses as good as it ought to be? We seem to have much more trouble to dispose of our high-grade stock, than we do of the smaller grades. I hope you will do better in New York.

How do you decide which old kind to give up to make room for the new? What are you going to take out to make room for White Killarney? Will you give up the Bride this year? Do you think White Killarney will replace Bride? Have you given up Maid, and are you growing Killarney instead? I have given up Maid; next year I expect to give up Bride. What about the other new kinds? Which ones will you continue to grow for the coming year? Rhea Reid I shall continue to grow, but not extensively. This rose came near to being one of the best roses ever produced. Maryland I think well of, and a good, safe one to grow. William R. Smith is a promising rose for summer. I intend to grow it, but only to a limited extent. Kaiserin does not give any light-colored summer rose much show. Mrs. Jardine and Queen Beatrice I have discarded.

In closing, the last word I will say is in regard to the economy and saving that I have found best to practice. For many years, at the first, I thought it most important to save my money, but I now find that the money is not nearly so important as the saving of your nerve force, your courage and brain force, also your health and bodily force, and with what is expected of you in these high-pressure times, you will need them all.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The general verdict appears to be that it was a good Easter, much better than a year ago, but hardly a record breaker. Plants once more asserted their supremacy over cut flowers and each year they become more of a factor. The demand for pot plants was undoubtedly better than Boston ever had before and it is safe to say that about all well grown plants were sold out. Lilies averaged 12½ cents per bud; a few went at 10 cents, but late in the week it became evident that the supply was inadequate and 15 cents was readily paid at wholesale. Retailers charged 15 cents to 25 cents per bud and every pot seemed to go. Stock averaged dwarfer than usual, but was well flowered.

Azaleas were in good demand, sizes from $3 to $5 especially so. Rhododendrons were seen in considerable numbers, Pink Pearl being the favorite, a popular price at wholesale being $5. Less pyrus, prunus and cratægus than usual were seen. Pink ramblers sold far better than crimson ones and were seen in larger numbers. Dorothy Perkins was mostly seen, but Lady Gay had the best color. Hiawatha was a popular single scarlet, which sold finely. Crimson Rambler and Baby Rambler were less popular than in former years. Some nice hybrids in pots sold well, Frau Karl Druschki being a favorite. Clothilde Soupert was used as a light pink to be sold cheaply. Genistas were abundant, but their early-dropping qualities seemed to militate against their sale. Spiræa astilboides was the best of its class. Multiflora was a better seller than the old common type. Lily of the valley in pots and pans met with an excellent sale. Bulbous stock moved rather slowly, but better than in preceding years. Acacias sold well, also ericas. Some of the Cavendishii type were nice specimens. Metrosideros, a one-time favorite, was little seen. Bougainvilleas were abundant and moved well, also marguerites when nicely flowered. In the way of cheaper stock, pans of pansies, double violets, double daisies, myosotis, English primroses and polyanthus were sold in quantity. There was a fair call for fern pans, palms and nephrolepis. Hydrangea hortensis sold well and quite a few cyclamen were disposed of. Prices at wholesale for plants showed but little change from former years.

The cut flower trade was not so good as it might have been and advances in price were less than usual. Roses cleaned out well. Extra quality Beauties made $6, and a few $9, but the call was more for second quality stock. Killarney and Richmond made from $3 to $4 per dozen for best. Bride and Bridesmaid varied from $4 to $8 per hundred, a few select making $12.50. Carnations, which sold well several days before Easter, took a slump April 10. From $4 to $6 were current prices on good stock, some fancies making $8. Inferior stock had to be cleared at $2 and $3. Violets, as usual, sold well, both singles and doubles cleaning out; $1 per hundred was the ruling price, some few selling higher and lower. Sweet peas were in heavy supply; all the best brought $1 per hundred and some higher. Marguerites made $1 to $2 per hundred, and valley $2 to $3. Cut lilies mostly averaged 12½ cents per bud, but some brought more. Candidums were few.

In bulbous stock there was an over-supply. In narcissi, Emperor, Victoria, Leedsii and poeticus ornatus were leaders. La Reine and Couronne d'Or were popular tulips. Gardenias sold well at $4 per dozen. Cattleyas and dendrobiums were about the only orchids in evidence.

There was a good demand for southern smilax and other greenery. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, adiantum and hardy ferns all sold well.

Business since Easter has remained fairly steady; an abundance of flowers are arriving. The weather on Good Friday was cold and wet most of the day. April 10 was a clear but bitterly cold day, there being a keen wind, and minimum temperatures of 16 to 20 degrees were recorded near Boston. Easter day was clear and pleasant, the maximum temperature being 50 degrees. Monday, April 12, came much warmer.

Various Notes.

The club banquet April 14 at Horticultural hall was a great success. The sale of tickets was excellent and everyone enjoyed a first-class time. The decorations committee had made the tables more attractive than ever. A report of the banquet will appear in the next issue of the Review.

T. F. Galvin had a grand lot of cyclamens for Easter. His bougainvilleas and Hydrangea hortensis were also extra fine.

Sidney Hoffman did a great business and his big, up-to-date store on Massachusetts avenue had as fine a lot of Easter plants as we have even seen in Boston.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, among cut flowers had extra fine lots of ranunculi, valley, ixias and Iris Hispanica.

H. E. Fiske Seed Co. devoted one of their large show windows to Easter plants. A well arranged rock garden filled with blooming plants occupied another window.

F. H. Houghton had a beautiful window of pink ramblers and Rose Luisante tulips.

Thomas J. Clarke hired the store immediately over his own at the corner of Berkley and Boylston streets, which was filled to overflowing with choice pot plants.

E. MacMulkin had a pretty window done in white. He had extra fine stocks of azaleas, Rhododendron Pink Pearl, Rose Lady Gay and kalmias and did a heavy business.

Philip L. Carbone, at his two Boylston street stores, had many unique plants and cut flowers. Ericas of the waxy type, Rhododendron Pink Pearl, acacias in variety and pink ramblers in variety were noted. Some fine specimens of Frau Karl Druschki roses were also a feature.

W. E. Doyle had some extra fine Hiawatha roses. Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins were also good. His lilies were among the best to be seen in the city.

H. M. Robinson & Co. had a splendid Easter trade and sold more flowers and greenery than ever before.

John McFarland had a fine lot of valley, Brunner roses and gardenias.

A. W. Kidder had many thousands of superb single violets, unusually good for greenhouse stock at this late date.

William H. Elliott, owing to alterations, did not occupy his new salesroom on Park street, near the flower market, but sold out every rose at his old stand.

Edgar Bros. had 10,000 fine sweet peas April 10, which cleaned up quickly, quality being O. K.

William Sim, as usual, had the biggest lot of sweet peas for Easter, the quality being superb. His violets also were in tremendous request.

Remember the club meeting April 20 and the lecture on "Roses" by L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I. There will be other interesting features.

W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It was a weird and anxious Easter, with results on the whole satisfactory. Commencing with the plant growers, the last ten days of the season were velvet, for practically every good plant was sold long before Easter, and except a few of the larger sized genistas, azaleas and bougainvilleas, everything was disposed of by the retailers at profitable figures. The medium sized ramblers, rhododendrons, acacias and bushy, dwarf bougainvilleas all were snapped up by buyers as rapidly as the hosts of salesmen could dispose of them. The plant combinations in fancy baskets, vases and boxes never sold so rapidly, and the lily was again crowned king. If there was a scarcity of anything, it was the lily. Those who sold out at what was top a week ago, 12 cents, could have had 15 cents for every perfect flower early Saturday, and before midnight 20 cents was asked and paid without a murmur by the hungry retailers who had gone short of the market. It was a great day for the lily men.

But it was a sorry day for the violet industry. Nearly a thousand boxes arrived Saturday, away over a million and a half of flowers, and vast quantities of these not of first quality, and a great slump was, of course, inevitable. During the week the price gradually crawled up to 50 cents, with even a little more for the finest grade. These prices held on Saturday morning for a while, and then came the avalanche. Slowly they crept downward until after midnight 25 cents per hundred was high, and the unscented and too long unpicked stuff was fortunate to supply the sidewalk brigade at $1 per thousand. Quantities failed of sale at any price.

Valley was scarce and high, 5 cents to 6 cents being asked Saturday evening. Orchids sold splendidly, also gardenias, though no exorbitant prices prevailed.

Carnations held splendidly at reasonable rates. Anything of real size and quality did not go below 4 cents, and a few of the novelties brought 6 cents. The common kinds were disposed of in the early market as low as 3 cents. Roses were abundant, the quality superb and prices should be satisfactory to all. There seemed to be little pickling. Beauties seldom went above 50 cents. That figure may fairly be given as the average top in quantity. Occasionally the small buyer found it necessary to pay a little more. The finest Maid and Bride sold at 12 cents to 15 cents and all the new roses in proportion. Some long-stemmed Killarney and Richmond touched 25 cents.

The general verdict is one of satisfaction and the trade begins spring with a delightful temperature, with a cheery outlook and well filled purses.

Club Meeting.

President Harry Turner was in the chair at the meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday evening, April 12. Nearly 100 members were present. The expected plant display did not materialize, the Easter demand having depleted the houses of all the local growers. The dinner committee reported a satisfactory result, the receipts more than balancing the expenditures. The thanks of the club were voted the committee and Patrick O'Mara spoke in a complimentary strain, characterizing it as the best dinner the club had ever known, with many applications from the ladies for its repetition in 1910. The outing committee reported rapid progress and many details as to the club's annual excursion, July 1, to Whitestone Landing.

The committee of awards read the result of the last exhibition of the club on rose night at its March session, as follows:

Twenty-five White Killarney, F. R. Pierson Co., cultural certificate.
Twenty-five My Maryland, A. N. Pierson, vote of thanks.
Twenty-five White Killarney, Waban Rose Conservatories, first prize, a volume of art engravings of the world in red morocco.
Twenty-five My Maryland, Myers & Santman, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., vote of thanks.
Twenty-five My Maryland, Robert Simpson, cultural certificate.
Twenty-five Mrs. Jardine, Robert Simpson, cultural certificate.
Twelve American Beauties, Brant-Hentz Flower Co., cultural certificate and special commendation.
Twelve Killarney, twelve Maid and twelve Bride, W. G. Badgley, cultural certificate.
Twenty-five Maid, Valentine Hammond, cultural certificate.
Rose Sinica, Cherokee rose, W. A. Manda, vote of thanks.
South Orange Beauty, W. A. Manda, vote of thanks.
Twenty-five Richmond, A. Farenwald, Hillside, Pa., cultural certificate.
Vase of Killarney, A. Farenwald, cultural certificate.
Kate Moulton, Robert Simpson, vote of thanks.
Twelve Bridesmaid and Bride, Henry Hentz, Jr., cultural certificate.
Mme. Abel Chatenay, Robert Simpson, cultural certificate.

The committee consisted of C. H. Totty, A. R. Kennedy, A. L. Miller, W. F. Sheridan, Robert Simpson and F. H. Traendly.

The president appointed as the transportation committee F. H. Traendly, F. R. Pierson and John Young, to arrange for the club's representation at the Cincinnati convention.

Harry Bunyard spoke in behalf of the National Sweet Pea Association. He desired the club's recognition in acting as the godfather of the new society and helping in its initiative work. The first exhibition is scheduled for June 30 in the club's rooms. Patrick O'Mara, C. H. Totty, W. E. Marshall, W. F. Sheridan, C. B. Weathered and W. A. Manda spoke in favor of the scheme and the club's vases, conveniences and recognition were placed at the new society's disposal by a unanimous vote.

W. H. Elliott's paper on the "Rose Growers' Problems" was greatly appreciated. It is published in full in this issue of the Review. In the discussion Messrs. Stewart, Pierson, Badgley, O'Mara, Lenker, Barnard, Guttman, Nugent and Weathered participated. Mr. Elliott answered many questions, and the experiences of all the rose growers present added much to the evening's enjoyment. It was after 11 o'clock before adjournment. F. R. Pierson said he is building 50,000 square feet this season, that he believes in the big houses, and that he was especially proud of having won the silver medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society with his exhibit of White Killarney, although taking roses to Boston was like taking coals to Newcastle. He commended large houses as economical and said permanency and durability were now the important factors and that with reinforced concrete and steel the houses were now good for 100 years.

H. A. Barnard, of Low & Co., England, made an interesting talk. His travels have amazed him as to rose culture under glass as compared with England and he said a lot of the conceit had been taken out of him. Mr. Elliott told of his 1,340-foot house in New Hampshire, where one of his men forgot his coat and had to walk half a mile to get it again. It is a house covering the ground of fifty or sixty greenhouses of the old style, and he told of the ease and superiority of this style of house, its economy and profit and the cheapness by comparison of heating the enormous enclosure of 80,000 square feet of glass.

Mr. Pierson spoke in favor of hot water heating and the more even distribution of heat thereby. Patrick O'Mara spoke of grafted roses, with reminiscences of early growing by Peter Henderson. A. J. Guttman told of the roses to grow with a view to popular demand and rapid distribution.

J. B. Nugent made a strong plea for union of interests and a great central market in New York near the Pennsylvania terminal, in a building large enough to house profitably all the wholesale plantsmen and cut flower growers of the territory contiguous to New York. He also spoke of the unjust and unfair discrimination of the express companies, whereby New York had lost so much of its shipping business in cut flowers, claiming our facilities the worst in this respect of any city in the country.

Various Notes.

One of the most popular of the Easter roses was the new pink rambler of H. C. Steinhoff, of Hoboken, N. J. John H. Troy, of the Rosary Flower Co., said it was the most rapid selling novelty. It is a beauty and bound to be popular.

An estimate by many retailers of this year's Easter business, compared with 1908, shows an improvement of at least twenty-five per cent.

A. L. Young is quite enthusiastic as to the result of his efforts to establish a plant market at 46 West Twenty-eighth street, next door to Ford Bros.

M. A. Bowe had Arthur Merritt and Mr. Scallon among his Easter forces.

G. Myer, on Madison avenue, had a big overflow store for Easter.

Charles Millang had an extra store for plants, where Mrs. Millang presided and sold out clean.

Great quantities of plants were, as usual, on exhibition at Union Square and at the early plant markets Saturday, April 10, and these were all on their way to gladden the city homes before the sun had risen.

Already the plantsmen are talking Decoration day and planning for its requirements. There seems to be no rest for the busy florist. It is the same old story of labor and anxious thought and sleeplessness every day of the revolving year.

Every morning the Fruit Auction Co. has a sale, and Tuesdays and Fridays Cleary and Elliott do a big business. A visit reveals a remarkable condition in the few florists and the host of strange faces one sees there, crowding the rooms and buying at prices that would make many a wholesaler rejoice.

H. Kenney, the wire man, is building a big factory at Dean street and Rochester avenue, in Brooklyn.

Frank Millang has been ill with pleuro-pneumonia and is still at this writing in grave danger.

Louis Kuhne, who has been with James Weir, Jr., & Son since 1880, has resigned his position and with his wife has moved to Hicksville, L. I., where his sons are in the growing business. Mr. Kuhne is a native of Switzerland. He worked for Charles Zeller in 1873 and was for six years in the Botanical Gardens in Brooklyn.

The sympathy of the trade is extended Thomas H. Jackson, of the Cut Flower Exchange, in the loss of his mother.

Paul Mattly, of Camp Springs, Md., is bringing some grand arbutus to the New York market. He makes his headquarters with N. Schreiner, at 41 West Twenty-eighth street.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

Christatos & Koster have made a lease for a term of years on the four-story building at 717 Madison avenue, near Sixty-fourth street. It is being remodeled for their use.

Lilies From Bermuda.

The quantity of cut lilies imported from Bermuda this Easter was rather greater than usual. There were three boats that arrived at New York in the week before Easter, with the following number of boxes of flowers:

Steamer.	Boxes.
Prince George	85
Trinidad	637
Bermudian	507
Total	1,229

Of these 688 boxes were for a firm of brokers and forwarders that makes a specialty of this business each year, its shipments going far inland, to the public, not to florists.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week we were hoping that there would be a good business in store for us this Easter. Now we are just beginning to realize that we had the greatest Easter business ever experienced in this market. Not only was it the largest, but it was the most satisfactory. From every point that we can view it, the aspect is the same. Never before have we been able to fill all orders so well, with just what the order called for and with good, fresh stock. Of course there are some exceptions to this, but taking the report of the many, we find this to be general. We failed to notice much pickled stock and yet there was almost an unlimited quantity of stock handled here. The cool weather had a good deal to do with this, as it enabled us to hold stock in good condition.

Roses proved to be the only real scarcity and there were almost enough of them. Beauties were the scarcest of the roses, but we were able to get along well without them. Lilies were in good supply and every order was taken care of. Callas never sold so well before. There was not the enormous cut of bulbous flowers we have had in other years, but there were enough and those we did sell were good stock and brought fine prices, and were worth them. Sweet peas were mighty good property and thousands were sold at good prices. Violets had their innings and many thousands were received from the Hudson river violet growers. They sold well, for they were very good. We were well supplied with carnations and they brought a good price and gave satisfaction, as they were fresh and well worth the money.

The plant trade was fully up to the high water mark. A few of our largest retailers, however, report that they noticed a falling off in the demand for plants and that they were glad of it, as the profit to the retailers on plants is small and they would rather sell the same amount in cut flowers, which are so much more easily packed and delivered.

The Jabez Elliott Flower Market did its usual rushing business. The annual Easter crowd was there and the growers were ready for it, with plants and flowers of all kinds and at all prices. Thousands of dollars' worth were disposed of and the general report is a highly favorable one.

The only outdoor flowers in evidence were the southern grown daffodils. Thousands of these were sent to this market and were handled mostly by the produce commission men. They sold them at almost any price and sold every one they received. When they saw that they were going to sell out, they raised the price. Even with this competition, the greenhouse grown daffodils sold out clean and at good prices.

Given so soon after Easter, the above report has to be stated in a very general way, as the majority of the florists have not as yet taken the time to figure out just how much business they have done and what amount of increase over other years there was. Still they are able to judge fairly well by general appearances that there was a decided increase over last year, and all reports, taken together, show that it was the greatest Easter business we have ever had. It looks as if a return to old times is near at hand and that by next fall, at the latest, the florists will again have come into their own.

The Monday following Easter showed stock scarce, and a fairly good demand where but little was expected. Prospects look good for the future. The bright, cool weather we are having will mean stock of good quality and, with Lent a thing of the past, we ought to have good business right along. C. J. OHMER.

OBITUARY.

William A. Reichardt.

William A. Reichardt, of Houston, Tex., and head of the firm of Reichardt & Schulte, wholesale and retail seed dealers, died April 3. Mr. Reichardt was stricken with an attack of pneumonia March 28 and forced to take to his bed, but his condition was not believed to be serious until the day before his death.

Mr. Reichardt, who had been engaged in the seed business in Houston for more than ten years, was well known throughout southern Texas. He was born in Houston June 5, 1870, and had resided there continuously since. His father, who was William A. Reichardt, a pioneer citizen of Harris county, Texas, died three years ago. He is survived by his wife, two little daughters, and several brothers and sisters. Deceased was a member of the Houston Turnverein, the Knights of Columbus, and during the existence of the Houston Light Guards took an active part in that organization. The funeral, April 4, was largely attended.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

On the whole, there never was a bigger or better Easter.

Cuttings of Carnation Beacon are among the scarce articles.

The Rhea Reid rose was given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society at London, England, last month.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., have just issued the most complete and freely illustrated catalogue of orchids so far published in this country.

The week's press notices of the National Council of Horticulture include articles on "Scarlet Sage or Red Salvia," "Easily Grown Vines" and "Pruning Shrubs."

This is an excellent time to buy glass. Even if you do not expect to need it this season, buy and store some, just as a matter of insurance, good speculation, or whatever you wish to call it.

The second part of the transactions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the year 1908 has been issued. It is a pamphlet of 296 pages, devoted to the annual reports and a list of the members of the society.

In England there has been agitation for several years over what they call the daylight saving bill in parliament. It is proposed to get an hour more daylight in summer by moving the clock ahead one hour, the idea being that all business shall proceed on the same hours as before the clock was changed; therefore, everyone would get down to business one hour earlier in the morning and quit an hour earlier at night. The project has the support of a portion of the horticultural trades, but the gardeners see nothing in it. They rise at daylight and quit at dark anyway, and changing the clock will not make any more daylight for them.

A TRAVELER'S NOTES.

A Belgian plantsman, having completed a tour of the trade in the United States and being about to start for home, sends $2.50 to have the Review sent to the firm in Belgium, and writes from Geneva, N. Y.:

Sometimes we are advertising in the florists' papers and as I find out your paper has more subscribers in the eastern states than any other florists' paper, my next advertisements will be in your publication.

KEPT HIM BUSY.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

The ad we had in your paper the last two months certainly kept us what they call "humping," for orders came in every day and they are coming yet. I am certainly more than satisfied. William Ehmann.
Corfu, N. Y., April 12, 1909.

THROW IT AWAY.

At a recent meeting of nurserymen, Herbert E. Chase discussed credits. Said he: "Rather than sell your surplus stock on credit to doubtful parties, burn it. You will make more money, save your ink and postage and be a heap happier."

Too many florists forget all about the credit of the customer when he asks for stock they are anxious to move.

HAMMOND URGES ACTION.

The Review is in receipt of the following telegram from Benj. Hammond, secretary of the S. A. F. committee on tariff:

"The cost of greenhouse glass at present is low. The Payne bill for greenhouse size remains the same. It is to be expected that a combination will be made to bring about much higher prices. The tariff committee of the S. A. F. urges each user of glass to write to his senators and congressmen requesting a reduction of half a cent a pound on common window glass."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Easter brought an enormous volume of business to this market, on the whole at least as great as ever before, both in quantity of stock handled and in the total moneys received. Certainly everyone had all that he possibly could do.

The feature of the market was the reversal of conditions as forecasted by nearly everyone in the market. Where it had been predicted that roses would be abundant and carnations comparatively scarce, it proved that the supply of carnations was plethoric, while roses were on the short side. Beauties proved the only real scarcity, where it had been expected there would be enough to go around. If advance orders had not called for all the Beauties there were in the market, and then some, it would have been possible to have asked a good advance over quoted prices. In other lines supplies generally were adequate. While it was not always possible to pick up just the article wanted, no one went without flowers because flowers could not be had nor because prices were too high; there was something within the reach of every buyer.

The scarcity of Beauties caused a great deal of running around when the time could ill be spared and turned a part of the demand onto other roses. Killarney was the most popular item on the list, but good Maid and Bride sold well and Richmond also cleaned up quickly. The good roses all commanded quoted prices, but the heat wave the first of the week caused a large part of the stock to arrive too open for shipping purposes and this went cheaper. Some belated arrivals Sunday did not find buyers.

It nearly always happens at a holiday that good stock is not overabundant while the shipping orders are being handled, no matter what may be the situation after they have gone out. This was the case with carnations. While they were not scarce at any time, neither were those of first-class shipping grade overabundant April 8 and 9; but the supply was large enough so that prices were a little easy. Saturday's receipts, as not infrequently happens, were far above what had been expected. The result was that the stock not strictly first-class found buyers at only the cheapest prices. The slump in values was particularly bad on Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress, and these two constitute the larger part of the receipts. Pretty fair carnations were sold at $10 per thousand Easter morning.

A fortnight ago so many people said good lilies would be scarce that the early buying was brisk, for prices were easy. Three days before Easter it looked as though the stock was pretty well sold out, and a good many wholesalers looked for

It Pays to Push

For Business in the Spring

This is the season of large supply and fine quality—we never handled better stock than now—and the retailers who push are doing a big business, pleasing their customers and making a nice profit.

No need to worry about stock; just get the orders and call on us for all you need.

The way to do business is to have something to sell. Make a showing. Prices are down.

Carnations

Our carnations average of better quality than any other large lot on this market—bear it in mind. Also, don't forget that it isn't what you pay but what you get, that counts. Can supply the largest orders.

Beauties

Our annual spring crop of Beauties is just coming on. These Beauties are famous. Use our Beauties, they will make friends for you.

Roses

Maid, Bride, Killarney and Richmond are all fine and our supply large. Order these and you will be back for larger lots.

Kaiserin

We have a splendid crop of Kaiserin roses each summer. These are just coming on and will be welcomed by many buyers. Try some.

Sweet Peas

The sweet peas are at the height of their season—finer than ever—and this market has never seen such peas as we have handled the last two months—or so many of them. The fancy peas make a great hit. All colors. Thousands of them. We do a big shipping business on these.

To be sure you get them in best condition, peas are picked specially for all orders on file at noon for evening shipment.

Lilies

Fancy, long lilies for your spring wedding decorations.

Greens

Always can supply all kinds of fancy greens.

Fancy Ferns

We have the best Ferns in this market. Try them and confirm what other buyers say.

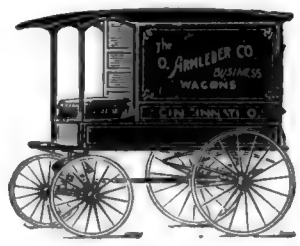
an advance in price. It proved, however, that while the stock was pretty well cleaned up, the demand also was pretty well satisfied, so there was no special push for lilies the last three days; prices stiffened, but did not go over advance quotations on best grade. Probably lilies were never more satisfactorily handled.

The supply of sweet peas proved to be a surprise; there were many more than had been expected. The quality of a large part of the stock was superb and they were used in great quantities, instead of violets, but the short-stemmed peas went with the violets to the street fakers. It was in the violet department that the greatest trouble came, outside the slump in carnations. The best violets were shipped out of town on advance orders at about $7.50 per thousand, and of the balance a large part were so poor the leading retailers would not touch them, using long-stemmed sweet peas instead. The result was a big proportion of the receipts went to the Greeks on the street corners at about $1 per thousand, and there were scores of boxes of from 2,000 to 3,000 each that were so poor even the Greeks would not buy them. The wholesalers could not help themselves. The home grown singles did rather better, but violet prices did not average as well as they were averaging before Easter.

There was a good run on callas for Palm Sunday, but for Easter no one wanted them. Large numbers were left unsold. Daffodils and jonquils were so abundant that not all were cleaned out, even though the street salesmen did an enormous trade. Hyacinths were a possible exception to the general experience with bulb stock. Not many were grown this year, and still some houses had more than they could sell Saturday night.



On the whole the Easter business was probably as satisfactory as anyone could expect. Where the business suddenly becomes four times as great as usual, it is inevitable that some things will go awry. So large a volume, with everyone working to the limit, cannot be handled without mistakes. The shipping was exceptionally heavy. The express companies had to hire drays from the streets to help the regular wagons take the flower shipments to the depots. Pick-ups ceased at six o'clock and the wholesalers had to hire wagons to get the late orders to the depots.

The weather for the first two days of the week was like midsummer, and the rest of the week was cold and dark. It snowed all day April 9. Some complained that the change cost them much money in reducing the Beauty crops, but others say it saved the market being glutted with soft flowers. The stock traveled well. Few complaints have been received.

The retailers all had big business. There was a large supply of plants and they all sold more plant arrangements than ever before. Sunday was not a specially good day, because of high winds, but most of the stores were open all day Sunday and did an active trade. There are not many complaints, but quite a number overbought on lilies and there was enough stock left in retailers' hands so they bought hardly anything Monday.

This week opened with a quiet market, with good supplies in all lines and prices down, except on lilies. Beauties are coming in heavily now. Fancy ferns are up to $3 in several houses.

White carnations again were good property by the beginning of this week.

Valley has shortened up so it is selling at better average prices. But everything else is plentiful and cheap.

Various Notes.

The Fleischman Floral Co. had in the Tribune April 9 the largest advertisement any retail florist has thus far published in a Chicago morning paper. It was four columns wide and twelve inches deep. George Wienhoeber said they expected to sell out on plant arrangements that day, making deliveries Saturday and leaving only the cut flowers to be handled Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning. About all the leading retailers find Friday the big plant day and aim to make their deliveries of plants on Saturday. Years ago the Easter business extended over the greater part of the week, but now it is practically all done in two days, although the E. Wienhoeber Co. was pleasantly surprised by a big volume of plant sales Thursday this year.

Leonard Kill says that he believes the shortage of white carnations in this market in the last few weeks has been largely due to the fact that so many growers have little else than White Perfection on their benches. The variety was fine in the fall, but has not been blooming much since Christmas.

The A. L. Randall Co. had chrysanthemums, the small varieties, April 13, both yellow and pink.

E. C. Amling says that his sales for April 10 were the greatest of any Saturday in the history of his business.

Bassett & Washburn say that while some people think Easter calls for white flowers, they had nothing that was in better demand than the O. P. Bassett carnation, red.

C. M. Dickinson went home from Hunt's Sunday afternoon pretty well tired out with the Easter rush, but spent all of Sunday evening assisting in putting out a fire that made four families homeless near his residence in Park Ridge.

One of the Greeks holds up both hands and swears that he sold 125,000 violets on State street within twenty-four hours and that he paid no more than 5 cents a bunch for them.

Vaughan & Sperry note a decided increase in the cash sales, not only for Easter, but regularly.

Frank Oechslin and Sam Pearce sold out clean on Easter plants. Azaleas were in especially good demand.

Percy Jones says one of his growers, with 40,000 feet of glass, cut 25,000 carnations Easter week, which doesn't look like carnations being off crop. A good many were Rose-pink Enchantress.

E. E. Pieser had his eyes sufficiently well fixed on the future so that he was watching last week's weather closely. It was too cold to suit him, for he feared the effect on the early peonies in southern Illinois. Kennicott Bros. Co. is figuring on the biggest Decoration day ever known, and both Decoration day and the peony are steadily increasing in importance in this market. The peonies are just about normal. May 12 is the date the southern Illinois stock should begin Andrew McAdams has returned from Florida, where he spent the winter, and is in excellent health.

Iralson, on Forty-third street, is planning to sell out and go west.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett returned April 13 from their outing at Hot Springs, Va.

L. Coatsworth is at home from a month's sojourn at Mudlavia, Ind. He still feels his rheumatism, but is much better than when he went away.

One of the visitors early this week was Andrew Peterson, of Hoopeston, Ill.

Peter Reinberg fared well in the organization of the new council April 12. He is chairman of the committee on streets and alleys north and a member of the finance committee.

Melville G. Holding, who is known to the most of the florists in this market, and the two men who succeeded him as city oil inspectors, have begun litigation in the United States court to recover the fees turned into the city treasury during their terms of office. The amount is about $60,000, which the ex-inspectors claim is due them through a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Weiland & Risch say Killarney is now in its spring crop.

O. W. Frese, at Poehlmann's, says it looks as though Beauties will be abundant as soon as we get a few days' spring sun.

Wietor Bros. began throwing out Beauty houses April 12, to replant.

The cold and rain gave the seed and plant department at Winterson's a chance to catch its breath.

C. W. McKellar says cattleyas are in good demand.

Zech & Mann had the two largest days' sales in their history two days in succession last week.

There has been frequent comment on the havoc that would ensue if there should be a real hail storm in the greenhouse section north of town. The district has been singularly immune, but got a taste of hail last week, nearly everyone losing some glass by hail or high wind, but repairs were quickly made.

Frank Garland reports a good Easter, disposing of nearly 10,000 lilies.

Thomas Best, who was for a time with Habermehl's Sons in Philadelphia, and later with the Alpha Floral Co. on Wabash avenue, is again in charge of Muir's Forty-seventh street store, where he was employed before he went to Philadelphia.

Mrs. W. J. Smyth is in California, called by the illness and death of one of her parents.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is putting in three houses of the Garland sectional concrete bench for trial with other styles of construction.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. has a customer named Miss Hazel Tulip, who may be supposed to have chosen bulb stock for Easter.

Miss Elsie Schnapp, daughter of Julius Schnapp, is now with the Alpha Floral Co., at Adams and Wabash.

ing summer. He expresses himself as fairly well pleased with the results of his investment in this line, but says it is desirable to have varieties that will give a cut all the year around. It is for this purpose he will buy more stock.

The Belmont Floral Co. has a neat store at 1689 North Clark street and had a good Easter trade.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The annual Easter rush is over and away with, and the florist is sitting down to count his profits in the lull that follows. Trade people in this city wear a smile of satisfaction as to the results this season, as there was every advantage, in the way of a plentiful assortment of stock and good demand, to make the Easter trade a profitable season. The weather preceding Easter Sunday was cold and threatened to dampen the prospects, but the day itself dawned warm and springlike. Cut flowers of all varieties were in abundance, including lilies, roses, carnations, bulb stock, etc. Of course, there are never enough violets to go around. The demand for Easter lilies was not quite what it was in former years. Azaleas and made up baskets seemed to have the preference. Every grocery and drug store became a mushroom florist's shop during the two days preceding Easter, some of them even going into church decoration. Palms were at a premium, and good decorative green plants brought good prices for rental over the day.

Various Notes.

O. C. Swanson found trade excellent this year, selling out every flower and plant. The stock of the latter this year was remarkably good, and perfect plants went at tip-top prices the whole week.

Rice Bros. sold out clean. They found stock plentiful and demand good.

Souden & Desmond express themselves as delighted with their first Easter at the new location. Out of the immense stock of plants on hand last week, there were few left to tell the tale at the end of the week. Cut flowers were equally good.

R. A. Latham had the "biggest ever" this year. Sales exceeded last year by one-half, and he found the temporary store on Nicollet avenue doing business away beyond his expectations.

Miss Whitted had an immense sale of violets, both double and single, and though she bought many thousands, Saturday night found them all cleaned out and many orders had to be turned down. Bulb stock, small baskets and azaleas went well here, too.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. cleaned out everything in bloom on the place two days before Easter. Cut flowers were plentiful. Every violet was cut Saturday, though there had been many thousands in bloom in the big houses the first of the week. M. E. M.

LENOX, MASS.

Rose and Carnation Exhibition.

The annual rose and carnation show of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the society's rooms Saturday, April 3, and was a decided success. President A. Jenkins was in the chair. This meeting was one of the largest and most interesting the society has had for some time. The members turned out in full force and were amply rewarded for their trouble. Seldom, if ever, has there been seen such a magnificent display of roses and carnations in Berkshire county, and it reflects great credit upon the gardening fraternity of Lenox and its vicinity.

Among the exhibits upon which special praise was bestowed, was a magnificent vase of Rose White Killarney, Waban variety, exhibited by F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. The flowers staged were in perfect condition, which speaks well for its shipping qualities, and it was awarded a first-class certificate, the society's highest award.

Another exhibit of sterling merit was a vase of fifty flowers of Carnation Bay State, exhibited by the introducer, A. Roper, Tewksbury, Mass. This seems to combine all the desirable qualities of a first-class variety, the flowers being large, from three and one-half to four inches, and carried on stems strong enough to support them perfectly. As a variegated variety it is so much ahead of any other as to place it in a class by itself, and it was unanimously awarded a first-class certificate.

The standard varieties were shown by exhibitors in first-class shape. Beacon took the honors as a scarlet, while Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress, Winsor, Afterglow and White Perfection were equally well shown in their respective classes.

The following is a list of the principal awards:

A. J. Loveless, first for 24 Enchantress, 24 Winsor and 12 Rose-pink Enchantress; second for 24 Beacon.

A. H. Wingett, first for 24 Beacon, 12 White Perfection, 12 Enchantress and 12 Afterglow.

S. Carlquist, first for 12 Beacon; second for 12 Enchantress and 12 White Enchantress.

D. Dunn, second for 12 Beacon and 12 Rose-pink Enchantress.

A. McConnachie, third for 12 Enchantress and 12 White Enchantress.

F. Heeremans, first for a mixed vase of 50; also a diploma for a fine vase of Gardenia Veitchii.

The judges were E. Jenkins, W. Jack, R. Speirs and G. Breed.

Sidney Whitney was unanimously elected an active member of the society.

E. Jenkins gave an interesting description of the recent Boston spring show, which he spoke of as the best exhibition he had ever seen anywhere, laying particular stress on the beautiful Japanese garden, arranged by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and complimenting that firm on its enterprise.

After the business of the evening was disposed of, refreshments were served. When cigars had been passed, the evening was enlivened with songs and recitations by several of the members present. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close as the clock struck twelve.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Easter Market.

The volume of business in Easter plants was larger than ever before in the history of this city. The quantity of plants shipped to outside cities and towns and distributed throughout the city was something phenomenal. The demand was so large that there was practically nothing worth having left in the houses of the growers on Easter morning, and the street, which is the outlet for much unsold stock, was not nearly so well supplied as usual. The retailers in a large majority of cases sold all the plants they purchased. Only a few odds and ends could be found on Easter Monday in most of the retail shops. The weather conditions prevailing this year were most unusual. The early part of last week was so warm that the buds opened rapidly, and the most delicate blooming plants required no protection in transit through the city. A change came on Thursday, and both Friday and Saturday were so cold that thick ice formed, an unusual occurrence at Easter. This gave the retailers additional work in protecting their plants in delivery, and quite demoralized the stock of the street dealers.

The quantity of lilies grown for this market this season was so much smaller than that of a year ago that it did not require an ordinarily good demand to take them all. Prices stiffened considerably, the prevailing market figure being 12 cents for each bud and flower, although many of the finest lots of tall, well-flowered lilies were sold at 10 cents, due to the growers not realizing market conditions. The price paid by department stores in hundred and occasionally thousand lots was about 9 cents per bud and flower. The growers claim that the department stores are not so critical as the florists. Azaleas maintained their popularity. They are considered first by many good judges. The sizes wholesaling at from $1 to $3 each went quickly. The larger sizes were not always so much in demand. Mme. Vander Cruyssen continued favorite, with Vervæneana second, and John Llewellyn pushing up to third place. Spiræa came next in popularity, the plants being better done in many cases than ever before. Some growers report that many more could have been sold. The consensus of opinion is that the supply was not equal to the demand. Gladstone was favorite. The pink variety Queen Alexandra had some admirers. Hydrangeas were in excellent shape this season, dwarf, bushy, well budded, as a rule. Otaksa had the field almost to itself. William K. Harris has the Alice Blue down fine. Most of the growers produce a preponderance of soft pink, with fortunately only a few dull purple. Rhododendrons were finer than ever before this season, the plants being remarkably well budded. Their quality induced the buyers to purchase freely, a large supply being marketed. There were a few left over.

The features of the rose plants were the inroads made by the Wichuraiana hybrids into popular favor, and the advent of Richmond as an Easter plant. The Robert Craig Co. did Richmond extremely well in 6-inch pots, the plants being well flowered. The flowers proved lasting and their brilliant color was much admired. The feature of the Wichuraiana hybrids was Hiawatha, with its beautiful scarlet and white clusters. Newport Fairy, Lady Gay, Tausendschon, and an occasional Dorothy Perkins, were the others on the list. Crimson Rambler maintained its popularity in many quarters.

Queen Alexandra daisy and its pink sport were popular, most of the dealers taking a few for variety's sake. Duetzia gracilis, better grown here than anywhere else in the country, it is said, was superb, and went quickly. W. K. Harris' method of potting in August plants from the field enabled him to offer a pot-grown plant at Easter, combined with all the luxuriance of field-grown stock. Genistas sold out cleanly, aided perhaps by the fact that many growers have dropped them. The 4-inch size of genista was popular for basket work. With it pots of valley and of the azaleas of the Charles Encke type were freely used. The Robert Craig Co. forced something like 10,000 valley for pot sale and found them a most satisfactory crop, one that can be harvested in twenty-four days. The quantity of hyacinths, daffodils and tulips forced in pots and frames was probably hardly equal to former years, although it is a little difficult to determine this point, as the larger growers have generally dropped them, and many of the consumers force their own. There were a few good lilacs, and some of the finest Baby Ramblers (W. K. Harris) this market has ever seen.

The rising eastern market has grown so large that it is impossible to get a unanimous opinion from all the wholesale cut flower centers. The majority believe that the volume of business was larger this Easter than ever before; the minority think that it was not. The shipping demand was unquestionably large, and where flowers were in prime condition excellent prices were realized. The local demand was large, but decidedly erratic. In other words, it could not be depended upon. The prices paid in the local market were also good when stock was of high grade. The weather did all in its power to help the cut flower market, excepting early in the week, when a spell of almost summer heat prevailed for nearly two days. The three days following, those immediately preceding Easter, put life into the flowers, and incidentally shortened production, which was probably an advantage, all things considered. Cut lilies advanced to 15 cents for really select stock, which was scarce; but there were plenty of the ordinary grades at from 10 to 12½ cents. Beauties were firm at $6, $7.50 being realized for a few extra select. The supply of Beauties was not large. Mrs. Jardine came next, at 25 cents. The finest Killarney brought 20 cents, Bride and Bridesmaid 12 cents and occasionally 15 cents, Kaiserin 10 to 12 cents, Richmond 15 to 20 cents. These prices were of course only for the best stock. Curiously enough colored varieties of roses were much more in demand than the whites. The reverse was claimed to be the case in some quarters in carnations; the red were centainly not as active as white, though pink was nearly so. The price for fancy carnations was 4 to 6 cents.

Sweet peas were in larger supply than this market has ever seen them. They were received and sold frequently in thousand lots, quite unusual at Easter; $10 per thousand was the figure for the best. There is a wide discrepancy in the reports on violets, a discrepancy probably due as much to the quality of the stock as to inequality in demand. The best brought $1.25, occasionally $1.50 a hundred, ordinary from $6 to $10 a thousand. The quantity sold was large. Valley seemed in better demand even than usual at Easter. The supply was rather smaller and there were some excellent orders on the wholesalers' books. Added to this, some lots of valley came in too ripe, and had to be sacrificed to sell them at all. Callas sold well, even small flowers bringing $2 per dozen. Cattleyas were extremely scarce. The price, which was advanced from $6 to $7.50 a dozen a week before Easter, might as readily have been made $9, a good judge remarked. Gardenias were not overplentiful, $3 to $5 a dozen being obtained for the best. The range of quality was marked in gardenias, poorer grades bringing little.

Southern daffodils pushed up from $7.50 to $10 per thousand, with light receipts. The northern grown stock was in excellent supply and of fine quality, but not appreciated. Tulips sold fairly well, the white varieties going best. Pretty much all greens brought value when received early and in good condition.

Receipts of cut flowers were light early this week. There was a corresponding falling off in demand, as usual immediately after a holiday. Prices have Easter With the Shops.

A representative of the most progressive florists' paper called on some of the principal retailers in different sections of the city. They included H. H. Battles, William Berger, George Craig, Robert Crawford, Jr., Fred Ehret, Charles Henry Fox, J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Robert Kift, Pennock Bros., and the Poryzees Flower Shop. The general opinion was that Easter business had been larger than ever before. Nearly all had sold practically everything in the plant line. A few of the features were the directoire baskets of Charles Henry Fox, which he especially designed, and filled for his most fastidious customers; the Louis XVI baskets of Pennock Bros., tastefully filled with plants not often seen in this market, among them Hiawatha, beautiful in its varicolored blooms, and the English hawthorn, superbly dressed and sensibly set in pans by Robert Crawford, Jr. John P. Habermehl spoke of a most satisfactory business, with the weddings and decorations of this week carrying off the few plants left over from Easter. Mr. Habermehl commented on the need for more gardenias. Other features were the demand for moderate-sized baskets inexpensively filled, and a tendency for individuals to send plants to the churches, instead of the whole order being placed by a committee.

The Street is Surprised.

Alfred and George Burton have been recognized as leading growers of American Beauty roses in this market for some years, the older brother being an important shipper to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., the younger brother an equally important source of supply to the Leo Niessen Co. Both brothers have practically their entire places in American Beauties, the older having a house of Liberties, the younger a house of Golden Gates for variety's sake. Imagine, then, the surprise on the street when it became known this week that a carload of orchids had been purchased in New York by the brothers; that George Burton's new house, mentioned in these columns a few weeks ago, is intended expressly for cattleyas! Whether Alfred Burton will grow his cattleyas in one of his old houses or in one of the new ones is not known. This move on the part of the best Beauty growers in this section is considered significant as showing their confidence and that of their wholesalers in the future of the cattleya market.

$1,000 worth of plants on the rialto last week. Mr. Schaeffer is an old hand. He has been selling plants at Easter for thirty years. Experience taught him that a canvas covering might be a good thing. He erected this and made it pretty nearly airtight on Friday night, marketing his plants on Saturday in a condition that was fine indeed when compared with that of his competitors, whose stock had not been protected.

Easter Trade.

While trade previous to Easter week was most satisfactory, it was nothing in comparison with last week's business. Our local tradesmen, in general, give a most glowing report. Prices held up remarkably well, and everything resembling a flower found a customer. There is no reason to question but what the Easter trade of this season was in every respect a marked improvement over that of 1908.

Though there was an abundance of stock, there was not enough to supply the demand. These conditions were most noticeable with the Easter lilies, and early Saturday afternoon it was impossible for a customer to find a pot lily on the market. Other varieties of pot plants were more numerous, but all sold well. The demand for roses, carnations, lilies and all cut flowers surpassed all expectation. So everything in general was most satisfactory, and for the next few weeks everybody will be busy collecting his Easter bills, until the next busy season appears, that of Decoration day.

The weather during Easter week was not what a florist would wish for, as high winds and a frosty atmosphere prevailed, making it bad for those who sold their products in the outside market, and also for plant delivery. During the Saturday morning market a great many plants were not salable, on account of being out in the open; consequently they froze. This made it hard on the outside market man, but good for the retail man in his store.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. reports that Easter trade this year was the best it has ever been during the seven years they have been in business. Their roses were in crop in good season and were first-class stock; so, also, were the carnations. They also made some large shipments of lilies, their output for Easter being 50,000 lilies. Many people, in and out of the trade, visited their plant, among whom were Henry Ehrhard, Sidney, O.; Elson Helwig, Marion, O.; E. J. Gould, London, O.; C. O'Brien, Greenville, O., and L. A. Thomas and his son, Troy, O.

"Everything went well and we have no complaint to offer," says the Heiss Co.

H. H. Ritter reports this Easter the biggest one he ever had. Cut flowers, hampers, plants and everything sold well. He also has a busy week ahead of him, with several large decorations.

"We sold everything we could get hold of," is the Easter report of the Advance Floral Co.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs was more than satisfied with the results that Easter brought.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young has a smile of complete satisfaction on her face, simply because Easter trade was the "best ever."

M. & L. Johnson report their Easter business far better than they had anticipated.

W. C. Hood, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor at the home of George Bartholomew on Easter Sunday.

Henry Miene spent a few days of last week in Chicago, where he attended the wedding of his brother, William Miene, of Richmond, Ind.

Not only was Warren G. Matthews a busy man during the Easter week, but he still continues to be so busy that he has

It is reported that the orchards throughout this section of the country are in fine condition, and all indications point to good fruit crops.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the establishment of John F. Young, on East Fifth street, Monday evening, April 5. Business matters were discussed, after which Horace Frank was called on to give an account of his trip to Washington, during the inauguration. Mr. Frank's talk was very interesting and was enjoyed by all. George Bartholomew read a paper on "The Cultivation of Easter Lilies." R. A. B.

OTTAWA, CAN.—Graham Bros. have purchased some property, with a frontage of sixty-six feet, at 300 to 306 Sparks street, paying for it about $15,000. They will tear down the buildings now on the ground and will erect in their place a large, modern seed storehouse.

DAVENPORT, IA.—The heavy hail which fell Monday evening, April 6, broke a great deal of glass in this vicinity. It is reported that all the florists of this city and of Rock Island suffered damage from the storm, but the heaviest loser was the Bills Floral Co., at whose houses about 2,000 lights were broken.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Henry Smith was planning to build a greenhouse at the corner of Park and Barclay streets, when the Fountain Street Baptist church indicated a desire to buy the property and offered a price that looked good.

Had this greenhouse been built it would have been one of the show places in town, of modern conservatory architecture. It would have been advantageously located for a show place, facing Fulton street park and with Ryerson library on the opposite corner. Mr. Smith has given up the plan of having a downtown greenhouse for the present, but should a desirable site be secured he may some day revive the idea.

CALUMET, MICH.

The Lakeside Floral Co., with head offices in Houghton, is about to make extensive alterations in its Calumet plant, chief among which will be the erection of a modern greenhouse, to replace its present house on North Fifth street. The greenhouse occupied by the Lakeside people since the company was organized to take over the Lutey stores, is entirely too small for the needs of the concern, and the new building is a necessity. A portion of the old greenhouse has been torn down and work on the new structure will be commenced soon, in order that it may be completed and ready for use before next fall. The Calumet store of the Lakeside company is the largest and best equipped flower store in this section, and it is planned to make it even more attractive. Miss Lucy Symons, of Houghton, for several years in charge of the store, has returned to Calumet and is once more in charge.

The main greenhouse plant is at Chassell. A. W. York is the manager for the company.

New Winter-Flowering Begonia, "President Taft"

Awarded Certificate of Merit by Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club; Newport, R. I. Horticultural Society; New York Florists' and Gardeners' Club.

This beautiful winter-flowering Begonia originated in our Nurseries about two years ago. It is stronger, sturdier, and more beautiful than any of its predecessors. In color it is similar to Begonia "Agatha." It is free and continuous flowering from November to April, each flower the size of a silver dollar.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE Aldrich tariff bill is brim full of interest for seedsmen. Turn to page 38.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that expected shortages of many of the biennial seed crops are heralded from the principal sources of supply, many seedsmen are offering surplus stocks of these at close to contract prices.

GROWERS are finding it hard to get out enough cucumber seed. The farmers are asking more than the growers feel they can pay. It is thought that a general advance in the price of this article must be secured from those who place advance orders, or else such orders will have to be refused and the prospective purchasers pushed off until the crop is made before orders can be taken.

GENERAL dissatisfaction seems to be one feature of the week. No one is satisfied with the weather, the free distribution of seeds by the government, the way the seed tariff is going to be adjusted, or the quantity of money that is coming over the counters. It is not likely that this condition will last, however, so preparations for a good seedsmen's convention in June may be pushed along as usual.

IT is stated in a dispatch from Hollister, Cal., that Charles P. Braslan, of San Jose, has commenced an action in the Superior Court of San Francisco against A. J. Pieters, Hattie M. Pieters, George W. Jean, A. J. Pieters Seed Co., W. H. Metson, Edgar T. Zook, Rudolph Herold, Jr., et al., asking for an accounting and the appointment of a receiver. Judge Van Nostrand will hear the argument April 23 why a receiver should not be appointed.

THE wholesalers report good business, although trade is curtailed somewhat by the general unfavorable conditions of weather. In common with the general mail order seed house, the wholesalers have the whole country to look to for trade; consequently local conditions do not affect this trade to any great extent. When the season is on there is a demand somewhere for what they have to offer. The season has been good from their standpoint and it ought to show good all around by the time all returns are in.

G. S. CREGO will grow his aster seed at McMinnville, Ore., not far from Portland, this season.

THE weather for almost the whole of last week has been unfavorable for the seedsmen doing a counter trade. In the west it has been much too cold and wet.

GRASS seed goes out regardless of the weather, and from the volume of business in this branch of the trade it looks as though all of the golf grounds, tennis courts and lawns everywhere are needing a great amount of renovation.

VERY cold weather is reported from the pea growing section of Wisconsin. The growers, however, have all the acreage they need and the farmers feel that the weather will come around all right in time enough to get the seed in. Early planting best suits all concerned, but if not too late things usually come out all right.

AT Chicago unfavorable weather has shut off the sowing of seed for onion sets. In some sections goodly bits of land were sown before the turn of the weather, but reports have it that not more than a fourth of the acreage has had anything done to it as yet. Experience has shown that early April is the best time to sow for sets in the Chicago vicinity; any time during April will answer, however, but after May 1 it soon gets too late to sow and have a satisfactory crop. For this reason the growers are anxious to have the weather come right, so that all seeding may be finished in April.

THE bean growers are on a hustle to get out enough acreage before the planting season comes around. They find it hard to get the farmers interested.

THE government crop report puts the condition of the winter wheat crop April 1 as 82.2, as against 91.3 April 1, 1908, and a ten-year average of 86.6.

THERE are only a few hundred bushels of onion sets left, according to reports from the dealers, and the demand keeps up steadily. The end of the season is likely to see prices higher than last year.

MARKE GARDENERS are complaining that their hotbed plants are pushing along too fast for the outside weather conditions. This is a serious thing from their standpoint, as it is next to impossible to hold the plants back, and overlarge plants never make as good a crop for them as do the stocky kind.

D. H. GILBERT, Monticello, Fla., is erecting a two-story brick building, 50x 100 feet, in addition to his present warehouse, to store and reclean the large quantity of watermelon seeds which he expects to harvest this year, having 1,200 acres planted to watermelons of the different varieties, which under ordinary conditions will produce 125,000 to 150,000 pounds. Most of this is under contract to supply the wholesale merchants.

THE ALDRICH BILL.

Specific Duties Provided For.

The Aldrich bill, a substitute for the Payne bill passed by the House last week, was introduced in the Senate April 12. It gives the seed trade specific duties, but they are in many cases materially higher than the duties now in force, and higher than the schedule as recommended by the tariff committee of the American Seed Trade Association.

Here is the Aldrich bill. Matter omitted from the Payne bill as passed by the House is inclosed in parentheses ( ). Amendments to the Payne bill as passed by the House are printed in CAPITAL LETTERS:

Section 1—Dutiable.

245. Beans, 45 cents per bushel of sixty pounds.

258. Seed peas, 40 cents per bushel of sixty pounds.

259. Orchids, palms, dracænas, crotons and azaleas, tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, lilies, lilies of the valley, and all other bulbs, bulbous roots, or corms, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, and natural flowers of all kinds, preserved or fresh, suitable

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Easter business was much better in the plant line than last year and I should judge from reports that the increase in the sale of plants should run about fifty per cent with the west end florists, being especially good with those who have show houses and who offered a great stock. In the downtown district the store men who handled principally cut flowers say that their business was large and ran about the same as last year. The florists north and south are also well pleased, and everything sold well. The trade was also fortunate in having good weather for deliveries. The demand for lilies was great and next came azaleas and hydrangeas, followed by tulips, Dutch hyacinths and cinerarias.

The stock at the wholesale houses was plentiful, as was expected, with prices not so high as last year. All the wholesale houses put in busy days Saturday and Sunday morning, filling orders for the local and shipping trade. There were quantities of cut lily blooms that were not of good quality owing to bad packing; $12 per hundred was the average price. First-class roses and carnations sold well at good prices. Some of the consignors of carnations sent in pickled stock, which would have brought good prices early in the week, when everybody was looking for white carnations, but which were finally consigned to the dump pile. The fancy carnations brought $5 per hundred.

The market was fairly well supplied with roses. Extra long, fancy Beauties were scarce and sold at $5 per dozen. Medium and shorts were plentiful. There was a nice supply of Bride, Maid, Carnot, Richmond and Ivory, with the top price at $8 per hundred.

Violets were of poor quality, but plenty of them, most of them being California. Everything seasonable in the bulb line was more than enough and sold at reason-

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club should have held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, April 8, but not enough showed up to make a quorum, owing to preparations for the Easter rush. The next meeting of the club will not take place before the second Thursday in May.

The heavy rain and hail of Tuesday, April 6, did quite a lot of damage to glass about the city. The heaviest loss fell on those in the northern part of the city. John Nyflot, at 7311 Florissant avenue, had a complete loss. Dan Schloser, John Shields, A. Brix, Koenig Floral Co. and Fred Meinhardt each had some loss. In the northwest Richard Frow, Alex. Johnson, A. Jablonsky, J. W. Dunford, John Steidle and J. Hecht all suffered some broken glass.

Henry Ostertag was defeated as a member of the house of delegates at the election April 6. He made a good run, but says there were too many republicans in his ward. He has one consolation, that he was not the only democrat defeated; the whole democratic ticket went down.

Miss Estelle Bough, who recently opened a retail flower store at 217 Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, reports her Easter trade beyond expectations.

Monday evening, April 12, the Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting in the Central High School building. The feature of the evening was a lecture profusely illustrated with lantern slides, by L. P. Jensen, gardener for the Busch estate, on "Natural Effects in the Planting of Modern Parks and Private Places." The subject was presented in a manner that appealed to all that were interested in the planting of either home grounds or public institutions. The meeting was largely attended.

George E. Kessler, landscape architect, who laid out the Kansas City park system and the Louisiana Purchase Exposition grounds, has been engaged by the city park department at a salary of $500 per month to lay out six new parks, improve Kingshighway and restore Forest park, that part used by the world's fair. The appointment was made by Park Commissioner Philip Scanlan, which was approved by Mayor Wells. The park fund now amounts to $85,000.

The forestry committee of the St. Louis district observed Arbor day, April 9, by planting about 1,500 trees in the different parts of the city. J. J. B.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Last week was the most unsatisfactory satisfactory week one ever saw. Starting out with a balmy day, it turned to cold and rain, developing into freezing and snow, until Wednesday, April 7, which everyone will remember as the day of the big wind.

My grandfather was an Irishman and I often heard him speak of Kelly's wonderful calf and John Murphy's thirteenth boy and McSwigen's big litter of pigs that were all born the year of the big wind in Ireland, and so this Easter will be known in this section as Easter in the year of "the big wind." The wind blew sixty-eight miles an hour for eight hours, doing all kinds of damage. H. L. Blind & Bros. lost the big plate glass window in the front of their Liberty street store, and their palm and fern houses were partly blown in, giving them much trouble to repair in time to keep from the freezing weather that followed.

At Charles Koenig's, of Millvale, all the glass was taken out of the two new houses which he finished last fall. These houses were filled with lilies for Easter, part of which were badly cut with broken glass, making quite a loss. The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. lost about six boxes of glass, but all the oil derricks on the place were blown down, which will make their loss considerable. Almost every greenhouse lost more or less glass.

This brought us up to the middle of the week, with the market people standing looking at their plants freezing, and no customers. Thursday was raw and cold and Friday was the same, with snow. Heavy snow continued until midnight, but Saturday was fair and it seemed as if both the customers and the florists were just waiting to "get to it," which they did. There were never half so many good plants seen here, but they disappeared. The cut flower market, like the plant market, was most discouraging up to the last day, but, like the plants, they were cleaned up. This market had just enough lilies and Beauties to get through. Roses of all kinds, as well as carnations, were plentiful, no orders being refused at any of the wholesale houses, and better stock was never offered. Prices were not raised as usual, and the wisdom of this was proven by the way things cleaned up. Nearly all the retailers advertised "No increase in prices," and people with small means were not afraid to ask the price of flowers. Evidently the way the trade are pushing the plants at holiday time is going to have the effect of keeping the cut flower market down to reasonable prices.

Violets were poor up until Saturday, when the stock showed some improvement, but Easter violets are never quite satisfactory. However, all in all, it was a good Easter, everyone reporting having sold up, and the Easter of the "big wind" goes down in history as having been all right.

Various Notes.

The firm of Breitenstein & Flemm has dissolved, William Flemm retiring on account of ill health. He has been unable to take an active interest for several years. The style of the new firm will be Breitenstein Co. A charter has been applied for.

Ollie Beeb, manager for Chas. Eisner, is seriously ill with blood poisoning, caused by rose thorns. His speedy recovery is hoped for.

Schenley Conservatories are a sight for the gods, but the people are looking at them, thousands flocking there every day.

The Phipps Conservatories, in the North Side park, have the finest display ever seen there and that is saying something to the credit of James Moore, who invites his friends to call, and promises it will look as good for another week.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. made its record breaking cut of roses and carnations last Friday, and Fred Burki is wearing one of those satisfied smiles that look like a man making easy money.

The market people were up against it last week, as it was freezing most of the time and they could not show plants to advantage. Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

Although it is yet too early to give an exact recapitulation of Easter trade here from a retailer's standpoint, the reports from the growers and wholesalers are at hand. The most noticeable point with regard to the stock on hand is the great scarcity of flowering pot plants. Apparently the growers did not have much success with azaleas or rhododendrons, or in many cases with lilies, as these articles are certainly not in great evidence. The growers on whom the store men relied in the case of azaleas seem to be all in a condition of "off-crop," and in lilies they were either too late or too early. Some of the growers from Alameda county, however, who sell the greatest part of their product in San Francisco, had better success and there are apparently enough lilies, both plants and cut stems, to fill requirements. Spiræa Japonica, cinerarias, wistarias, rambler roses and primulas have been in good demand, with really not sufficient stock to meet requirements. A shortage has also been discovered in ferns of the larger sizes, particularly the better varieties of nephrolepis, and these have been snapped up wherever offered. Cut lilies have sold at from $2 to $4 per dozen stems, and pot-grown stock at twice those prices.

Roses are in fair supply and carnations are plentiful enough to suit everyone.

Tulips, especially of the lighter colors, both cut and made up in baskets and hampers, have sold well. Daffodils and narcissi are practically over for the season, although a few batches of Empress and Emperor are offered. Violets are commencing to show the results of the lateness of their season and a couple of weeks more will find that they have disappeared from the scene. Sweet peas are getting more plentiful and some sorts of wild flowers find ready sale.

Lilac, which has been extra good this season, has filled in nicely for the last few weeks. Calla lilies have been so plentiful, owing to the continued wet weather, that they are a drug in the market and, except for shipping orders, are not considered worth handling. They can be bought at from $5 to $10 per thousand. Early fruit blossoms are now past their prime and garden flowers will soon take their places. Valley continues to sell well, with no excess on hand. Freesias, except a few lots of outside grown stock, are out of the market. Smilax has been in steady demand for quite a time and only a few growers are now offering it for sale. Wild ferns are now at their best and tons are used daily around the stores and by the hucksters on the streets.

Various Notes.

F. A. Miller, for many years in the seed and plant trade in San Francisco, is now located on Nichol avenue, Fruitvale, Cal.

The new store of John R. Sievers is one of the finest establishments in town. The item of expense has not been considered and the decorations are in good keeping with the high class trade that is catered to.

Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, claims to have over 400 new varieties of seed-

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.

The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds	$20.00
6,000 seeds	10.00	25,000 seeds	35.00
50,000 seeds			62.50

I shall be glad to receive your order and know you will be pleased with the results.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Aldrich tariff bill includes the Payne bill schedule on nursery stock.

LAST year the government distributed free 24,350 grape vines and 91,000 strawberry plants.

THERE are a whole lot of scarce items in both fruits and ornamentals, report those who have to buy to fill orders.

THE Meshanticut Nursery Co., Providence, R. I., has been incorporated by J. A. Kee, F. I. McCanna and E. J. Rogan. The capital is to be $5,000.

THE Home Planters' Association has been incorporated at Rochester, N. Y., with Harry Bartlett Phillips, Stuart Hamilton and Henry E. Grady as directors.

THE nurserymen are having one of the best seasons on record. The cold, unseasonable weather in many parts of the country is prolonging their planting time.

THE Gardner Nursery Co., of Osage, Ia., recently shipped to Buenos Ayres, South America, a half-ton box of trees and shrubs of its own propagation. The firm also ships to Japan and Asiatic ports.

C. G. GROOTENDORST, of F. J. Grootendorst & Son, Boskoop, has arrived in New York for a trip among the buyers of nursery stock. There are more Holland nurserymen in this country this year than ever before.

SOME of the Holland nurserymen now abroad in the land say they are not able to locate many orders for peonies, and lay it to the peony being overdone. Good judges do not think the peony has lost any of its popularity; American growers are now able to meet the demand, that is all.

W. T. VICKERS, a nurseryman at Springfield, Mo., has been in Brunswick, Mo., taking depositions in a suit against James Dearing, a nurseryman of that city. Mr. Vickers is suing Mr. Dearing for $250 damages, alleging that a shipment of fruit trees sent him were diseased and not according to contract.

APPLES IN IDAHO.

The outlook for fruit tree planting in Idaho exceeds any previous spring. Nurserymen at Coeur d'Alene say they are unable to meet the demand for apple and in single instances orders for over 150,000 trees, chiefly of the Wagener, Rome Beauty and Jonathan varieties, have been turned down. It is claimed the orders unable to be filled by local nurserymen will exceed 500,000 trees of winter apples. William Buckley, the fruit inspector, claims the law requiring all fruit trees to be inspected is having a beneficial effect in causing a higher grade to be shipped into the state.

THE PISTACHE NUT.

Thousands of pistache stocks upon which improved varieties can be grafted have been distributed throughout the southwest by the Department of Agriculture. One of the most important of these is the Chinese pistache (Pistacia Chinensis), introduced by the office of foreign seed and plant introduction from the vicinity of Peking, China, where the winters are about as cold as at Washington, D. C. This species is of rapid growth, and it is hoped that it will prove to be a valuable stock upon which to graft the hardier varieties of the pistache. Every effort is being made to propagate budwood of improved varieties, so that the stocks now growing in various parts of the country can be grafted to the best commercial varieties of the pistache nut.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held April 9, with Charles H. Totty as the speaker.

A letter from Daniel MacRorie, full of interest, upon scenery and flora of the Pacific coast, where he has recently established himself in a general wholesale business and as an importer of orchids, was read.

There was the usual display of the season's flowers. J. B. D.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.

John Moore, foreman at the Ellsworth Greenhouses, says that this was by all odds the best Easter ever experienced. It was fifty per cent ahead of last year. The advance in prices, the exceptional demand, and the twin girls who arrived a few days previous to Easter caused Mr. Ellsworth to wear the broadest of smiles. The Ellsworth Greenhouses sold out of all blooming Easter stock, lilies and bulbous flowers going especially well. Carnations were in great demand and sold out by noon Sunday. It is intended to add 15,000 feet of glass to the establishment this summer, for prospects are excellent.

WHITMAN, MASS.—The Barrows greenhouses have been purchased by Arthur D. Reed, of North Abington.

CARTHAGE, MO.—Finn & Son, of the Carthage Greenhouses, have moved their downtown office to the southeast corner of the square, in the Osborn News stand.

MARY TOLMAN

A new light salmon pink Carnation, of a somewhat warmer tone than Enchantress, and does not fade on the edge of the petals, having a clear, even shade all over the flower, which measures from 3 to 3½ inches, although 4-inch flowers are very common. The stem is long and stiff, holding the flower perfectly erect. The calyx is very strong, and as a producer, it comes early, is very free and continuous.

The Market.

Easter trade was excellent considering the kind of weather we had. April 9 brought a regular blizzard and it looked as much like winter as a January day. April 10 was clear and cold and it was a job delivering plants, as they all had to be wrapped up the same as at Christmas. While some say business was not up to the standard, others report it as good as last year. Pot plants sold well, especially azaleas, rhododendrons, ramblers and made up baskets. Lilies were sold out early and there were not nearly enough to go around.

Cut flowers moved about the same as usual, with prices a little lower than last year. Roses were fine and sold well. Carnations were also of good quality and large supply. There seemed to be an unusual call for violets, and they were all sold out early. Sweet peas moved fine and some good ones were seen. Tulips and daffodils sold well and were in good shape. Stock in general was in much better shape than last year, owing to the cool weather before Easter. It made it easy for the growers to hold back stock, and there were few who had any stock stored in their cellars. J. M.

MARION, ILL.—A greenhouse belonging to J. P. Copeland was badly damaged April 6 by a hurricane. It is reported that the wind was of such velocity as to tear the roofs from buildings and even move some houses from their foundations.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive and most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

DETROIT.

The Market.

On all sides reports of a splendid Easter trade are heard. The weather, which means so much at this time, was as if made to order. Friday and Saturday were just a little too cold to deliver plants without a slight wrapping, but this in no way affected sales. Sunday was a beautiful day, and violets, orchids, gardenias, peas, valley and new bonnets were in evidence on all the streets, meaning a cleaning up on this stock by the florists.

So many plants were never sold before; in fact, it was a sort of a general clean up.

Various Notes.

Fire destroyed the boiler shed at Fred Pautke's place Saturday night, causing a loss, not only of Easter flowers, but of everything on the place, young stock and all.

The Twentieth Century Club ladies distributed seeds to the school children last week, as is customary each spring.

When the wind struck Frank Holznagle's floral establishment, 2570 Woodward avenue, April 7, it started in to run away with one of the greenhouses, and the employees were obliged to anchor the glass building with wire guy ropes in order to prevent a catastrophe. The day was a bad one for florists all over the city.

CONQUEST

A new seedling Carnation to be disseminated next season. This is a variety that florists have been wanting ever since they discarded Prosperity.

CONQUEST is a light flesh-pink, overlaid with a deep rose-pink, the color extending over the petals from the center almost to the edge. It does not fade, making it a most beautiful and attractive flower. Its habit is somewhat on the order of Lawson, although the stem is somewhat longer, and very stiff. The flowers are well filled and nicely formed, which add to its attractiveness. Without a doubt, it will be the most attractive, as well as the most profitable variety to be disseminated the coming season.

Orders booked now for January 1, 1910, delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Easter trade was about the best we ever experienced. Stock was in good supply at every store, except American Beauties, which could not be had at any price; even Chicago failed to help us out. The sale of potted plants was large in almost every place. Each one seems to be pleased with the results.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Jennie Murray reports that everything sold out clean; she had a fine call for azaleas and hydrangeas.

The Alpha Floral Co. did a big business. The out-of-town trade was immense. Potted plants took the lead for the city sales.

D. Freudenthal had a fine business; by the looks of his store his trade must have been immense.

J. Austin reports a fine total. He was proud of his patch of Easter lilies.

Arthur Newell could have sold more lilies.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. had a large stock of hyacinths in pots and the sales were the best ever.

W. L. Rock says the only trouble was to handle the big rush.

Sam Murray had his usual big holiday trade, especially on decorated plants and plant combinations. W. H.

KENNEBUNK, ME.—J. O. Elwell was in Boston recently, on a business trip. Mr. Elwell grows carnations and a general line of stock, and keeps his whole establishment in good condition.

DALTON, MASS.—F. G. Crane is erecting on his estate at this place a large range of private greenhouses, and also a gardener's cottage of strictly modern construction. John R. Shield, who has been with the Crane family for a number of years, will have charge of this estate.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

We have just passed through a successful Easter. The retailers more than held their own, notwithstanding the cheap competition on all sides. This year the leading department stores advertised flower sales. The ladies of the Indianapolis Orphans' Society, assisted by about fifty more of the leading ladies of the city, had a big flower sale. These, with the city market and flower stands on every corner, made it exceedingly strenuous for the retailer.

It is surprising what a quantity of flowers sprang up in two or three days. Every vegetable grower and small florist within a radius of ten miles of the city did his part to supply the flowers for Easter. As the weather had been cool for a week, it was not difficult to time the bulb stuff to the minute and most of it was of good quality. Roses, carnations, Beauties, valley and violets were more than enough to go around, with a slight shortage in peas, lilies and orchids. The sale of blooming plants is increasing every year, and this year showed an increase in plants selling at from $4 to $6.

The city market was all flowers; by actual count, there were 100 stands selling flowers. There was no end of bulbous stuff. The cut flowers cleaned up well, but there was a surplus in potted plants.

Various Notes.

E. W. Sellers, of A. Wiegand & Sons, has joined the motor cyclists.

E. A. Nelson has returned from a successful week of hunting and fishing.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. enjoyed a fine Easter business and reports the sale of blooming plants as larger than ever.

Homer Wiegand is suffering from the grip.

The ladies of the Indianapolis Orphans' Society, who had their annual Easter flower sale in one of the downtown store rooms, cleared about $600. This sale took many a good customer away from the retailers.

John Rieman, Fred Hukriede, Henry Rieman and William Billingsly report fine business.

C. R. Greene is on the sick list.

A. Wiegand & Sons, with their new 105-foot show house with its plate glass front, had a flower show of their own. Their display of blooming plants attracted people from all over the north side. This firm reports business good.

HEADQUARTERS FOR Araucarias

"By Jingo!" was the remark the other day of a bright looking gentleman, as he stepped, with his lady friend, into our Araucaria houses. "If these aren't the best shaped and finest looking specimens of Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa I have ever seen, then I'm a mark. What a sight for this time of the year!"

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

SALEM, MASS.

William T. Walke had a noteworthy display of Easter lilies at his greenhouses on Loring avenue. There were 5,000 plants in the group, in various stages of growth, but the majority of them were timed so as to be in full bloom for Easter. The bulk of the blooms are shipped regularly to the Boston market.

Mr. Walke's business here has been prosperous and has showed a steady increase. Starting nine years ago with one greenhouse, he now has two houses of Easter lilies, one house of carnations, two houses of roses and one house of miscellaneous stock, besides a propagating house. He was recently awarded the prize cup for the most meritorious group of plants and flowers in the wholesalers' flower market exhibit in Music hall, Boston.

MACON, GA.

Well, here I am, spending Easter Sunday in Macon, which is one of the most charming cities in the south. I was expecting to get done here yesterday and "skin out," but the party I came to see, Mr. Horgan, the genial manager of the Idle-Hour Nurseries, was so busy slinging out Easter lilies that all I could see of him was his coat tails flying in the air. They handled some 8,000 lilies, with an abundance of all kinds of plants, such as hydrangeas, azaleas, rhododendrons, deutzias, climbing roses, bougainvilleas, lilacs, spiræas, genistas, cinerarias, geraniums, tulips and lilies of the valley, in pots and baskets. Their stock of double violets, carnations and roses seemed to be unlimited, and they dispatched orders with the greatest ease imaginable.

NASHUA, N. H.—April 7 some miscreant threw a rock weighing almost a pound through a light of glass in the greenhouses of Charles H. Blake and the stone barely missed Mr. Blake's head.

Ferguson's Combination Sprayer and Syringe

The only practical Greenhouse Combination Sprayer and Syringe on the market. The three different roses that go with each sprayer make it possible to either Water, Spray or Syringe at will by simply adjusting whichever rose is desired. Recommended as regards syringing under the foliage of plants where force is needed to keep down red spider, etc. Substantially made of brass, and can be screwed on the end of any hose same as an ordinary nozzle. They are used for outdoor work as well as in greenhouses; nothing better to keep rose bushes, etc., clean. The long brass extension rod enables the user to reach otherwise inaccessible places, such as when spraying tree-ferns, palms, ferns, the foliage of vines, etc., and without getting thoroughly soaked. PRICE, $3.00.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

The thousand or more florists who attended the convention here in August will be interested in knowing that the ice has jammed in the gorge until the water in the river is over forty feet higher than it was at the time of the convention. The Gorge Route electric railroad is piled fifteen feet high with ice. The power house of the Ontario Power Co., which was inspected by the visiting florists, has been put out of commission by the high water, which backed up until it flooded the lower floor, where the big engines are, stopping the machinery and cutting off the power of a large number of street railways and factories on the New York side.

COWSLIPS FOR EASTER.

When is the proper time to plant cowslips in coldframes for Easter? L. G.

You do not state whether you mean the so-called American cowslip or marsh marigold, Caltha palustris, or the common English cowslip, Primula veris. If the former is wanted, the roots should be planted in the frame in late fall. If kept well watered, they will flower in time for Easter, provided it does not fall any earlier than April 10. The English cowslip should be raised from seed sown in early spring, the seedlings planted out in the field in May, kept well cultivated, planted in frames in October, covered with dry leaves when frozen and uncovered the middle of March, when they will flower for an ordinary Easter. Of course, the date of Easter and climatic conditions must be taken into consideration. C. W.

IN GOVERNMENT GREENHOUSES.

In the range of houses at the government's Arlington Experimental Farm at Washington, in the last year, one house has been devoted to a study of the merits of blind versus flowering wood cuttings in rose growing; one house and a half to fertilizer studies in carnation growing; one-half house to a variety study of forcing types of radishes, and two houses to the study of greenhouse physics, lettuce being used as the interpreting crop. Two more houses are now under construction, which, when completed, will make eight of the ten houses necessary to complete the range; the potting shed is being extended to completion, which will make it 200 feet in length; a steam-heated cement hotbed ninety feet in length has been constructed immediately south of the range of greenhouses, to be used for the starting of sweet potato plants and the wintering of various other plants. During the year there were propagated in the houses 1,400 roses, 3,000 carnations, and 8,401 bedding and miscellaneous plants.

Adams, Mass.—A great deal of glass in the greenhouses of A. J. Boothman was broken by the high wind April 9.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Judging from reports, Easter trade was most satisfactory to all concerned. Pot plants sold better than ever and most cut flowers found a market. There were plenty of roses, violets and sweet peas, and they sold well.

The market for carnations was a peculiar one. With prospects of a limited supply, the Easter price lists quoted them at from 3 cents to 6 cents, and this had a tendency to hold back quite a few buyers. At this time more could have been sold, but the end of the week found that some growers had held back, thus filling up the market the last few days, instead of making regular shipments. It was the colored varieties that sold best.

More Harrisii, both in pots and cut, could have been used. The same can be said of valley.

During the last week we were treated to all kinds of weather imaginable, and Friday and Saturday were such as to necessitate the wrapping of most plants.

Various Notes.

Charles Dettmann finds that he has outgrown his present quarters and is about to erect several new greenhouses at Third street and the city limits, for a general line of stock. He had several good-sized church decorations for Easter Sunday.

The Currie Bros. Co. says Easter trade was fine, cleaning up on all cut flowers and plants. While they sold a large quantity of cut flowers, the plant trade was ahead of last year.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. reports the Easter trade as very satisfactory, with special demand for the lily of the valley grown in the firm's own houses. There was a shortage here in Harrisii.

The Wisconsin Floral Co., which is one of the firms which depend mostly on transient trade, reports that even with an increased force of help they were kept going all the time. As their store is not any too large, they found it difficult to handle both stock and customers.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. says everything sold at sight.

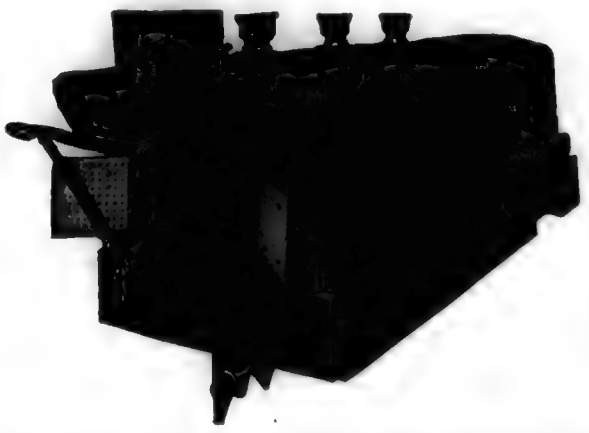
William Zimmerman was more than pleased with Easter business and reports an increased demand for sweet peas and violets.

On Easter Sunday, at noon, Robert Zepnick, 147 Lincoln avenue, said: "I'm sold out; only the furniture and fixtures left." Rhododendrons sold well, but spiræas were not so popular. Pansies were quickly disposed of.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. enjoyed a fine shipping trade the greater part of the week. The heavy snow storm on Thursday and Friday, in the northern part of this state and Michigan, reduced the sales to some extent.

To sell all good pot plants out of such a large lot as the C. C. Pollworth Co. had, certainly speaks for itself. Shipping trade with them was also very satisfactory.

Visitor: J. J. Karins, of the Henry Dreer Co., Philadelphia.



Just during the busy week William Manke, of Manke Bros., of North Milwaukee, was confined to the house with an attack of grip. E. O.

HUNTINGTON, IND.—George Pastor was injured recently by falling from a table on which he was working, at his greenhouses on Frederick street.

STEAM FOR SEVEN HOUSES.

Can you give me any information in regard to the amount of steam pipes needed for my range of houses, with one gable end? Besides a house for forcing, 10 by 100, there are two houses, 27x100, for roses, and four houses, 27x 100, for carnations. I am located in central Illinois. The large houses have four 5-foot benches, with three 1½-inch flows overhead, eight 1¼-inch returns, and one 1½-inch return, with valves on each run. Is this sufficient?

H. H.

In heating this bank of houses with steam, I would suggest the use of nine lines of 1¼-inch pipe in the 10-foot house, for a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees. Twenty-two lines of 1¼-inch pipe will be needed in each of the 27-foot houses to be used as rose houses, in which a temperature of from 65 to 70 degrees will be required. In the 27-foot houses to be used for carnations, the installation of fourteen 1¼-inch pipes will be sufficient. A 2-inch main flow will be sufficient for the 10-foot house; a 3-inch main should be used for each of the rose houses and a 2½-inch main in the others, in each case to be carried under the gable. L. C. C.

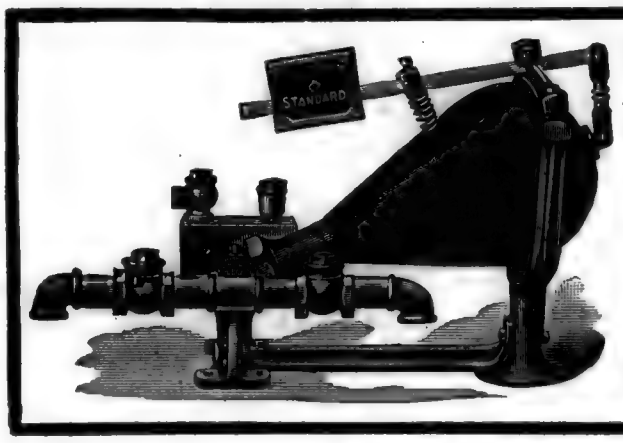
CAPACITY OF BOILER.

We would like to know the heating capacity of a boiler twelve feet by forty-two inches, with thirty-six 3½-inch flues and a grate surface 48x48. Will such a boiler, properly piped and fired, heat economically 18,000 feet of glass to the ordinary temperatures for general greenhouse needs, in this part of Kansas, where the temperature is rarely below zero, although it may go to 10 degrees below possibly once a year? Will a chimney forty-five feet high, and with a round, smooth flue, twenty-four inches in diameter, be enough for two such boilers, especially if hard firing is not required? W. H. C.

Your boiler would be rated at thirty horse-power and should be able to carry about 3,500 square feet of radiation under ordinary greenhouse conditions in your climate. L. C. C.



YOKING BOILERS.

We have added an emergency boiler to our regular one, but have not been able to yoke the two together in such a way as to get good service from them, as one boiler forces its water into the other. Can you offer any suggestions as to what will obviate the trouble?

L. F.

This is evidently a case of one boiler heating much more rapidly than the other. I judge, from what you say, that these are steam boilers, although there is no statement to that effect. If steam boilers are in question, a good way will be to yoke the flow pipes together and to connect both with a common water leg into which all returns empty. The water leg should then be connected with each boiler by an independent connection in which a gate valve and a swing check valve are placed, so as to shut the boiler off entirely when not in use and to prevent the water from leaving the boiler when the two are not steaming alike. L. C. C.

I don't see how any florist can do business without the Review.—Alfred Runnion, Sheldon, Ill.

The Standard Steam Trap

is acknowledged the best for the florist, because it is durable and does its work without trouble and annoyance, saving its cost by the economy in coal bills.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Easter business was fully up to the average, potted plants having the preference.

The Schaefer Co. made a fine showing in its conservatory and had a continuous crowd the whole week through.

The Yuess Gardens Co. made use of its entire building downtown in arranging the grand lot of plants in exhibition groups. A finer collection is seldom seen in a big city.

Mark Crawshaw made a run on geraniums, which sold well at popular prices.

The Newburgh Floral Co. received top prices for carnations. They report excellent returns from their advertisements in the REVIEW. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The creditors of John J. Butler and Agnes T. Moore, doing business under the name of M. Butler & Son, have petitioned the United States District Court to declare the firm bankrupt. The creditors allege that the firm has made an assignment. The principal creditors are William C. Scott, $841; A. and H. G. Hammett, $228; Oscar Schultz, $93; William Scott & Co., $98, and V. A. Vanicek, $129.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Easter trade was satisfactory to the Erie florists. Stock was in fine condition and moved rapidly. An immense quantity of violets were sold. Beauty, Killarney, Bridesmaid, Bride and Rhea Reid were first-class and brought good prices. Everything was favorable excepting the weather. The first part of Easter week we had ideal, warm days, but Friday and Saturday a cold wave struck us, making Easter delivery difficult.

Various Notes

J. Hanna, of Pittsburg, has taken a position with the Baur Floral Co.

Adolph Jasperson, of Oil City, Pa., is spending the Easter holidays in Erie and is incidentally helping his uncle, Chas. Offerle, over the Easter rush.

Miss Cora Hapgood has recently taken a position as saleslady in John V. Laver's flower store.

Erie nickelodeons have commenced to buy carnations by the hundred and are handing them out to their patrons.

ACME POT WASHER

This machine is built substantially and will withstand severe wear and tear; sides, ends and bottom are taken from 1 clear, Red Gulf Cypress Board, and are mortised and bolted together, after which they receive two coats Lead and Oil of first quality, assuring long life, no leakage and durability. Body of machine will hold from 300 to 800 pots (according to size), which is filled with enough water to cover said pots, thereby causing dirt, etc., to soak loose; then same is lifted from water and placed on brush of machine (full set of brushes go with each machine), which will do better work than would be possible to obtain by hand.

Two men can wash with this machine 15,000 pots per day, or one man 7500 pots per day, or 7500 pots can be washed for $1.50. One man can wash by hand 1500 pots per day (if he works hard), therefore you will plainly see that in one day one man will wash, with machine, 6000 more than he can wash by hand, or five times as many. Above figures will show that by hand it will cost $1.00 per 1000 to wash pots; they will also show that it costs by use of our machine 20c per 1000, a saving of 80c per 1000. This means that if you have 35,000 to wash same will pay for machine. Write for prices and particulars.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

There was a time when, in the spring, the geranium was the standard plant, but owing to several mild winters and also to the facility of its reproduction, the sale of this plant now is limited. To make it worse, some growers, loaded with old geraniums kept from last season, are offering them at a low figure and they have become a glut on the market at no paying price. Boston ferns and the family seem also to have attained the limit of paying production, some florists offering them at auction or disposing of them at any price. Annuals have been in good, steady demand, verbenas and small petunias being scarce. Roses have found a ready sale. Climbing roses are much asked for. Roses kept in pots any length of time are doing poorly. Imported grafted stock is a failure. Manetti stock does not take well in our soil. The planting season of trees is nearly over. Not much has been accomplished so far, but the movement is well started and will keep on.

Business at the markets is quite large, comparing favorably with last year, but the prices are twenty per cent lower.

Easter among the florists here has not the same importance as in the north. Even at the Sunday markets it is generally a poor selling day for plants. The gardens are too full of flowers, the churches are too easily decorated from the private gardens. The only demand which seems to be on the increase for that day is for Easter lilies. They grow almost wild in the gardens, but in that natural state they open when they are ready to open, and as Easter does not come at a regular date, they are either too early or too late for that day. This year there were quite a few in time, although not enough for the demand. A little more attention from our growers will bring in a good, remunerative crop, without depending on imported, forced stock.

M. M. L.

Monson, Mass.—George L. Fuller had an unusually fine display of Easter lilies and other seasonable stock.

Neenah, Wis.—Louis Otto's greenhouses and hotbeds were considerably damaged by a hail storm April 6. The hailstones, it is reported, were as large as hickory nuts. Easter trade here was excellent. Flowering plants sold well. There was a heavy call, also, for carnations, though some of the stock shipped in was decidedly poor.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Easter weather conditions were good, except for a strong wind. People were desirous of buying, there was plenty of stock of all kinds, but—and here lies the story—while the regular florists were well stocked at a trifle under usual Easter prices, the department stores bought large stocks of potted plants—good, bad and indifferent—and sold at considerable reductions. The masses, looking only at the price and not at the goods, rushed to the department stores.

Notwithstanding the department stores, however, the florists did a good business, although not reaping the harvest that was justly theirs and which many had been counting on. Contrary to the expectations of ten days before, the supply of lilies was equal to the demand. The requirements of the 200-odd churches in this city were unusually large, but were readily met and, taken all in all, Easter compared favorably with previous ones.

Various Notes.

John J. Butler and Agnes T. Moore, of Newport, copartners under the firm title of M. Butler & Son, have been ordered by Judge Arthur L. Brown of the United States District Court to show cause why as a firm they should not be adjudged bankrupt. The petitioning creditors are William Scott, $841; A. & H. G. Hammett, $228; Oscar Schultz, $93; William Scott & Co., $98, and V. A. Vanicek, $129, all of Newport or Middletown. The firm, which is one of the oldest established florists in Newport, had made an assignment for the equal benefit of all creditors, and James Blake, the assignee, has held a sale of the contents of all the greenhouses, which consisted mostly of palms, ferns and hydrangeas.

Charles Hunt has commenced an addition to his range on Burnside street, 10x50, for a propagating house.

John Wood had the first arbutus of the season April 7, coming from Well Fleet on Cape Cod. It sold readily.

The Meshanticut Nursery Co. was incorporated last week with a capitalization of $5,000, Edward J. Rogan, of Pawtucket; Francis I. McCanna and James A. Kee, of this city, being the incorporators. This corporation will engage in the business of buying, selling and cultivating of all kinds of flowers, seeds and nursery products. W. H. M.

Dallas, Tex.—The Green Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $125,000. The incorporators are: E. H. R. Green, Eugene Corley, Harry Donnelly and A. Millar.

Exterior of Simpson's Big Houses

What Robert Simpson Says About Our Shadeless Ridge House

MR. SIMPSON says very plainly, very decidedly, that the Sectional Iron Frame, Shadeless Ridge House is the lightest, strongest house that is being built. Furthermore, he believes it does not pay the grower any more to do his own erecting, because it is bound to take a great deal too much of his time from matters of the greatest importance in connection with getting his regular houses started right to insure their highest possible crop yield. "Every man to his trade," is his idea, and, being a rose grower, he does not feel qualified to also be a greenhouse builder. He does, however, have very distinct and logical ideas of how a house should be planned and built. He thinks houses of moderate width are better than the very wide ones, and that the L. & B. Shadeless Ridge Houses are the best, no matter whether for growing roses or other plants. Being an exceedingly practical man, he also recognizes that there is a certain satisfaction in having houses which are perfect in their every detail. Houses in which he can take a pride in owning, and in having his friends see.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list.

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the fall and early winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.

A COMPARISON OF RESULTS.

[A paper by L. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., read before the Boston Florists' Club, April 20, 1909.]

It has been somewhat of a puzzle to me to know what line to take in talking on roses at this meeting. Although I sometimes find myself talking as though I really had definite ideas on methods of growing roses, I generally get back again to the point where I think that I am only a student and that what seems to be a settled fact today is surrounded by questions tomorrow.

The subject "Roses" is broad enough in a way, but when I come down here to your shows I am struck with the idea that the growers for this market know quite a lot about roses. It would be much easier for me to show what I don't know than it would what I think I know. Consequently I shall not try to say anything regarding culture in general. The Boston growers know some things about growing almost any crop. Anyone who is not aware of that had better come here to some of the shows. He will see exhibits of all kinds and will find that within a not very great distance from Boston there are located men who can hold their heads up with the best in all lines. So I have decided to say a few words in the way of comparing the results from a few of our standard varieties.

Profits From Bride and Maid.

Of course, we must consider Bride and Bridesmaid first, and my first impulse was to escape the bother of following out a maze of figures and say that these two varieties are alike in productiveness, but I met a surprise there. Whether this is only a local condition or not, I am not prepared to say, but I found the Bridesmaid to produce the better. It has always been apparent to me that our stock of this variety was a little more thrifty, better able to resist mildew, etc., and I was a little bit reluctant to pass by the opportunity, while I was poring over our records, of satisfying myself as to the productiveness of these two old standbys. I found that our plants have cut as high as twelve blooms more of Bridesmaid than of Bride for the year. This number represents the limit, but in every case Bride fell short.

As to the average price on these two, there is little to be said. They hold about the same in the long run. This leaves the Bridesmaid with an advantage.

Killarney Leads at Present.

Next we come to Killarney. This variety takes kindly to our conditions and we are able to get good stems and good color, but it is hardly as good a producer as Bridesmaid. However, there is one important point to be considered; we cut short and weak-stemmed blooms of the latter, while on Killarney we cut nothing less than No. 1 grade. All shorter breaks are pinched and left for double-joint stems. The market price also favors the Killarney and, with the public inclining to it when a pink rose is wanted, we must place it at the head of the list.

How long this condition will last is a question. Bridesmaid had been the only standby as a pink rose for quite a number of years and we are now glad of a change, but the buying public are not going to be satisfied with nothing but Killarney as a pink rose, any more than they were with Bridesmaid.

The Editor is pleased when a Reader presents his ideas on any subject treated in

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU.

Maryland, Richmond and Chatenay.

Of the new ones, none seems more likely to succeed in taking a share of the honors than My Maryland. It will by no means crowd out Killarney, but it will find a place if it can be grown properly. Regarding this I want to say a few words later.

Richmond does not take kindly to our soil. I can hardly think that other growers who cut such excellent blooms get as low returns per plant as we do. We cut good stock, but not enough of them, and are trying to find a soil which will suit them better. Another year we may find different results, but our experience thus far has not been very satisfactory.

Chatenay is a heavy producer, ranking close to Bridesmaid, and is really a surprise when the season's average is considered. In grading there is an advantage at once, a good percentage of blooms being No. 1 and better. There are two main reasons why this rose is not more generally grown. First, it has a bud too light for warm weather. Until the cool nights come on, it is impossible to cut blooms with sufficient body for them to be salable, and the same condition exists by the early part of June. The other reason is that the buying public seems to consider Chatenay only as a novelty. A limited quantity will find a good sale, but I do not think it would be wise to plant very heavily.

Jardine, Rhea Reid, White Killarney.

Mrs. Jardine has not been a success with us, it being shy and also weak in color during the time when the sun is strong. A perfect bloom of this rose is really handsome, and such blooms as were offered in the Philadelphia market at Christmas time would always find a ready sale at a good price.

Rhea Reid has been a stubborn variety and we found it necessary to discard it early this spring, because it was not paying and we needed the room.

With the coming of White Killarney, Bride will have its first strong competitor and there seems little doubt that this grand new rose will be received with a strong welcome. It seems to be the general opinion of the store men who had a good chance to form an idea, that this variety will prove a strong favorite for some time at least. It surely will be as good a producer as the pink Killarney and consequently should be more profitable than Bride.

More About My Maryland.

Now for a few more words concerning My Maryland. There has been a great deal said about this variety lately, and several articles in the trade papers which have spoken well for the rose have kept well within the bounds of truth. There is no good reason for doubting the great value of My Maryland as a forcing rose, and not only is it good in winter, but it is especially good in the summer. The blooms have good substance, enough petals, and hold their color so well that it will surely be appreciated during July and August. It is not susceptible to mildew or black spot, and as a producer I believe that the best we now have will be pushed to hold first place.

No doubt it has been inclined in some places toward resting this winter, but is that surprising? We did not know the rose and its requirements, and practically everyone who grew it took every eye that could be used for grafting or cuttings, robbing the plants so much that it is not at all strange that the cuts were not heavy in some cases. It is a fact, however, that it has been made to produce well by quite a few growers this year, even through the most trying part of the season, and I will venture to say that next year will tell us a different story. We do not know yet how good it can be grown and it is probable that we have heard the worst and only a small part of the good.

The Cut per Plant.

I will try to give an idea as to what some of the varieties I have mentioned may be expected to cut. I have never gathered any definite ideas as to what other growers can get from their plants, but the following statements will give some faint idea at least as to what a plant may do.

There are several things to be considered in stating what a lot of roses will cut per plant. Where the cut is given from a house of first-year stock, we must consider when the stock was housed, whether it was in the spring or in June or July. If we are speaking of carried-over stock we must consider how they have been handled. We have cut from one house up to date twenty months without a break. The plants were not rested last summer and are still doing well. In this case a count may be taken for a full twelve months.

Where we rest a house each summer and carry it over two or more years, it is possible to count on ten months' flowering. This is an advantage which carried-over plants have over young stock planted each year, but when the stock passes the third year they seem to gradually cut less; two and three years at the most seems to be the limit for growing our forcing roses.

Figures From a Year's Records.

From a house of Bridesmaids which cut ten months in their second year we took fifty-three blooms per plant. This same house is cutting well now in its third year and had no rest last summer, but it will not equal that cut this year.

The best cutting we have done for ten months on Brides was forty blooms per plant, and on Killarney thirty-eight to forty, but the Killarney had hardly the full ten months to its credit. Chatenay has cut for us forty-two blooms for eight and one-half months; during that time the buds were of good quality, but to have run them longer into the summer would have been of little consequence. I cannot give an average cut from Richmond, as we have never handled them in a way that will permit comparison with our other sorts.

These records which I have mentioned do not mean that these are given because they are the best cuts I could find, but are simply a statement of last year. A house of roses may, no doubt, be made to produce better than these and it is also true that we may expect to fall below these figures at any time. All I have in mind is to give a general idea of the matter.

Considered From all Sides.

When forming conclusions as to the relative values of these varieties mentioned, it is necessary that the subject be considered from all sides. While there is a difference in the productiveness of several varieties, there are also facts to be taken into consideration before deciding which is the most profitable. While Killarney will not produce as heavily as Bridesmaid, the higher percentage of No. 1 grade and better, with no No. 3 at all, which are cut from Killarney gives this sort the advantage at once. And so it is with all the varieties.

To make sure which are the best paying ones, a record must be kept of the cuts, prices and grade of blooms.

In conclusion, I would say that I believe Killarney ranks first, Bridesmaid and Bride next, in order named, with a possibility that Richmond may come in close to Bridesmaid.

Easter Window of Jacob Schulz, Louisville.

SCHULZ'S SHOW.

The accompanying illustrations show the conservatory and window display of Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky., at Easter. Mr. Schulz had a larger Easter trade than ever before and found the public specially interested in decorated plants. He sold great numbers of moderate priced plants with pots covered in various attractive ways. He made special effort with plants because they could be sold and delivered in advance of Easter morning. Saturday night, April 17, Mr. Schulz gave a supper for his entire staff of employees in recognition of their good work during the Easter rush.

THE SPRAY OF LILIES.

The "symphony in white" is the keynote of the idea shown in the illustration of a spray of lilies made by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Pure white, perfect lilies, loosely arranged, are tied with a long bow and streamers of white satin ribbon. The point in this arrangement that Mr. Fox emphasizes is the value of using the best flowers on single stems or not more than two to a stem, the object being to arrange each flower so that it shows to advantage, and so that the bunch will lie flat. This is impossible when there are buds sticking out on all sides of each stem. Phil.

ASTER SEEDLINGS.

Will you kindly let me know what is the matter with the enclosed aster seedlings? The seeds were sown the middle of March. I was wondering if I let them get too dry, or whether it was caused by insects. The variety is Vick's Lavender Gem. Snowdrift are affected the same way. C. A. M.

The seedlings were so badly withered that I could not determine what had caused the shriveling. Insects do not trouble seedling asters much. Sometimes if stood on a sunny shelf near steam pipes and allowed to become dry at the root, red spider will attack them. I am inclined to the opinion that you have allowed them to become too dry at the root. After this date you will find that seed sown in coldframes will do better than if started in the greenhouse. C. W.

HOW OLD IS ANN?

Leonard Kill, manager of Peter Reinberg's Chicago store, will be 37 May 5. He was born amid the ruins of the great Chicago fire.

April 29 William A. Peterson will have lived 42 years at Peterson Nursery, Chicago. His hobbies are his peonies, his Indian relics and his directorship in the State Bank of Chicago.

Frank H. Traendly, of Traendly & Schenck, New York, is 42. At the last meeting of the S. A. F. he presided with great dignity, but, for all that, no man more dearly loves his little joke.

Miss Martha C. Gunterberg, Chicago's one woman commission man, was 27 a few days before Christmas. She formerly was buyer for a retail store that uses a lot of stock, so she knows all the plays in the game.

W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., is 51, born at Lancaster, Wis. He believes that no matter how much money you are going to spend for rose houses, one ridgepole is all you should buy—put it all under one roof. His latest house is over a quarter mile long.

William K. Harris, the Deacon, was 75 March 10. Meeting him for the first time, you wouldn't imagine his greenhouses in Philadelphia are glazed with plate glass—but some of them are. The Harrisii lily is named for him.

Hugh Wood, well known in the Chicago market, is almost 68 and a reader of the REVIEW since its first issue, although he cannot see at all. He was born in Lancashire, England. Since his sight failed he has had the paper read aloud to him each week by his caretaker.

Eugene Dailledouze, of Flatbush, is 50 and president of the New York Cut Flower Co. His recent appointment as director of the S. A. F. revealed the fact that he has two middle initials—J. G.—he thought he had given the shake long ago. E. J. G. Dailledouze! Do you recognize him?

SWEET PEAS DYING.

Can you tell me why our sweet pea leaves turn brown? There is no sign of spider on them. We have been cutting from these vines from Thanksgiving until now, but have kept well cultivated and fed. Our bench is down on the ground, with six inches of cinders in the bottom. Would the cinders affect them? How long can the plants be kept in good condition? J. G. B.

The cinders are the most probable cause of the foliage turning brown. You do not state your reasons for using six inches of cinders. If your land is well drained there is no need of them, as sweet peas are rather deep rooting and will not find much stimulus from the ashes. If your plants have flowered from Thanksgiving until now and have carried good stems, you have no cause for complaint. This is as long a season as sweet peas can be expected to continue in crop.

Sweet peas like a generous soil. I would advise removal of the ashes for another season. Give your beds a dressing of three inches of good cow manure. Work over the soil two spits deep and you will be surprised how your peas will thrive in it. C. W.

ASTERS UNDER GLASS.

I would like your advice as to growing asters in greenhouses. The soil is good and enriched, lettuce now growing in it, but when that crop is off I wish to put in asters. The ridge is ten feet and the side walls average two feet. I have water in the house. The temperature in hot weather is from 95 to 100 degrees. Would you advise shading the house? Last season I had asters in the same house and kept it shaded, but they were a failure. The asters frenched and would perish away. The location is Tennessee. M. E. H.

There is no reason why you cannot grow a good crop of asters in such a house as you describe. After clearing off your lettuce crop, give the beds a good dressing of well decayed manure and spade or fork it over. I presume you have solid beds, not raised benches. Lettuce succeeds best in the former, and after this date the asters also prefer them. The plants should not require any shading until the flowers commence to open, when a coating will be an advantage. Asters require abundant ventilation and a good water supply, and the soil must be constantly stirred to keep them in a good growing condition.

Red spider will occasionally attack them under glass in hot, dry weather, but if you keep a fairly moist, growing atmosphere and spray overhead regularly, this should not trouble you. I think you should be able to produce better asters indoors than outdoors in your latitude. C. W.

NOTES ON THE AUTUMN QUEEN.

[A paper by Elmer D. Smith, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, read before the Detroit Florists' Club, April 19, 1909.]

Some time ago your secretary requested me to supply a paper on chrysanthemums, and as this is a rather broad subject, I will only touch upon the most important phases.

In the beginning let us consider the plant itself. It is a perennial, which you are aware means a period of active growth, terminating in the development of flowers, followed by a season of inactivity or rest. The most hardy are those whose antecedents originally came from northern China and represent the pompons or small-flowering section. Those which are usually displayed and sold in flower shops are either the progeny of natives of Japan or those in which these two classes have been interbred.

Propagation.

Those who are propagating for their own use only, will have stronger stock if they adopt nature's way by giving the old plants partial rest. Exciting them into active growth with heat weakens their vitality. Stock plants kept in the light and at a low temperature until the cuttings are needed will furnish the best material for the purpose.

When the time arrives for propagation, do not hasten roots from the cuttings by strong bottom heat.

It is true, perennials under glass will grow faster than when under more natural conditions, but ample ventilation will do much to produce a moderate and healthy growth.

Strong plants and rich soil are important in the beginning, and with these two things provided at planting time, the results will surely be gratifying, if the watering, airing, tying, fumigating, feeding and disbudding are given prompt attention.

Planting on Benches.

Early varieties require early planting to secure strong plants by the time the early buds appear. The last part of May or first part of June should see such stock benched, the midseason sorts by June 25, while this work for the late kinds may be deferred until July 15.

How far apart should they be planted, is a question often asked. Each grower must decide this for himself, for he knows best the grade of blooms which meets his requirements, or can be disposed of at a profit. Within certain limits the greater the distance between plants the stronger the growth, the heavier the stem and larger the blooms.

Eight or nine inches apart each way is a good distance and will produce high-grade commercial blooms, while for fine exhibition stock ten to twelve inches, according to the varieties being treated, is considered none too much. Varieties with small leaves, like Ivory, may be planted closer than some of the stronger kinds. Nicely finished blooms from four to five inches in diameter may be had by planting six inches each way, but the stems are usually weaker than when greater space is allowed.

Occasionally some one asks how many plants will be required for a bench of a certain size. The following rule may be of some service. Multiply the square feet of bench surface by four when planting six inches each way, by 2.25 at eight inches and 1.78 at nine inches apart.

How many blooms to the plant? This, like the preceding question, is at the discretion of the grower. The greater the number the smaller the size. Two plants of the short-jointed kinds, particularly those with small leaves, are often planted together, which gives longer stems than when set singly, and then stopped to secure two or more blooms.

Let the appearance of the foliage be the index in watering. So long as it is of good color there need be no anxiety, but should it become yellow it is evident there is an overabundance, due either to lack of drainage or too frequent application.

Doubtless you are all familiar with the methods and realize the advantage of keeping the plants securely tied, and the same may be said of weeding, fumigating and removing the stools which spring up as the plants come into active growth, so let us pass on to more important features. This will bring us up to the time when disbudding will need attention.

Disbudding.

This operation is simple, but it is imprudent to defer the work. That excellent motto, "Do it now," should be tacked up in a conspicuous place before the buds appear.

In the beginning it was suggested to plant early for early blooms, and if the selection has been judicious there are some kinds which will show buds in July. Those forming at this early date are termed crowns and may be saved on Golden Glow as early as July 1, provided extra early blooms are desired. Probably the best way to manage this variety is to plant from the first batch of cuttings about May 15 and then follow with subsequent batches as fast as ready up to June 20, securing the first bud that appears. This should give a succession of blooms from August 15 to October 25.

Monrovia is also best from early buds, about July 20 to 25; October Frost and Beatrice May, August 10; Early Snow, Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific and Pacific Supreme, August 15 and later. All of the so-called early buds should be selected by August 20 or your competitor will have his crop cut before yours is ready.

Elmer D. Smith.

U-Bar Greenhouses of Senator N. W. Aldrich, Warwick Neck, R. I.

The best period for selecting buds of the midseason sorts is in the ten days following August 25; in the late varieties, from September 15 onward for a month, according to date of planting and the kind under consideration.

Feeding.

As the buds begin to swell the necessity of feeding will confront us. The commercial grower has little or no cause for overfeeding, while on the other hand those whose whole object is size must reach their aim by applying to the limit. The limit is often difficult to discern, particularly when new sorts are being treated, and so it is that some blooms are injured rather than improved by this unnatural procedure.

What and when to apply requires some consideration. Experience has taught us manures and chemicals are conducive to strong growth and large blooms. Hence we resort to their use to bring about this end. Those who have not had experience with chemicals must be content with light applications or leave them alone entirely. All the failures attributed to this source are without doubt due to too strong or too frequent applications.

Some will question the truth in the assertion that nitrate of soda, nitrate of potash or sulphate of ammonium should not be given stronger than one ounce to ten gallons of water. It has been recommended by some at the rate of one pound to a fifty-gallon barrel, which is approximately one ounce to three gallons. I have used these proportions at long intervals without apparent injury, but if the applications are to be repeated every few days there is danger of going great harm. Where soda and ammonium are used exclusively the growth is rampant and inclined to be soft. Potash seems to govern or control this undue vigor by increasing the metabolical or harder woody tissues. Soluble phosphoric acid, which is present in varying quantities in all manures and in some of the chemicals, acts more directly upon the flower, increasing the number of petals, which gives the bloom greater depth, much to the enjoyment of the exhibition grower.

Hen, duck and dove manures are rich in phosphoric acid and vary from fourteen to seventeen per cent. If any of these are used in the liquid form it should be weak. Bone black gives about sixteen per cent; ground bone, five per cent. Potash is also present in all manures and is also supplied by nitrate of potash and wood ashes, the former supplying forty per cent, as well as twelve per cent nitrogen, and the latter eight per cent of potash.

Nitrogen is common in all manures, but is more abundant in the urine, and the same may be said of potash, so the real amount contained in the material at hand depends largely upon the loss from drainage and other causes.

The cheapest form in the chemical salts is nitrate of soda, containing sixteen per cent. Of these three constituents nitrogen is the least staple, being easily removed by the continued application of water; hence it is required in larger quantities than the other two elements.

The foregoing data are really of little consequence, further than showing the materials which contain them and the comparative strength. No fixed rule can be given for their application, as all depends upon the condition of the stock to be treated. Plants growing in rich soil, or those receiving a heavy top dressing, will require less than where the conditions are not so favorable. Feeding is one of the features which is shrouded with mystery, for the reason we have no knowledge of the functions performed by the assimilation of these foods except as they appear in the growth and texture of the leaves. The mastery of this problem depends on the grower's ability to grasp the meaning of these varied conditions presented at this final stage of development and decide whether to continue or desist.

Pompons and Singles.

The foregoing principally refers to the commercial branch of chrysanthemum culture. Before concluding this part of the subject I wish to impress upon you the adaptability of the pompons and singles to your use. Both of these sections lend grace and beauty to floral decorations of all kinds and to a degree that can not be attained where the large flowers are exclusively used. They also make beautiful pot plants, either large or small, and, being of the easiest culture, are sure to find favor both with the

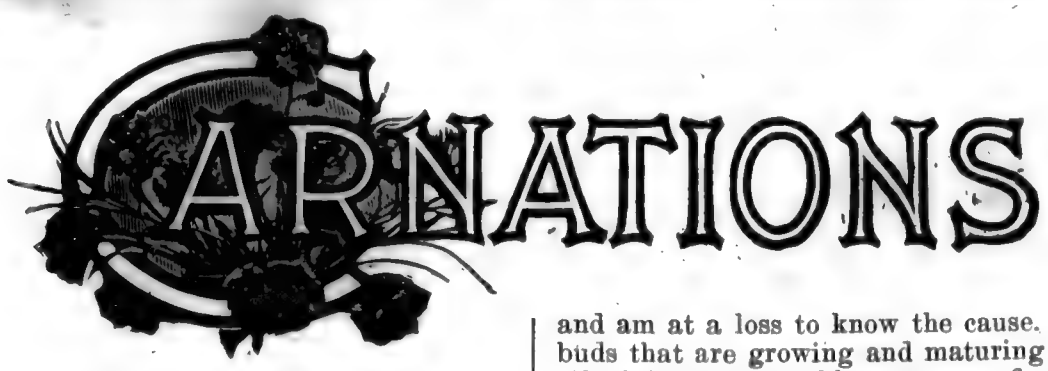
A FINE PRIVATE RANGE.



Mention has on previous occasions been made in the Review of the extensive and beautiful estate of Senator N. W. Aldrich, at Warwick Neck, R. I. The accompanying illustration shows a magnificent block of new greenhouses erected here by the Pierson U-Bar Co. There are sixteen houses in all. In addition, there is a roomy central building containing on the ground floor reception room, offices, potting-shed, flower and store rooms, etc., and on the upper floor a finely fitted suite of rooms for the young men employed in the greenhouses. The house of the superintendent, F. C. Green, is close at hand. The greenhouses are undoubtedly the finest and most up-to-date block on any New England private estate.

There are two houses devoted to grapes, two to peaches and nectarines. Several hundred peaches, nectarines, plums, cherries, apples and pears are grown in pots, and were well loaded with flowers at the time of my visit. In the rose house, Beauty, Richmond, Killarney, Bride and Maid are grown. My Maryland and White Killarney will be added next season. Two houses were planted with carnations, Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon, Winsor and other sorts, looking well. Special houses were devoted to violets, ferns, stove plants, general greenhouse flowering plants, melons, tomatoes, bulbous plants and propagating; all the plants in these were in excellent condition. Specially fine batches of cyclamens, cinerarias, Schizanthus Wisetonensis, Stock Beauty of Nice; Primula Kewensis, Azalea mollis, and other seasonable plants were noted.

Cold houses and cellars were filled to repletion with bay and box trees, skimmias, hollies, Irish yews, and other evergreen and deciduous plants of doubtful hardiness. Large quantities of cuttings of coniferous plants were filling the beds around one house. A large amount of planting is being done each season on the estate, which under Mr. Green's able superintendency has no superior in New England. His indoor foreman, James Hamilton, a native of Kippen, Scotland, is evidently a craftsman of the true type also.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Bench Soil for Next Season.

There is one thing you are apt to forget, or neglect, during the rush of getting ready for spring trade. Of course you are crowded with work, and anything that can be left undone, apparently, without serious loss, is left for the present. One job, however, which it never pays to neglect is caring for the soil for your benches for next season. I presume you have it on the place and that it is piled up, with manure added as it was put up last fall. If so, it should now be turned over and broken up. Unless you have had more rain than we have had during the last few weeks, it will be in good condition to handle and no time should be lost. After you get through planting in the field and through the bedding season, you will want to begin benching roses and mums, immediately following them up with your carnations. So, you see, unless you get it done before you begin planting in the field, you will get no chance to do it at all.

Next to having good plants to bench, the most important thing is to have good soil to plant them in. Perhaps I should not say good soil, but soil in good condition. The best of soil, if handled improperly, will not grow good stock.

A Help in Rainy Weather.

If the weather does not remain steady long enough to permit working the soil, you can help matters by laying some sash over as much of the pile as you can turn in two or three days. Always keep that much covered ahead of you and you will need to stop working only while it rains. Hotbed sash is more satisfactory than boards, as the soil will dry more quickly under them when the sun shines.

If you have no soil provided, you will do well to get it on the place at once. Take more soil and less sod than you would have done last fall. If possible, turn the pile as soon as you finish hauling, to get the soil and manure mixed thoroughly. It will take more work to get this soil in proper shape than soil which is hauled in the fall. You have not the frosts and the time to aid you in getting it properly decomposed and incorporated.

If you merely plowed and manured a plot from which you expect to take your soil, you need not worry at present, though you must not forget it altogether. Plow it as soon as it is in good condition, and again as often as seems advisable to keep it loose and mellow. This need not be piled up nor hauled until it is put onto the benches. A. F. J. B.

YELLOW SPOTS ON FOLIAGE.

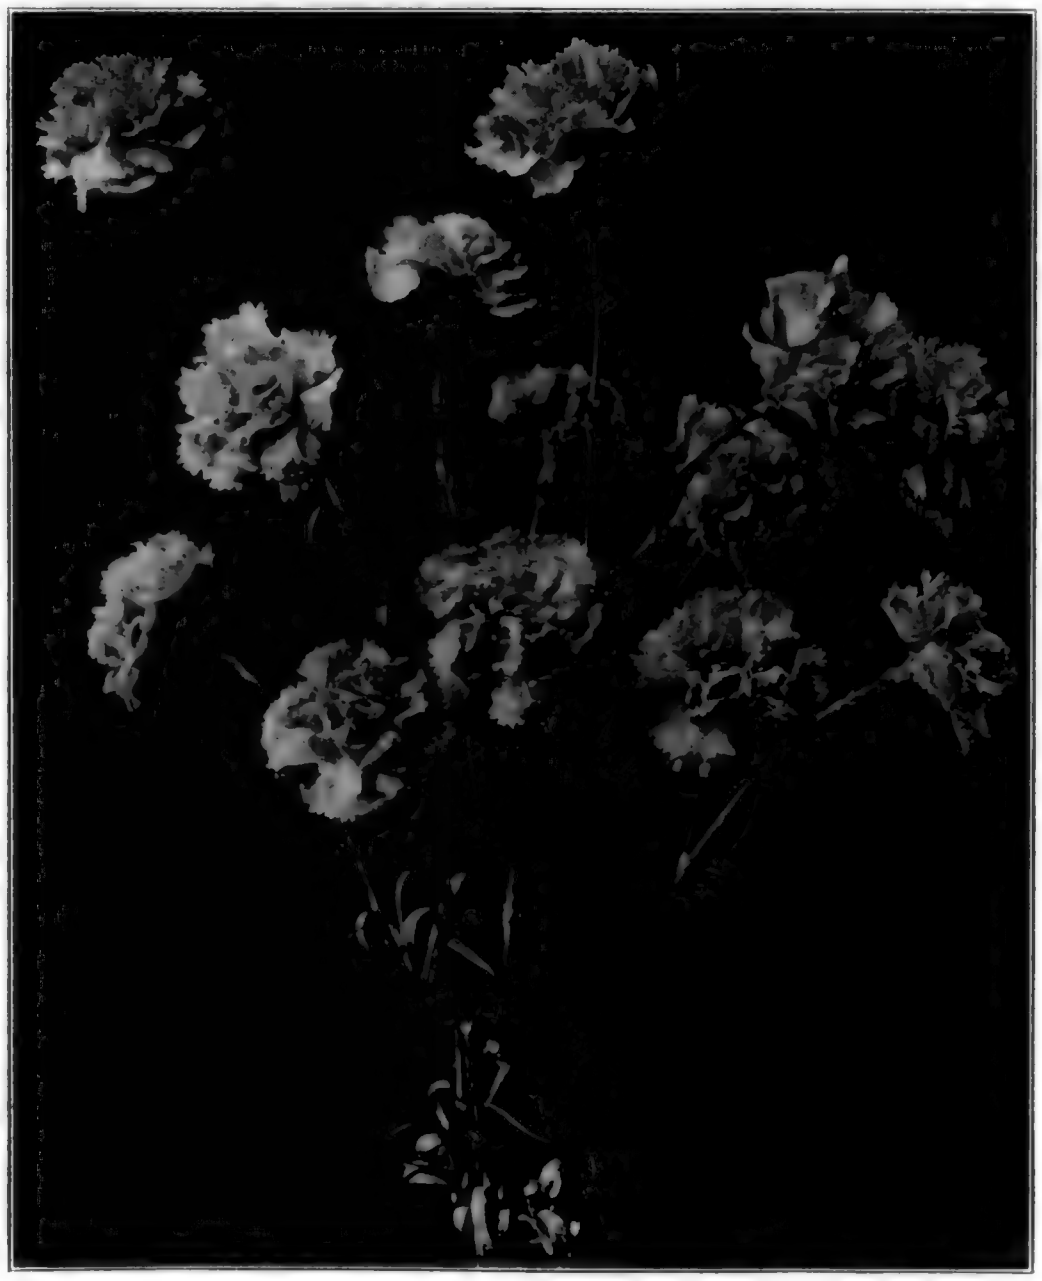
I am sending some specimens of my carnation plants. Within the last few days the ends of the new shoots have taken on this yellow-spotted appearance, and in most cases have dried at the tips. I have never had anything like it before and am at a loss to know the cause. The buds that are growing and maturing look all right and the blossoms are fine. I have been feeding the last few weeks with liquid fertilizer, but not in excess. It is the same fertilizer as I use every year. I use Nico-fume to fumigate with and can find no trace of insects.

I. E. L.

The specimens mentioned did not arrive and so I cannot say with any certainty what ails your carnation plants. From your description I would judge that it is stigmonose that is causing your trouble. This is quite possible, in spite of the fact that you can find no insects present. If your stock has been infested at any time within the last two seasons—last year before the cuttings were taken from which these plants grew, or any time this season—it may be the cause of your present trouble. That it has not shown during the dark days of last winter and is cropping out now, can be accounted for in the feeding you have done recently. Excessive watering or feeding will always aggravate this trouble.

Sometimes we find a plant which turns yellow in the young growth, but not in spots. These plants seem to have lost all their vitality, and gradually shrink away to almost nothing. Such cases are rare, however, and we have never been able to discover the cause. Perhaps your trouble is identical with this one. A. F. J. B.

LOSS OF LOWER FOLIAGE.



What is the cause of my Enchantress drying up, with dead leaves at the bottom? I noticed it about March 1. Do you think I do not water enough, or too heavily? W. R. D.

Your Enchantress may be planted too close on the bench, causing a lack of air circulating between them. If they are at all crowded it will be only natural for them to lose the lower foliage. Then, again, if your plants were large last fall and the lower stems have become woody, it would be natural for the foliage to dry up. Lack of water would perhaps aggravate the trouble somewhat. Carnations enjoy liberal watering when the days get longer. Ventilation is carried more freely and evaporation is more rapid than it was two months ago.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATION MARY TOLMAN.

Carnation Mary Tolman is a salmon pink variety that made its first appearance at the national flower show and which looked specially good at the annual carnation exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club. It is a Chicago variety, having been raised by A. E. Hunt & Co., at Evanston, who are growing quite a few of it this season, as are Hunt Bros., at Park Ridge. Among the growers who have watched the variety are A. T. Pyfer and Peter Olsem, of the Chicago Carnation Co., and they liked it so well that an arrangement has been made for the joint dissemination of Mary Tolman next year.

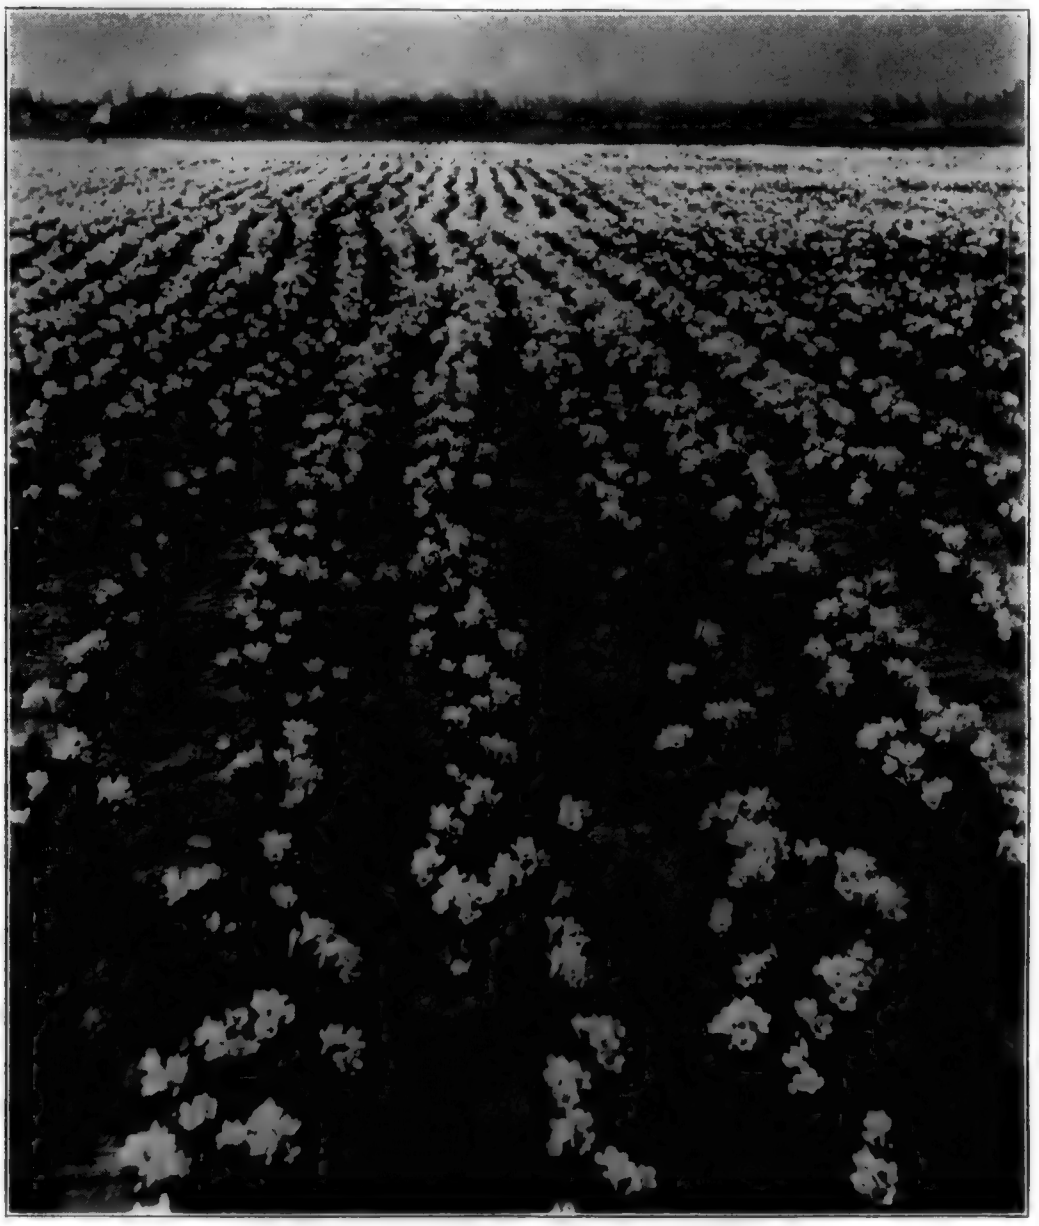
The color is just a little deeper than that of Enchantress. The petals are serrated, instead of smooth. The flowers keep well and do not fade at the edges. The blooms are of good size, with long stems, stiff enough to hold the flowers erect. As a grower, it is said to be early, free, continuous and non-bursting, which seems to leave nothing to be desired.

OVERDOSE OF WOOD ASHES.

What are the results of an overdose of wood ashes? I notice that some of my plants are dying, and all over the bench there are buds and stems wilting and drooping. I applied about half a bushel to a bench 5x48 feet about three weeks ago. I am watering heavily and giving lots of ventilation, thinking they will outgrow the trouble. The variety is Rose-pink Enchantress. W. R. D.

The results from an overdose of wood ashes would be just what you describe as the behavior of your Rose-pink Enchantress. If this had been applied in the winter, when the sun was weaker, there would not have been so much wilting. You would have noticed a softening of the growth, however, followed by a brittleness in the joints of the flower stems which would have been quite annoying. We have seen this carried on so far that the stems would snap off from the mere weight of a medium sized flower. We have also seen it make the growth so soft that cuttings taken from the plants could not be made to stand up in the cutting bench, on account of wilting. You are following the proper course with these plants, providing you are flooding the beds enough so the water runs through the bottom. Anything short of that will do no good. Give all the ventilation you can. A. F. J. B.

WHEAT SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.



I have a piece of ground sown to wheat and plowed it down this spring. Will this do to plant young carnations in about a month after it was plowed, or will it cause stem-rot? W. R. D.

If you can plant your carnations on some other ground this year, I would advise you to do so. Carnations like a well decomposed soil, and anything like newly broken ground should be avoided. They do not like it. By next year the piece you describe should be in good condition. I would sow it in cowpeas this spring, and early in the fall plow them under. A. F. J. B.

TOO FADED FOR EXAMINATION.

I enclose a blossoming stem of a White Enchantress and wish you would tell me what the trouble is and how to get rid of it. It seems to be worst on the Enchantress and White Enchantress, though there is also some on White Perfection. It did not bother me during the winter; in fact, it only spoils the looks of the bloom with the dried ends of the leaves. C. F. R.

The specimen forwarded, coming all the way from the Pacific coast, was too dried up to show conclusively what ails your plants. Either forward a whole plant, or pack the shoots with damp moss around the lower ends. A. F. J. B.

Field of Freesia Purity in California.

YELLOW CARNATIONS.

A contributor to the Gardeners' Chronicle, London, writing "American Notes," says:

"Yellow carnations are not as popular in the United States as in England, and although this may be in part due to the fact that there are few really good kinds that are profitable to grow commercially as cut flowers, yet the fact remains that growers generally are shy of them. The new variety, J. Whitcomb Riley, was well shown both at Chicago and at the Indianapolis convention of the American Carnation Society, and is a beautiful flower, as well as a fine grower and free flowerer. The raisers are said to have received an offer from a British firm for the whole of the stock, in which case it would not, of course, be sent out here. More than one prominent grower has told the writer that no yellow variety will ever be taken up with any spirit in America."

The yellow variety, Neptune, sent out a year or two ago by the late Paul Thomson, West Hartford, Conn., has been widely distributed in Europe, but has been taken up by only a few growers in the United States.

FISCHER'S FIELD.

The accompanying illustration shows Rudolph Fischer's field of Freesia Purity at Santa Anita, Cal. It will be recalled that Mr. Fischer raised this freesia in New Jersey and something over a year ago removed to California, to grow it on a more extensive scale than was possible in the east. Mr. Fischer also grows Purity under a big lath house, where it does finely. One of the surprises to him is the number of calls he receives for seeds of this freesia. He says it should be a matter of general knowledge that neither Purity nor any other freesia comes true from seed and that stock grown in this way is unreliable. He says that if Purity could be grown satisfactorily from seed, he would have increased his stock much faster than has been possible.

MEALY BUG ON PALM ROOTS.

Will you please tell me what is the best remedy for mealy bug on the roots of palms? The roots in the bottoms of the pots are covered with them and I am afraid to use the usual remedies for fear of injuring the roots. M. M.

The safest method to use in order to get rid of mealy bugs on the roots of these palms would be to wash them off with a good pressure of water. Turn the plants out of the pots and wash the roots thoroughly under a faucet; then carefully repot, working the soil well in around the roots and ramming firmly. Then water well and place the plants in a warm and shaded house.

The bench upon which these plants have been standing is probably more or less infested with the insects, and should also be thoroughly cleaned before having plants placed upon it again. W. H. T.

UNION CITY, PA.—W. J. Olds has added about 3,000 feet of glass, for the growing of chrysanthemums.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bedding Stock.

Growth is now rapid with all bedding stock, and incessant care is required to keep seedlings and rooted cuttings potted or boxed off before they become drawn. It is now possible to increase bench space for the more tender bedding plants by removing geraniums, verbenas, petunias, lobelias, asters, variegated vincas, Drummond's phlox and other kinds to coldframes. Spread a layer of fine coal ashes to stand the pots or flats on and keep the plants a little close for a day or two to gradually accustom them to the lack of fire heat.

Coleus grows fast now. Tops taken now will root and still make nice little plants for Memorial day; so with alternanthera and achyranthes. Cannas should now be given a somewhat cooler house. Dahlias must not be coddled. They want abundance of air or will be spindly. Put a stake to such climbers as Cobæa scandens before they fall over and become entangled.

Make additional sowings of asters, of such sorts as Semple's, Vick's Branching and Victoria. There is still ample time to sow salvia for a late planting, also balsams, celosias, cockscombs, zinnias, marigolds and other quick-growing annuals.

Show Pelargoniums.

The earliest plants of pelargoniums are now coming into flower, but the main batch will be at their best about the middle or end of May. They sell well at Memorial day, for although they lack the persistent flowering qualities of the zonal and ivy sections, their large and showy flowers take on a variety of rich colors lacking in other pelargoniums. The plants will require a little shade from the sun's rays now. They cannot stand sunshine as can the zonals. An abundant water supply and some liquid stimulant or surfacing of a good chemical like Clay's will keep the foliage a rich, dark green color. Air freely, but use great care in fumigation. Avoid the use of tobacco stems, or you will lose all the expanded flowers. Nico-fume is a safe fumigant, which will not injure the blooms.

Calceolarias.

The earliest flowers are now opening on the herbaceous calceolarias, and if the plants have not yet been staked, the necessary supports should be supplied at once, as the plants are extremely brittle and easily broken. The glass must be shaded for calceolarias, or the flowers will quickly burn. They cannot be grown too cool and airy now. The rugosa section, of which the variety Golden Gem, well known as a bedding plant in Europe, is best known, are specially useful Memorial day plants, worthy of much more extended culture commercially. The flowers are smaller than those of the herbaceous section, golden yellow in color. The stems are stiff and the flowers possess excellent substance. For bouquet work they are excellent. There is a new hybrid between the rugosa and herbaceous sections, with flowers of the same color as Golden Gem, but treble the size, named C. Stuarti, which when better known will become popular. The rugosa section are best propagated from cuttings in September or October and grown along in a cold house, but they can also be had in two or three colors from seed.

Cyclamens.

There is always a danger of the little cyclamens being somewhat neglected at this season, owing to the rush of other duties. They should now be establishing themselves in 3-inch pots, with the stronger plants in 4-inch pots. They will not require any shade as yet. A light bench in a house held at 50 to 55 degrees at night will suit them to a nicety. Keep weeds removed, the surface soil stirred occasionally and give the plants a spraying in the afternoon of bright days.

Any plants still growing in flats should be potted off as soon as possible. Use a good proportion of leaf-mold at the first potting; a heavier loam later. Always use a good proportion of sharp sand, and some finely broken charcoal is liked by cyclamens.

Outdoor Annuals.

The soil in many sections is now in excellent condition for sowings of a number of the hardier annuals. Of these Centaurea Cyanus, imperialis and moschata, sweet sultan, are better put in at once. Mignonette and sweet alyssum can be sown now, as well as at intervals later in the season. Tall and dwarf nasturtiums, ipomœas, larkspur, lupines, candytuft, calendula, scabiosa, schizanthus, poppies and annual sunflowers can all be sown with safety now, and the majority will do better than if left unsown till a month hence.

Pulverize the soil well where all flower seeds are sown and cover according to the size of seeds.

Hardy Perennials.

The covering will have been removed from all hardy perennials some time ago, and with recent copious rains and warmth they will be making rapid growth. If you failed to give them any surfacing of manure last fall, they can still be much improved by a topdressing of nitrate of soda, blood and bone or dried blood, afterwards running the hoe or cultivator among them. Be careful in scattering fertilizer not to bring it in direct contact with the foliage, nor too close to the plants.

Any planting of perennials, which it is intended to do in spring, should be hurried along. Fall is the best time for this work, but many customers will be wanting it done now. Results from spring planting are less satisfactory than if the same work had been done the previous October. Fall planted stock has a chance to get established, while in the spring many of the plants are almost in bloom when moved.

Seeds of perennials, which have been pricked off in flats, can now be set out in nursery rows at any time. Let the rows be two feet apart, to allow of proper cultivation, and choose, if possible, a cloudy day before or after rain for the work of transplantation.

Geraniums

LEAVES DISEASED.

Kindly tell me what I should do with my geraniums. Enclosed you will find a sample of them. If there is any remedy, I would be glad to know what it is. Last year I had over 500 of this kind, and they are coming this year.

C. H. Z. J.

Soil containing too much rotted manure or fertilizer, a cold, damp atmosphere, too much moisture at the roots and on the foliage, decaying rubbish under the benches, or a close and stagnant atmosphere are each and all conducive to the spread of the disease you have. It is common, and complaints come each year from half the states in the Union about it. Do not coddle your plants; 48 to 50 degrees at night is high enough. Do not keep them constantly wet at the root. Allow them to get fairly dry between waterings. This allows wood and foliage to become tougher, and more disease-proof. All possible sunshine, abundant air when not in cold draughts, and perfect cleanliness are the remedies to adopt in combating the trouble.

C. W.

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

I send you a geranium plant that is diseased. Several in my house are like this one and all the same variety. What is the cause of their condition and will they amount to anything? H. W. L.

The plant forwarded contained healthy roots and the stem seemed firm and plump. The foliage, however, was rather badly diseased. I would advise isolating these plants. Pick off decaying foliage. Run on the dry side in a sunny house for a time, gradually increasing the water supply as new growth appears. Keep the foliage dry, and I think your plants will grow out of this trouble. If they do not show signs of improvement after two weeks of this treatment, it would be better to discard them. Some varieties of geraniums are more susceptible to disease than others. Overpropagation, improper atmospheric conditions and compost will all cause disease. C. W.

AT FRANKS'.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made at the establishment of Frank Bros., Beardstown, Ill. One of the pictures shows the front view of the greenhouses, which are 4 years old, while at the right is the new office building, completed this autumn.

The other picture shows a bed of Musa sumatrana, surrounded by cannas. This musa is seldom seen, but it makes a fine effect where a large bed of sub-tropical plants is wanted.

SINGLE VIOLETS.

I have never grown violets, but intend to do so next winter. I would like to hear through the REVIEW in regard to the Princess of Wales violet. Which way is considered the best to grow them, in benches or solid beds? I live in Massachusetts. Will runners rooted this spring bloom next winter? F. H. B.

Everything considered, the Princess of Wales violet will be the most satisfactory variety for you to grow. There are a number of newer sorts, but Princess of Wales can be had at a much lower price than any of these and is not surpassed by any of them in vigor, floriferousness and size of flower.

Runners rooted now, planted out in rows two feet apart and nine to twelve inches between the plants, will make strong plants to lift in the fall. The ground must be kept clear of weeds and well stirred by the cultivator all summer and runners removed as they appear. Solid beds are much superior to raised benches for single violets. They like a soil containing at least one-fourth of rotted cow manure. This should be prepared and stacked as soon as possible.

Do not be in a hurry about lifting your plants in the fall. Doubles do well housed in August or grown indoors all summer, where there are movable sashes, but singles are better left outdoors in your state until the plants have had a few degrees of frost. A suitable date would be October 5 to 10. Many are planted much later. C. W.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

The Horticultural Societies.

Horticultural societies in England continue to make steady progress in the right direction, and this may be taken as a sure indication of the trade in plants and seeds being in the ascendency also. The Royal Horticultural Society had a profit of £350 from its shows in 1908, and the National Rose Society a profit of £150. The latter has recently secured 126 new members. The National Sweet Pea Society has enlisted about 150 new members since the annual meeting and the Dahlia and Carnation Societies are progressing satisfactorily. Unfortunately, the National Chrysanthemum Society is in rough water financially, but no doubt it will weather the storm.

The National Sweet Pea Society keeps well abreast of all that is required of it, thanks to the man at the helm. The official catalogue of sweet pea names, just issued, should be in the hands of every man who professes to know or desires to know about sweet peas. It is a comprehensive list, reflecting credit upon the compiler, Miss Jessie Cuthbertson, daughter of William Cuthbertson, head of the firm of Dobbie & Co., Rothesay, and for this work she has been awarded the society's gold medal. The list, published at sixpence, and all information about the society, may be obtained from the secretary, Charles H. Curtis, Adelaide road, Brentford, Middlesex.

Wired Stems in Shows.

At the Carnation Society's shows it is customary to show the blooms without wiring the stems, but this system formed the subject of an animated discussion at the after-dinner conference of carnation growers March 24. R. F. Felton introduced the subject and strongly advocated wiring the stems to enhance the general appearance of the show, as large flowers on yard-long stems, describing a semicircle, necessitated ladies and gentlemen going down on their knees to get a view of the flowers.

It is true that many of the flowers shown were too heavy for the stems and there was much bending and breaking of the latter. The subject brought well-known growers, such as Page, Dutton, Mortimer, Engelmann, etc., to their feet, and while the balance of opinion was against wiring, the question is down again for further debate.

A considerable trade is done with Germany, France and Belgium in carnation blooms and plants, and their culture is being taken up fairly well, especially in Germany. It is to the interest of growers in these countries to take to them, as heavy consignments of flowers are sent from London weekly to the florists in Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, etc. A new society has been formed at Antibes (Alpes-Maritimes), France, in the interests of carnation culture. It is styled La Societé Nationale des Œillettistes (Carnations), and the secretary is M. Jules Grec, of Antibes.

Which Are the Best Sweet Peas?

Coming back to sweet peas, one of the London gardening journals recently took the votes of fifty sweet pea experts on Bed of Musa Sumatrana and Cannas.

"Which, in your opinion, is the best sweet pea in commerce?" Mrs. Hardcastle Sykes comes out on top, with fourteen votes; next, Countess Spencer, with ten; Evelyn Hemus, seven; Constance Oliver, six; Mrs. Henry Bell, three; Elsie Herbert, Dorothy Eckford and Etta Dyke, two each.

It may be interesting to readers of the Review to know the favorites of a few of the experts. R. H. Bath, Ltd., C. H. Curtis and W. Deal voted for Mrs. Hardcastle Sykes. S. B. Dicks, well known in America, gave King Edward VII as his favorite. John Green, of Hobbies, Ltd., favored Helen Pierce. W. J. Unwin voted for Etta Dyke; W. Cuthbertson, for Elsie Herbert, and R. Sydenham, popularly known as Uncle Robert, gave his vote to Mrs. Henry Bell.

Rose Rhea Reid was exhibited by Piper & Sons, Uckfield, at a recent R. H. S. show, London, and received an award of merit. A. Piper says that in England it has proved almost all that the raisers claimed for it. It will probably prove a valuable addition to our list of roses for culture under glass. Bee.

PELARGONIUMS.

Please tell us how to grow pelargonium-geraniums. Are they reliable from seed or do they have to be grown from cuttings? What kind of soil do they need? Is it better to set stock plants out in field in summer or grow them in pots inside? E. G. S.

Pelargoniums of the show type, commonly called Lady Washington geraniums, can be raised from seed, but the better plan is to take cuttings. A suitable soil for the final potting is fibrous loam two parts, decayed cow manure one part, with a dash of sand and bone meal. When young use a little leaf-mold and less manure in the loam. The best time to take cuttings is the autumn, September being a good month. These cuttings grown along in a cool, airy house will make bushy stock in 6-inch or 7-inch pots the following April and May.

After the flowering season is over, usually in July, place the pots outdoors. Gradually reduce the water supply. Lay on their sides and keep quite dry for five to six weeks. Then prune back the well ripened wood quite severely. Water a little. When growth starts shake away all soil from the roots. Cut back the roots and place in smaller pots. A 6-inch plant will go in a 4-inch pot. Keep in coldframes until late October, then grow in a cool, light house; 45 degrees at night will suit them. C. W.

A GOTHAM GROUP.

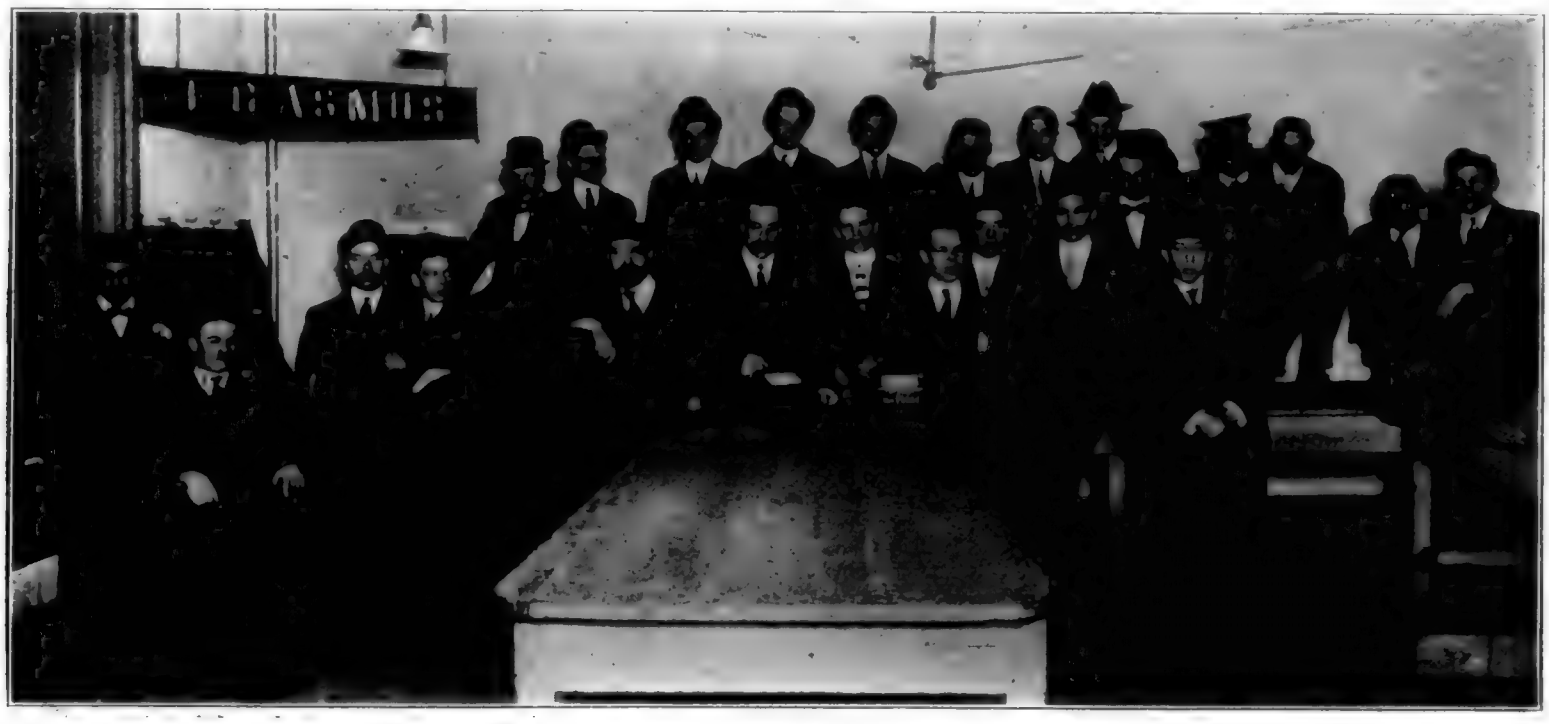
The accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph made the morning before Easter in the big room of the New York Cut Flower Co., in the Coogan building, New York. There are a number of well-known men in the group. At the left stands E. C. Dutcher, of Nyack, and next to him sits Johnnie Weir, of Brooklyn, than whom there are few better known buyers in the New York market. Continuing toward the right, there is Dan Sullivan, of the New York Cut Flower Co.; Percy Richter, representing E. G. Asmus; L. Miller, representing Noe; Johnnie Kral, of Moore, Hentz & Nash; Jonathan Nash, Will Levack, also of the Asmus forces, and Messrs. Tanner, Radice, Hanft, Lentz, Seligman, Vocke, Sampson, Cantillion, Nadler and others.

OBITUARY.

John Scott.

John Scott, of Flatbush, Brooklyn, was shot dead at the door of his greenhouse Monday evening, April 19. The shot was fired by Aloysius Gross, who afterward said the bullet was intended for Scott's foreman, David MacKenzie.

It appears that Gross, who was night fireman, had been discharged by MacKenzie. This had happened before, but he had been taken back by Mr. Scott out of consideration for his family. April 19 MacKenzie again made the charge of drunkenness the reason for dismissal. Gross went to his home, armed himself and returned to the greenhouses. One of the shots which were fired struck Mr. Scott's heart. The physician who was quickly on the spot said that death had been instantaneous.



John Scott was a Scot, born in 1868 at Newlanding, Midlothian. He began his horticultural life when young and worked in Edinburgh, Ayrshire, Taymouth Castle and Rosemont House, from which place he came to Canada some eighteen years ago. His first engagement in America was at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., from which city he moved to the estate of the Hon. Levi P. Morton, where James Boyd was head gardener. His next move was to the Dinsmore estate at Staatsburg, N. Y., where Thomas Emerson was head gardener. Leaving here he accepted the position of superintendent of the Scholes establishment on Keap street, Brooklyn, where he soon was given an interest and built up rapidly a reputation as a plantsman, shipping his Boston ferns especially to every part of the country. Nephrolepis Scottii, the compact Boston, was a sport found by him, and its wide dissemination made his name known through the length and breadth of floriculture. While his fame rests on the fern, he was an expert all-round plantsman and, working against odds, had built up a fine range of glass and a prosperous business. The place now includes about 100,000 feet of glass and about three acres in nursery. He had just recovered from a long and serious illness, but had done a big Easter business, and looked forward to a big spring demand, and on the day of his death had planned the erection of two more houses.

In 1906 Mr. Scott was president of the New York Florists' Club. He was a member of the S. A. F., and active in all trade affairs. He also held memberships in the F. & A. M. and Clan McDonald. His family consisted of wife and four children, the eldest, John, Jr., 7 years of age. He also is survived by his father and mother, two sisters and three brothers.

The funeral will be held Friday, April 23, and will be largely attended by those in the trade.

Francis Calvert.

Francis Calvert, senior member of the firm of F. Calvert & Son, Lake Forest, Ill., died Wednesday, April 14, at the age of 79 years. He was born at Ecclefechan, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, February 14, 1830. He came to America July 4, 1854, and spent two years in Tarrytown, N. Y., under John Wallace, on what is now the W. D. Rockefeller estate. Removing to Chicago in 1856, he was married to Jane Wallace September 10, 1857. He was in charge of the S. H. Kerfoot estate, at Lakeview, until March, 1859, when he removed to Lake Forest, where he laid out the H. M. Thompson and D.

An Easter Group in the Rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co.

R. Holt places. Later he laid out the C. D. Bradley, John V. Farwell, C. B. Farwell and W. H. Smith places.

He built his first commercial greenhouse in 1875. The firm of F. Calvert & Son, consisting of the late Francis Calvert and his son, Edgar S. Calvert, was established in 1884. This firm was, it is believed, the pioneer firm in shipping to the Chicago wholesale market.

Mr. Calvert had been a member of the Lake Forest Presbyterian church since 1861. He is survived by his wife and also by five children, Mrs. William L. Anderson, of Riverside, Cal.; Mrs. William Beynon, of Denver, Colo.; William W. Calvert, of Denver, Colo., and Edgar S. and Miss Harriet Calvert, of Lake Forest. The funeral took place from the residence at Lake Forest, Friday, April 16.

L. J. Risser.

Lewis J. Risser, proprietor of the Mosbæk Greenhouse Co., Onarga, Ill., died suddenly in New York April 13. He was not known in the trade, having devoted little attention to the greenhouse business now under the management of C. W. Reimers, but he was widely known in the canning trade, having been president of the Iroquois Canning Co., of Onarga, the town's largest industry and one of the largest corn-packing concerns in the United States. The Canner and Dried Fruit Packer said in its last issue:

"Mr. Risser's heart was in the canning business. He was alive to everything likely to advance the interests of the Iroquois Canning Co., and he in almost equal degree concerned himself with every movement calculated to promote the progress and welfare of the industry in which he for years figured so prominently. His keen intelligence, energy and unselfishness were long ago recognized by his fellow packers, who honored him with their confidence and were pleased more than once to entrust to him the conduct of plans in which they were mutually interested. Only last month the members of the Western Packers' Canned Goods Association showed their esteem for him and their recognition of his energy and ability by unanimously reëlecting him to the presidency of that organization, the oldest as well as one of the most influential canners' associations in this country. He had at other times held various official positions in canners' organizations, including a vice-presidency of the national association and membership in the advisory committee of Canners' Exchange, in the growth of which he was actively interested and contributed much to its success."

Lewis J. Risser was born September 19, 1848, at Ashland, O. He went with his father's family to Onarga, Ill., about 1863. For forty years he was engaged with his father, Peter Risser, in a general mercantile and grain business at that place. He entered the corn canning business in 1892. Mr. Risser was a prominent member of the First Presbyterian church of Onarga for over forty years, and took great interest in religious and Y. M. C. A. work. He is survived by his widow and daughter, who will continue the various business enterprises, including the greenhouse interests established by Ludwig Mosbæk.

Adolph Miellez.

Adolph Miellez, of Waldheim, West Springfield, Mass., well known as a horticulturist and gardener for nearly half a century, died by a fall from his wagon, April 13, at the age of 74 years. He had been for years subject to a heart disease, and the fall was evidently due to a seizure such as he sometimes had after extra exertion, but in falling he struck on his head between the wheels, cutting a large gash, causing a fracture of the skull, and at the same time breaking his neck.

He was born in Oldenburg, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, August 2, 1834. His father was a contractor, carpenter and builder. He studied horticulture and forestry in Dresden and Berlin, whence he went to the celebrated Kew gardens, London. Samuel Parsons, of Flushing, L. I., one of the principal horticulturists of this country fifty years ago, found Mr. Miellez at Kew, and engaged him to come to America in his employ. Thence he removed to Springfield on the invitation of the late B. K. Bliss, with whom he worked for some years, and became eventually a prominent flower grower, having at one time a large greenhouse establishment on Plainfield street, and later he had greenhouses on Massasoit street, on the Chapin farm. About ten years ago he bought a tract of land from the Champion estate on the Amostown road in West Springfield, where he had since lived.

Mr. Miellez's first wife was Miss Agnes Vix, and they had eight children, all of whom are living. They were, in the order of their birth, Agnes, Isabel, Adolf, Cecile, Frederick, George, Marie and Grace. About sixteen years ago Mr. Miellez married a second time, his wife being Miss Margarethe Von Mitzlaff, who was for years teacher of the voice at Smith college and is now a teacher in Springfield. They built the house at Waldheim, their remarkable garden residence, and there he was engaged in his favorite occupation, as it was his constant business, of growing flowers and fruits.

Mr. Miellez was an earnest socialist, and edited Springfield's sole socialist paper, which was able and interesting, but had but a brief life. During this period he was at one time the socialist candidate for mayor.

Edward F. Daly.

Edward F. Daly, a florist at Nineteenth street and Prospect park, west, Brooklyn, N. Y., died recently at his home, 320 Prospect park, west.

James J. Kent.

James J. Kent, 59 years of age, and for many years a florist and gardener in Pittsburg, Pa., died recently at his home, 7023 Hamilton avenue, in that city, after an illness of five months. He was born in Belfast, Ireland, and came to America when a young man. He was a member of the Lincoln Avenue Methodist Episcopal church. Surviving him are his wife, who was Miss Ada E. Sowkes, and two daughters, Mrs. Samuel McCaslin and Mrs. J. H. Wilcox, of Pittsburg.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Easter will be early in 1910—March 27.

Senator Aldrich, of tariff bill fame, ought to be in sympathy with the trade, all right. Look at his greenhouses on page 9.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The English trade papers chronicle the death of a grower through drinking nicotine extract. In America those who wish to live can find something better to drink, and those who wish to die need not choose so painful a method.

An item has recently been going the rounds, to the effect that Julius Roehrs, Mrs. Roehrs, their daughter and son-in-law have gone to Europe and will visit the Ghent quinquennial show. An English correspondent notes that as the next quinquennial is in 1913 the travelers need not make haste.

VALUABLE TO EVERYONE.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

The Florists' Review has proved itself a very valuable paper to everyone interested in the florists' business. AMOS F. BALFOOT.

Committee Appointments.

President Valentine has appointed the remaining two members of the advisory committee for the trade exhibition at Cincinnati. The committee now stands: Albert McCullough, chairman; R. Witterstaetter and E. G. Gillett.

RECIPE FOR KILLING WEEDS.

Referring to page 37 of the Review of April 1, please see if the recipe for killing weeds is correct. You state that two pounds of soda, one pound of arsenic and ten gallons of water, boiled, etc., will cost one cent per gallon. Arsenic cannot be bought here for less than 40 cents per pound and soda at 3½ cents. That would make the material cost 47 cents for ten gallons. Is there not something wrong with your reckoning?

W. A. M.

The foregoing query was submitted to Theodore Wirth, the author of the formula for weed destruction to which W. A. M. refers. Mr. Wirth replies as follows:

"In answer to your inquiry regarding the cost of the weed killer which I recommended, I wish to say that the figures given in my statement are correct. We are paying 8.5 cents per pound for the white arsenic, and 1.1 cents for soda, making the total cost for the quantities of materials used in the prescription given 10.7 cents. The one pound of arsenic and two pounds of soda, boiled in three gallons of water as described in my prescription, and diluted by seven gallons of water added after the cooking is done, make ten gallons, which makes the cost per gallon a trifle more than 1 cent."

LADIES' S. A. F.

Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, President L. S. A. F., has appointed the following committees on resolutions: Mrs. Geo. Asmus, Mrs. E. F. Winterson and Mrs. James P. Foley, upon the death of Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; Mrs. W. J. Vesey, to appoint two associates to act with her upon the death of Mrs. D. E. Gorman, Williamsport, Pa.; Mrs. F. H. Traendly, Mrs. John Scott and Mrs. John V. Phillips, extending sympathy to E. V. Hallock's family. Will the above committees report to the secretary as soon as possible?

Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

After a holiday there nearly always is a lull in the demand, and Easter was no exception; the trouble is that the market has not yet recovered. In fact, production has been greatly increased by the few days of spring weather, and practically everything is in oversupply. It is possible to sell through the usual channels only a small part of each day's receipts, and after the needs of the regular buyers have been supplied it is a case of move the surplus in any manner possible. In cut flowers the only scarcity is of cattleyas, for which the grand opera has made a special demand. The price has advanced to from $6 to $9 per dozen, and it is not possible to fill all orders. Smilax also is short of the demand, and hardy cut ferns are running low, so that the price has advanced to $3 per thousand. Bulbous stock is pretty well at an end. Southern jonquils are over, and there are light receipts of daffodils grown under glass. Tulips also are about all marketed, but there is no special call for these items.

Roses have suffered rather more than anything else. The increase in production has been so great, of Beauties as well as other roses, that the regular trade can use only a small part. The quality is superlatively good. No better roses ever were seen in this market, and anyone who can use a quantity of stock can do specially profitable business at this time. Maid is suffering severely because Killarney is so plentiful, and those growers who are beginning to cut Kaiserin find a decidedly slow market because Bride is so good.

The carnation growers are not picking all they could. Average prices have gone down so that a good many growers are letting the stock hang on the plants in the hope that a day or two will bring a change, but experienced observers feel that there is little prospect of improvement in the market for some time. With a majority of the growers, crops are just at the stage where bright weather will bring enormous production. The weather has been cold and dark for weeks, and a turn to pleasant spring days is due. It can mean nothing less than a still further increase in production. Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress are suffering more than other carnations. There still is a fair call for white. It is almost sure to be a case of accumulating supplies until Friday, with a cheap clean-up to the department stores and others who run special Saturday sales.

Sweet peas had a day or two of better prices, but the spring crops are coming in with the largest growers. The weather has been especially favorable for the sweet pea growers, continuing cool and

Fancy Stock

...LARGE SUPPLIES...

THERE are no dull times in this house—it is by far the biggest spring season we ever have had. There's a reason. It is because we have the quality of goods that attracts the buyers and the quantity of stock to fill all orders promptly and to everybody's satisfaction.

THE WAY TO DO BUSINESS IS TO HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL.

Carnations

Carnations are in heavy crop with a great many growers—but they don't all produce the same grade. Remember, it's not what you pay, but what you get, determines value. Our Carnations have been, and are, the largest lot of strictly high-grade stock on this market. 10,000 if you want them.

Roses

Maid, Bride, Killarney and Richmond are all fine and our supply heavy. Order some of these and you will be back for larger lots. Kaiserin just coming in.

Beauties

We are beginning to cut our annual spring crop of Beauties. Use them, they will make fit friends for you. We shall be specially strong on Beauties this spring and summer.

Sweet Peas

The spring crop is just in, keeping up a succession of fancy flowers on long stems, as fine as any we have had in this exceptionally good Sweet Pea season, and this market has never seen such peas as we have handled the last two months—or so many of them. The fancy peas make a great hit. All colors. Thousands of them. We do a big shipping business on these.

To be sure you get them in best condition, peas are picked specially for all fill orders on file at noon for evening shipment.

Lilies

Fancy, long Easter Lilies for your spring wedding decorations. Also plenty of Callas.

Ferns

We have the best Ferns in this market. Enough to last some time.

keeping the vines producing good stock much longer than they usually do. There is much fancy stock on the market.

Violets are selling cheaply. The best stock brings 50 cents, but a large part can only be sold at whatever the street merchants are pleased to offer, which isn't much, with roses and carnations as cheap as they now are, if a lot is taken. Singles are pretty poor.

Easter lilies and callas have joined the oversupply. Lilac from southern Illinois arrived in quantity April 19. It sold well, if at somewhat cheap prices, as an outcome.

Call Thompson Bankrupt.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed April 14, against John D. Thompson, of 6222 Ingleside avenue. The petitioning creditors and their claims are: Charles Wagner, merchandise, $49.60; M. B. Van Arman, a small sum for labor and material, and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., "rent, merchandise sold and delivered, a horse, attorney's fees and other items," $4,132.40. It is alleged that Thompson committed an act of bankruptcy December 11, when he assigned and transferred to one Ernest Oram certain shares of the capital stock of the Thompson Carnation Co., with the intent to make him a preferred creditor. The case appears to be a continuation of the fight that has been going on within the Thompson company for a couple of years.

Various Notes.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, Wis., was in town April 21 and stated that he had acquired the C. G. Dwight plant, erected last year in his town, taking possession April 20.

Mrs. O. P. Bassett, who returned last week with Mr. Bassett from Hot Springs, Va., was taken ill shortly after reaching home, and is now in a serious condition at the Mary Thompson hospital.

It is reported that James Psenecka, who has been foreman for Wietor Bros. for some time, with a partner has completed arrangements for building a range of glass on property recently acquired about a mile and a half west of Gross Point.

Andrew Cronis, of Johnson & Cronis, has been on the sick list since Easter.

George Reinberg is now cutting cattleyas to the extent of six or eight dozens a day.

W. J. Smyth had a large order April 19 for the Dixon funeral.

C. W. McKellar says cattleyas are no more to be had in the eastern markets than they are here.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving considerable quantities of rubrum lilies that sell fairly well. The Winterson Seed Store is doing a rushing counter trade these days.

C. M. Dickinson is with a friend from Park Ridge at West Baden, Ind., this week.

Clifford Pruner, of E. H. Hunt's, is at home from a trip of fifteen weeks.

Julius Schnapp is now with the Alpha Floral Co.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has had indoor irises for some weeks, and says it was only within the last few days the supply has been equal to the demand.

Frank Beu is cutting his spring crop of La France and Brunner roses.

quainted with the trade before their own place is completed. All their plans are laid in a broad way.

Bassett & Washburn have been showing the trade some fine blooms of the new pink rose, Princess, sent them by the E. G. Hill Co., with the assurance that at Richmond this is considered by all odds the best pink rose for summer, as a companion to Kaiserin.

Peter Heirens, who with his partner, Mr. Steinmetz, recently bought the Henry Philip place at Rogers Park, has now acquired the Jacob Philip place, adjoining the first purchase. They have bought the two establishments outright, but do not get possession until August 1. Carnations are to be grown the first year, with roses later.

Julius Schnapp's old store at Forty-seventh street and Forestville avenue is now conducted as the Warwick Flower Shop. The proprietor is C. S. Reidenouer, who is connected with the real estate business next door, and who employs Fred Dinger, formerly with Muir, to manage the store for him. It is reported Mr. Dinger is figuring on buying the place.

James Novak, who is one of Peter Reinberg's rose growers, is preparing to go to Charles City, Ia., where he has been offered a good thing by the Sherman Nursery Co.

F. Rodtke has a neat store at 438 Forty-third street.

John Michelsen, at E. C. Amling's, says it is remarkable how good some of the Rhinebeck violets continue to be. He says he thinks the growers must sort them after picking and ship only the best.

Peter Reinberg is figuring on getting a switch from the Northwestern to his range on the east side of Robey street, thereby saving hauling coal.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is again cutting the Cardinal rose in considerable quantity. If it could be done as well all winter it soon would be a leading variety.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports a good business in lawn grass seed, put up in cartons, which a large number of retail florists, not only in Chicago but elsewhere, are handling.

The L. Coatsworth plant at New Castle has been sold to Otto Benthey, who has been in charge ever since the range was built.

W. J. Smyth is running a fine new thirty horse-power Studebaker automobile, which he uses both for business and pleasure.

There were flowers galore at the opening of the National League baseball season April 14, including the largest floral cup or urn ever seen at the park, and thirty-five big bouquets. Of course Leonard Kill had charge of the floral ceremonies, assisted by John Zech.

The best Easter rose plants seen in Chicago retail stores were the variety Tausendschon. C. A. Samuelson had some plants from the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, that had wonderful flowers.

Among last week's visitors was John Walker, of Youngstown, O.

The Market.

The week following Easter found a marked change in cut flower conditions, a general decline in prices taking place, carnations suffering the most. Conditions continue sluggish, and far too many flowers are arriving for the market's requirements. Roses are cleaning out fairly well, although the supply promises soon to be excessive. Beauties are more abundant, and select flowers are lower in price. There has been a recession in prices on practically all grades. Carnations are selling lower than for a long time, $1 per hundred and even lower prices being recorded. Of course, good stock sells at higher rates. Violets are nearing the end. Singles are getting small and pale, while doubles are dwindling in size. The supply of these latter usually lasts until May.

Sweet peas are abundant but lower. Lilies and callas move slowly. For valley there is less call. The heaviest lot of indoor bulbous stock is over for the season. Outdoor narcissi will be ready within a few days. In tulips Murillo and Couronne d'Or are mostly seen. Some good Spanish irises and gladioli are arriving. Marguerites are plentiful, yellow selling higher than white. Some good mignonette, snapdragon and stocks are seen. There is a fair call for green stock. Trade in bedding plants is commencing, but will not become active for a few weeks yet.

Florists' Club.

The annual club banquet April 14, in spite of the night being about the worst of the season, a drenching rain falling for many hours, was the most successful the club has yet held; 175 were present. The tables were beautifully decorated with a profusion of choice flowers. Palms from E. MacMulkin adorned the stage. William Sim, as usual, remembered every lady with a handsome bunch of sweet peas.

roars of laughter with his many humorous stories and witty sallies. William Downs, W. N. Craig, J. W. Duncan, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Peter Fisher, T. J. Grey, Robert Cameron and A. F. Barney were speechmakers. Miss Hannigan sang several songs delightfully. Miss Rifford gave an excellent piano solo.

Nearly the entire company stayed for the dancing, a large proportion taking part in the grand march and circle. Coombie's orchestra furnished excellent dancing music and the floor was well filled until the early hours of the morning. P. M. Miller made a capable floor director, Joshua Lawson being his assistant, and James L. Miller, Robert Cameron, Frank Murray and Edward Rose capable aids. The reception committee consisted of J. P. A. Guerineau, W. J. Stewart, George C. Butterworth, W. J. Collins, P. J. Turley, Wilfrid Wheeler, James Wheeler and W. J. Kennedy.

The unanimous opinion of all present was that the latest banquet was in all respects the best ever and nothing but words of praise have been heard of it.

The regular club meeting held April 20 attracted 100 members, the best audience yet seen at an April meeting, the chief attraction being a paper by L. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., on the comparative values of the various forcing roses. Mr. Reuter's data was very interesting and a fine discussion followed. Among those taking part were: W. H. Elliott, Eber Holmes, D. Finlayson, K. Finlayson, Robert Cameron, P. Welch, Wilfrid Wheeler, Thomas Coles, J. W. Duncan, Wm. Downs, F. E. Palmer. An enthusiastic vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer.

The banquet committee presented its financial report, which was of a satisfactory nature. Letters of thanks were voted to donors of plants and flowers. Three new members were elected. There was an unusually attractive lot of exhibits, including superb antirrhinums from Wm. Swan, primulas from Thomas Coles and a large vase of rosy pink annual larkspur from W. N. Craig, all of which received reports of merit. E. Holmes had two vases of roses and Mr. Reuter brought a fine bunch of My Maryland. R. Cameron received honorable mention for Rhododendron præcox. Mr. Holmes showed cannas and Mr. Coles a collection of Alpine plants.

Washington, will deliver a lecture on the water garden.

An invitation was received for a field day at E. J. Shaylor's peony gardens in June.

Various Notes.

Thomas Roland reports Easter trade as generally satisfactory, much more so than in 1908. Stock consisted chiefly of pink and crimson ramblers, acacias, boronias, marguerites, lilies, genistas, azaleas, hydrangeas, ericas and bougainvilleas. All were cleared out at good prices.

Thomas Stock, of Dorchester, and Mann Bros. are among those bringing in some handsome Spanish iris at present.

Frank T. White, of Holbrook, is walking very erect these days, the cause being the advent of a bouncing baby boy.

William Sim sold nearly 200,000 violets for Easter. A big fire in Cliftondale, near him, caused so much smoke and heat, added to the high wind prevailing, that he lost nearly 100,000 blooms in his frames.

Boston, unless all signs fail, is to have a big international exhibition in 1920 in the nature of a tricentenary celebration of the landing of the pilgrims on Plymouth Rock. Boston has never yet had a world's fair or other mammoth exhibition. It is expected that the one now being launched will surpass anything of the kind yet seen in the new world.

William Patterson, of Wollaston, is handling some fine gladioli of the large flowered type at Park Street market.

The market Wednesday, April 21, was exceedingly weak, carnations $1 to $2, roses $1 to $6, and the slump general.

The Market.

During the week following Easter the business in both retail and wholesale circles was fairly good, owing to a number of weddings and a great deal of funeral work, which was distributed pretty well among the store men, as all say they had a good week's business at good profits. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and to be had almost at the buyer's own price. A great glut in roses was found at the wholesale houses Monday, April 19. Carnations and sweet peas were also plentiful, it being impossible to dispose of more than half to the local buyers at prices in thousand lots that would hardly look well in print. All of the rose stock is of excellent quality. In carnations the stock is equally fine. The bulk of this stock comes from Kirkwood, which is classed as home grown stock, also a fine lot of sweet peas and California violets. Southern Illinois lilac is now coming to this market in large shipments, also outdoor tulips and narcissi. The first of these always sell well and hurt to some extent the sale of other flowers, which are in abundance at present.

Anything in green goods is to be had at regular prices.

local trade, who extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, Ill., is consigning to H. G. Berning a fine lot of Boston Market carnations. These are in good demand, as they are the best keepers among the whites.

Robert J. Windler, on South Grand avenue, says that Easter trade was beyond all expectations. Mr. Windler handled a fine lot of blooming plants from his brother's place on Delore avenue.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., was in St. Louis several times last week buying cut stock. Mr. Denker says he did a large Easter business, and trade since has kept up nicely.

Tuesday, April 13, the newly elected mayor, Frederick W. Kriesmann, was installed into office. His office was beautifully decorated with plants for the occasion. More than fifty bunches of Beauties and large floral designs were presented, which gave the trade a busy day.

Frank Fillmore is again first in the field with candidums, cutting his first for the Easter trade. These were handled by C. A. Kuehn, and sold clean at good prices. Mr. Fillmore says his house of callas also brought him good returns.

Charles Schoenle, of the Schoenle Floral Co., handled all the cut flowers sold at the big Knights of Columbus carnival in Armory hall last week. Mr. Schoenle had to hustle to keep up with the rush which surrounded the flower booth.

There were great crowds of visitors at Shaw's Gardens last week, viewing the large tulip beds in full bloom. These were finer than in any of the previous years. Sunday great crowds visited the different city parks, where all the tulip beds are in full bloom.

James Young, president of the C. Young & Sons Co., says that their Easter trade, both local and shipping, was by far the best they ever experienced. Everything in the plant and cut flower line sold well and at good prices.

The opening of the baseball season Wednesday, April 14, made a busy day for some in the trade, as a number of large floral designs were presented to the manager and players.

Easter as this year, and their show houses looked it on Monday, April 12. Both had to employ extra help for delivery.

J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., is sending a fine cut of Bride, Maid and short Beauties to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. This firm is also handling fine roses from the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co.

Florists west of Grand avenue, namely, Fred C. Weber, Miss Newman, Fred H. Weber, Kalisch Bros., J. F. Windt and Sanders Nurseries, say that business was never better than this Easter; everything practically cleaned out.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Miss Bell Miller and A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, consignors to C. A. Kuehn, in this market, are sending in some extra fine quality of roses. J. J. B.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

Weather conditions during Easter week were changeable. It rained the first part of the week and blew a gale, doing great damage to greenhouses and other property. It then turned cold, making the wrapping of plants a necessity, except at midday, when the temperature crawled up to 40 degrees for a while, then quietly retired below 32 degrees.

Business was good. The quantity of plants and flowers on hand for the occasion was large, but the demand was such as to clean it all out. The lily was in specially heavy supply, but sold out so closely that orders for both plants and cut flowers were turned down.

There was an abundance of bulbous stock, azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, lilac and hyacinths. A few spiræas, cinerarias and obconica were offered, but they are not as popular as formerly.

The only complaint heard about plants was, "We could not get them down to the store fast enough, they sold so quickly," and the fact is patent that Easter is becoming more and more an occasion for the sale of plants, as against cut flowers.

Carnations are the people's flower, and took the lead, with roses next. Red roses and carnations were extremely scarce. White were about equal to the demand and, strange to say, the Lawson, or, more properly speaking, the Lawson color was the last to move, and had there been any other color to take their place, they would have had to go to the dump. It seems the people are getting tired of the Lawson, and prefer some other color instead.

Violets were a quick seller, and at the last there were not enough to go around. There were not nearly as many bulbs grown as last year, which helped to give the market a better tone.

Shipping trade struck its former gait, and was much better than last year.

Dunmore, Pa.—Mrs. Reynolds, wife of Arthur Reynolds, a florist, committed suicide April 3, by drinking carbolic acid. She was 19 years old and had been married only a few months.

To My Patrons and Friends in All Branches of The Trade

I beg to thank you for the unbounded confidence you have expressed toward me this past Easter, as exemplified by the unprecedented amount of business I was enabled to handle through your reliance in my ability to fill your orders or to dispose of your products. I take this method of assuring you all of my sincere gratitude toward you, and wish at the same time to emphasize the fact that growers and retailers can be brought amicably together only through the intermediary of a middle man or commission dealer who has at heart the interest and welfare of both parties.

It has ever been my aim to find the best market possible, in order that growers who sold their flowers through my establishment should receive the highest market values, and to this end I have traveled extensively and have been successful in establishing business relations in many other cities, to the mutual advantage of growers and myself.

With my steadily increasing volume of business, I found it necessary to secure the most commodious store available in the Wholesale Cut Flower district, and consider myself fortunate, indeed, when I became established in my present location. I have the most up-to-date and best equipped wholesale flower store in New York City.

I wish also to advise my patrons and friends that, increasing a business in volume to such an enormous extent as has resulted from my efforts, necessarily brings with it increasing cares and responsibilities, and I have associated with me Mr. M. W. Kempner, a business man of qualifications admirably adapted to assist me in still making the business dealings between grower, retailer and commission man more profitable to each other.

Assuring all that in the future I will, as in the past, endeavor to further the interests of grower and retailer alike, I am,

Yours truly,

Alexander J. Guttman

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The face of nature has changed in a day. Spring is here and the chill of the last week was winter's farewell. Magnolias and forsythias are in bloom. The leaves are opening and the grass in the parks is green. The temperature is up to 70 degrees and the spring sunshine has flooded the wholesale cut flower market with everything in great profusion. It would take more than a Patten to corner the rose market, judging by the shipments arriving daily. The day of the 8-cent loaf may be here, but the 8-cent Brides and Maids have departed on summer tours. It was a mighty fat Maid that asked over 4 cents Monday, April 19. All varieties of roses have fallen. A lot of 500 Richmond, selected, brought only 3 cents early in the week, and Chatenay and even Killarney joined the procession of the retrograders.

Carnations have dropped to low quotations and grand stock in quantity can be had at 3 cents, while the common grades have fallen to 50 cents per hundred. Bulbous stock is again abundant and lilies have been more than cut in two, 4 cents to 6 cents buying the best of them. One of the violet kings says, "Cut 'em out," when asked for an average quotation. Few are coming in and 10 cents to 35 cents will probably hold until they vanish for the season. The history of the violet for the season of 1909 will make interesting reading. It has been full of lessons that the wise grower perhaps will heed. But its crowning idiocy was holding on the plants for days before Easter, the enormous supply, to ship it scentless and dropping upon the sensitive New York market. The Easter returns were a practical protest that should be far-reaching in its effect.

Guttman Admits Partner.

So rapidly has the business of Alex. J. Guttman developed recently that he has found it expedient to increase his facilities through the admission of a partner. The new associate is M. W. Kempner, a young business man of splendid character and wide experience. Mr. Guttman is still a young man, in his early thirties, and both these gentlemen have a host of personal friends who wish them great success in their undertaking and a continuance of the growth which has characterized Mr. Guttman's business since its inception. The firm name will remain unchanged.

Various Notes.

The tragic death of John Scott, of Brooklyn, is reported on page 14.

Charles Thorley, at his Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street store, has an effective spring outside decoration, the whole front boxing filled with daffodils, with yellow paint adding to its effectiveness.

In a corner store on Fifth avenue the whole front window is filled with Killarney roses, ticketed $1 per dozen, and a sign, "The New Way," tells the story. Quite novel for society's thoroughfare.

The left-over plants from Easter were mostly large azaleas and daisies and these have done duty in decorations, so that the retailer has had few complaints, and the general returns from the holiday have been universally satisfactory.

Lord & Burnham are stretching enterprising hands towards the boundless west. The company has definitely decided to open a branch office in the Rookery building, La Salle street, Chicago, May 1, with George Sykes, of New York, as resident manager.

West Twenty-eighth street, and during the last four years with the Pennsylvania railroad's new terminal work as inspector, has come back to his first love and is now manager for Charles Millang, in the Crystal Palace, at Sixth avenue and Twenty-seventh street. Mr. Bradshaw was "drowned" once while in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and had several narrow escapes in the dangerous work of excavation.

J. Quille, of Portsmouth, Va., of the Hubert Bulb Co., called on Moore, Hentz & Nash last week on his way to Guernsey, Channel Islands. This firm handles all the stock grown by this house in Virginia, as high as 100,000 sometimes in a day.

Jonathan Nash has just received intelligence of his father's death March 25, in London, England, at the age of 82. The trade extends its sympathy. Mr. Nash leaves four sons and one daughter, one of whom resides in France and three in England.

The seedsmen are still working night and day. There are no exceptions to the rule and the long delay in the coming of seasonable weather has been bringing grist to every mill. Such a planting season has never been known, and even now it seems to be only just beginning. The nurserymen all unite in giving this spring the record for demand and shipments, and the necessary advances in prices seem to have caused no diminution in the trade. There is no limit to the field.

The growers anticipate a record demand for Decoration day, if extensive preparations are a guide. The greenhouses everywhere are full of promise and plants of every suitable kind.

Even the big Metropolitan Sunday papers are booming the bulb business this spring, offering free with a coupon "one gladiolus bulb and one tuberose bulb up to Monday night or until the supply is exhausted."

Charles Thorley is now in his small store on West Twenty-eighth street, a temporary makeshift until the House of Flowers, on the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, opposite McConnell's grand Arcade flower store and conservatory, is opened in the fall.

May 1 the great auto parade in New York will take place; $2,000 in prizes will be given for the finest decorations, $500 being offered for the winner of the first honors. Here will be an opportunity for the florists to demonstrate artistic skill and at the same time reap considerable pecuniary recompense.

Mr. McKinney, who was with Charles Thorley for years, has a temporary headquarters also, at 110 West Twenty-eighth street, but will be in his new store on the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-second street toward the end of May. This corner bids fair to be a great center of the retail cut flower business in the future. Before next Christmas a fellow with a strong arm, say like Pop Anson's, could stand at Forty-second street and Fifth avenue and throw a ball far enough to hit nine or ten of the finest retail flower shops in the world.

Harry A. Bunyard says the suggestion of a sweet pea society has met with unusual and enthusiastic response.

Both Lyman B. Craw, of the Lord & Burnham Co., and Frank Millang, of the Cut Flower Exchange, are convalescing after critical illness. It will be many weeks before complete recovery is possible.

Alex. McConnell's nursery department at New Rochelle is doing a tree-mendous business this spring. His rhododendron, retinospora and blue spruce blocks have been greatly depleted and several large landscape contracts will use up most of his surplus. The Arcade store utilizes all of his forsythia, double flowering Japanese varieties of shrubs and trees and the new varieties of ramblers.

Gunther Bros. find roomier headquarters necessary and May 1 will remove to 110 West Twenty-eighth street, the big store formerly occupied by Joseph Fenrich.

J. J. Fellouris says southern lilac will arrive in quantity next week.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Although late with the Easter report, I want to say that business from all reports was good. The weather conditions could not have been worse, especially the latter part of the week. The beginning of the week brightened up fine and we had happy thoughts of sending the plants out with little protection. Friday came with snow on the ground, which lasted all day, snowing and blowing a gale of sixty miles an hour. Saturday the temperature went down and parts of the day we had 10 degrees of frost. But business was good in spite of the weather, and everything sold well. Lilies were scarce and nearly everybody was looking for open lilies to fill orders on Easter morning. Cut stock did not seem to sell as well as other years. Violets were poor with nearly everybody, but sweet peas and valley were in fine shape.

Various Notes.

Friday night, April 10, fire broke out two doors from the Lenox Flower Shop and for a time it looked as if things were going to do a lot of harm to the Easter stock. Mr. Cloudsley was all prepared for the worst, but fortunately nothing serious happened except a little water in his cellar.

President Slattery was in the chair at the last meeting of the Florists' Club and selected his different committees for the ensuing year. R. A. S.

Hoopeston, Ill.—Andrew Peterson has purchased the interest of his partner in the business of Peterson & Lawrence, and will hereafter go it alone.

Upton, Mass.—During the wind storm of April 8, some of the sashes were torn from the frames at A. A. Bowker's place, and smashed to pieces.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Greens are the only strong feature of a weak market. Conditions were favorable until the close of last week, the demand being sufficient to keep some sort of pace with the supply until Saturday night. Summer heat on Sunday and Monday brought in such an immense quantity of flowers that the market was swamped. The most strenuous efforts of the wholesalers kept a certain amount of stock moving, but the accumulations were large. Prices have fallen all along the line. Beauties are plentiful once more, a condition not seen before this year. The medium grades are still in short supply, the abundance being in long and to a lesser degree in shorts. Other roses are in heavy supply, with little demand for the inferior grades. Mrs. Jardine is not keeping pace with the others as a warm weather rose. Carnations were fairly good stock last week, but this week it is different. Cattleyas are scarce. The smaller Skinneri is in moderate supply. Sweet peas are good and cheap, the better grades selling as well as anything. Valley is a shade scarcer, probably in anticipation of the outdoor crop. White lilac is over, and violets are nearly so. Gardenias are in moderate supply, as regards the finer grade, and plentiful when ordinary stock is under consideration. Southern daffodils seem to be over; the outdoor stock of our own singles and doubles can be seen everywhere. Easter lilies have become plentiful, showing that some blooms did miss Easter, while callas are quite a drug. Daisies are not selling well, barring the pretty pink sport of Queen Alexandra. Cherry and apple blossoms aid the decorator. Wild smilax is still obtainable.

Cold rain improved the market condition slightly Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, by shortening production.

Independence Square.

The bulb planting in Independence square, famous for its historic associations, has been limited this year to four large beds. They are interesting as an illustration of the effect of mass planting. Two circular beds, each some fifteen feet in diameter, are planted with Keizerkroon in the center, surrounded by a broad band of L'Immaculeé. These beds were not at their best in the early part of the week, but will be showy when these lines see print, the two varieties being well timed for what might be termed coöperative blooming. The other two beds, triangular in shape, were planted with a broad triangle of the King of the Blues hyacinths in the center, surrounded with six rows of La Grandesse, white, the border being five rows of Gertrude, pink. The effect, April 19, was striking, every flower stripe being large, the flowers fully developed and well colored. The bulbs for all the city squares, some 65,000 in number, were supplied by Henry F. Michell Co.

Possibilities of the Pansies.

The pansy has for the last three years made its impress on the cut flower market of this city. One specialist, W. A. Knott, of Fox Chase, has devoted his entire time to raising these dainty flowers. Other growers have devoted part of their time and space to the pansy for cut flowers, and even truckers, who formerly grew heartsease, as the pansy is called, only for plants for the garden, have coaxed their stock into bloom in time to harvest a crop of flowers. The bunches have always been sent in mixed colors, usually seven flowers to a bunch. A novelty seen this week at the store of W. E. McKissick & Bros. were bunches of some fifty pansy blooms, each bunch composed of only one variety, some crimson, some blue, some purple, some white, some yellow. These bunches, arranged by Wm. A. Keaton, Andalusia, Pa., a well-known grower of fancy violets, seem a decided advance. It may be that I am wrong in my enthusiasm over these pansies, but they suggested the possibility of corsage bouquets, of luncheon effects, and other telling arrangements in the hands of our skillful retailers.

Various Notes.

D. T. Connor, representing Lord & Burnham Co., has landed the order of the Robert Craig Co. for four greenhouses, each 27x150, at Norwood, Delaware county, Pa. This is a personal triumph for Mr. Connor, as all the leading building firms were figuring on the work. The new place, as stated before in this column, will be used for trying out the company's new seedlings.

Mrs. Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, Delaware county, who underwent a serious operation in the hospital last week, is, her many friends will be delighted to know, recovering. She will be out again this week.

Joseph Callihan, who has taken the Joseph Crompton flower shop on North Fifty-second street, in addition to his own place on Market, near Thirty-eighth street, promises to be an important factor in the West Philadelphia world of flowers.

Robert Crawford, Jr., had a splendid crop of carnations and sweet peas from his greenhouses at Secane for Easter.

M. Rice & Co. have recently received several orders for complete wedding outfits from distant cities.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer corporation, commenting on the tremendous rush of orders to the seed stores, said: "It is as lively as we want." Which, when you know Mr. Thilow's energetic disposition, is most significant.

The steamers Kroonland, Cleveland and Menomonie brought large shipments of goods from abroad for H. Bayersdorfer & Co. this week.

Frank Palmer, with Jacob Becker, says that they are experiencing a good demand for Killarney, Souvenir de Pierre Notting and Richmond roses in pots.

John C. Andre, of Doylestown, Pa., believes that Bride will hold its own against White Killarney.

Mr. and Mrs. Le Moult, of New York, were here a few days ago.

John Lucas & Co. were closed April 19 out of respect to the memory of H. Spencer Lucas.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. consider the situation in the anthracite coal region as serious. The mines are working until the meeting of the operators, to be held in New York April 22.

Easter will be early next year. It falls on March 27 in 1910.

The Robert Craig Co. has been successful in propagating Lorraine begonias a little earlier and a little better than one usually sees them. The stock is now in fine shape. Baby Margaret chrysanthemum promises well, they think. It is being tried by many of the best growers.

PHIL.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Easter trade was probably of the greatest volume ever known here, but it does not follow from this statement that there were no disappointments. Saturday was cloudy, with a heavy wind and a snow squall which lasted for about twenty minutes, which made things look blue for the time being. The wind wilted nearly everything, especially azaleas, but by closing time at night there was little left on the stalls except the poorest stuff, and generally there was satisfaction felt and expressed with the day's business.

There was no scarcity in any line, unless it was in Harrisii lilies, which were not present in the quantities usually seen at this holiday.

At the Florists' Exchange the volume of business was apparently heavier than the average, but Manager Perry, with some extra and efficient help, kept things moving briskly and by nightfall practically everything was cleaned out and at figures fully up to those prevailing ordinarily at this season.

The demand for violets was far above that of all previous Easters. It seemed as though it was to be violet day; huge bunches on the corsage, smaller bunches and the modest little boutonnieres were everywhere. Of course, lily of the valley, roses and carnations put in an appearance, but the violet was unquestionably "Jt."

Various Notes.

The parade on Easter Sunday, on Charles street, a residential and club thoroughfare, is a society institution of this city. Women and men, in finest and newest raiment, issuing from the church after the morning services, moved up and down the street, exchanging greetings and receiving the admiration and criticism of onlookers. For a year or two there was a break in the custom of wearing flowers for personal adornment, but there is a revival in this regard, and this season these decorations were abundant and lovely. The day was cold, with high winds, but the crowd was large. That the flowers gave added charms even to our Baltimore belles, every florist believes.

Almost every house in some sections of the city had its floral display. In more pretentious dwellings azaleas, rhododendrons and other showy sorts were banked in effective array, and the humbler homes had a spiræa, a hyacinth, a pot of tulips or a bunch of Easter flowers in the window. The church displays were more general and often more imposing than ever before. In some churches, where years ago no flowers were tolerated, the adorning of pulpit and chancel was profuse, tasteful and acceptable to the worshipers, as being entirely consonant with the spirit of the day and the place.

Halliday Bros. have planted several thousand seedling lilies for summer blooms.

G. A. Lotze, of Glenburnie, has a fine seedling white carnation which will be planted extensively next season. It is one of the best bloomers he has on his place. He has had several large offers for the entire stock. Q.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Easter week trade was far beyond expectations. The week opened with a rush of work and ended with a ready sale for almost everything in the flower line. Good prices were maintained. Potted plants and bulbous stock were in large demand, as well as fancy boxes of cut flowers.

Amos F. Balfoot followed up a fine Easter with a large wedding decoration April 14. It was for the McCann-Goodwin nuptials and yellow was the color used. The bride carried a shower bouquet of valley and orchids.

COLUMBUS, O.—William Graff, of Graff Bros., has leased for five years, with privilege of renewal for five years, a store room next door to the firm's present quarters.

INSECT POWDER.

Since I have been a subscriber to the REVIEW I have seen many questions asked about remedies for insect pests in greenhouses. Why not use what is commonly known as Insect Powder? It is a sure, reliable remedy, and perfectly harmless to the most delicate vegetation. It will do away with white fly, black and green aphis, red spider and thrips. Even that troublesome pest, the mealy bug, will succumb to it if it is applied properly. The plants should be perfectly dry and should never be sprinkled until at least one hour after applying the powder. It can be sifted on to the plants, but a bellows, with plenty of air pressure, gives more satisfaction. With a bellows the powder can be blown upward or in among the plants, as the case may be.

The powder must be of the best quality—the pure article, no adulterated stuff—and must be kept absolutely air-tight and in a dark and perfectly dry place, to retain its strength. It should always be used in the dry form, not as a liquid; at least, I have never tried it in the latter way, as it is the odor which does the work, in my opinion.

Even a sleeping-room, infested with mosquitoes and house flies or other insects, can be cleaned out by blowing the powder upward to the ceiling and into all dark places above the floor, thus enabling the people in the room to rest for the night without any harm or annoyance. At any rate, such is my experience. C. G. A.

TO CLEAN SMOKY GLASS.

We have a roof that has been on for thirteen years and is extremely dirty with coal smoke. The carnations and roses do not have a good growth through the winter months. How much would the glass hinder the growths and how can the glass be cleaned? J. Y. L.

We are not surprised at the roses and carnations failing to make a stocky growth when your glass is in this condition. If you are in a smoky neighborhood, you should give the roof a thorough cleansing at least once a year, choosing October as a suitable month, it being necessary to have all possible light during the winter months. A thorough hosing will in itself remove much dirt, but to clean your glass as it now is, dampen the glass with water containing a little potash. A single can of this will cover a good deal of roof. Use a hand syringe or long-handled mop to put it on with. This will loosen up the dirt so that a good pressure of water from the hose should remove it all. If any sticks, give it a rub with a brush.

A soapy powder, known as Dutch Cleanser, sold at all grocery stores, is also excellent for cleaning smoky glass. C. W.

Athol, Mass.—A storehouse owned by Warren Lee, and located near his greenhouse and residence at Athol Center, was recently destroyed by fire. For a time both his residence and his cucumber greenhouse were in danger, but both were saved without being damaged. The cause of the fire was unknown. The loss was small and is covered by insurance.

THE cost of labor saved in six months will buy and install a Skinner System of Greenhouse Irrigation.

Trade Conditions.

The reaction which usually follows any of the special floral festival days has been experienced by the florists in this vicinity since Easter. Compared with previous years, however, the week was above the average and many dealers report a good general trade. The latter part of the week witnessed a decided break in prices on carnations and the appearance on the street of the curbstone fakers.

Various Notes.

John A. Booth, of Newport, has accepted a position as foreman with John E. Thayer, at South Lancaster, Mass.

Charles H. Hunt had the decorations for the annual "old-fashioned dance" of the Providence Veteran Firemen's Association April 15.

John Wood handled nearly 25,000 bunches of arbutus from Cape Cod last week.

Eugene A. Appleton was a member of the committee on decorations for the reception tendered to Rt. Rev. Matthew Harkins at the Eloise April 12. Among the guests were James B. Canning and William Appleton.

T. O'Connor reports the largest Easter business this year that he has ever had.

John Macrae is preparing for the erection of the two large greenhouses that he purchased some time ago at his place on Smith street. The houses were a part of the range of Richard Dunbar, at Bristol.

J. F. Schellinger has a fine lot of bedding stock at his houses at Riverside, nearly ready for delivery.

Gibson, of Newport, was in town last week directing the placing of several large floral pieces on the grave of Mrs. John Carter Brown at Swan Point cemetery. One piece, an immense cross of Easter lilies, was one of the most elaborate ever seen hereabouts.

Mr. Greene, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor April 15.

Johnston Bros. had their hands full last week with special work for Easter weddings and receptions.

The table decorations for the dinner served Monday evening at Narragansett Hotel by the owner, Col. Joseph E.

The Market.

Business here for Easter was a record breaker, and everyone seems to be happy over the outcome. Weather conditions were ideal and stock was in fine shape. Good blooming plants of all kinds sold well, only the scrubs being left over. Cut flowers of all kinds were in good supply and of fine quality. Business since Easter has been good and a lot of left-over stock is being used up.

Various Notes.

August Baumer is well satisfied with his "best Easter ever."

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE trade approves the Aldrich bill schedule on seeds. See page 40.

VISITED CHICAGO: Kirby H. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; H. A. Johns, of Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.

THE bulbs are backward in Holland this season. The tulips will not be at their best until close to the end of April. Little winter damage has been done.

THE European gardening papers devote considerable space to Luther Burbank's latest "marvel," the Wonderberry, and their comments are not generally complimentary.

THE country merchants are in many instances doing a better seed business this year than ever before, and it is apparent in the number of hurry-up fill-in orders received by the wholesalers.

FIRE caused a loss of $2,000, covered by insurance, in the seed store of Ross Bros. Co., Worcester, Mass., April 13. The flames were confined to the basement, where little else than fertilizer was stored.

J. W. JUNG, Randolph, Wis., says that his catalogue mail trade has been almost three times as great as last season. The demand for seed oats has been particularly heavy. He will put in quite an acreage of flower and garden seeds at Fairfield this season. Asters for seeds are one of his specialties.

SINCE the Bureau of Plant Industry has moved into the west wing of the new building of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, the work of the Vegetable Testing Gardens, in charge of W. W. Tracy, Sr., formerly conducted in connection with the seed distribution, has been transferred to the office of the Horticulturist of the bureau and closely affiliated with the other work of the bureau on truck crops.

O. S. JONES & Co. will remove from Madison, S. D., to Sioux Falls, a site having been purchased upon which a seed warehouse 44x150 feet, three stories and basement in height, will be erected this summer. The concern is incorporated with an authorized capital of $100,000 and has been in business six years. An edition of 50,000 catalogues is mailed, and it is the intention to largely extend the business. It is stated that contracts are out for the growing of 3,000 acres of peas this season.

CONDITIONS in the Chicago territory have gone from bad to worse in the last week. The ground is so wet little in the way of planting can be done, and it is affecting both counter, mail and wholesale trade. Business lost now is hard to recover. The wet weather is alarming the onion set growers. They had planned a large acreage, that should all be in within a few days now. Up to this time there has been little chance to plant, and the condition of the ground now is such that it will be several days before operations can go ahead at full speed, even if it stops raining.

LEM W. BOWEN, of Ferry & Co., Detroit, spent the first part of the month in Washington.

THE price at which Cole & Westwood, Fredonia, N. Y., did the packeting of the congressional free seeds last year was $1.18½ per thousand packets. They put up a total of 38,087,880 packets.

THE week's installment of the press service of the National Council of Horticulture consists of articles on "How to Sow Seeds," "How to Make a Lily Pond," "Cannas" and "House Ferns."

CALIFORNIA CROPS.

At this season of the year the various seed dealers throughout the United States and Canada are naturally anxious to get some idea as to the crop prospects here in California. The writer begs to state that we have had a severe winter, with more rain than we have had here for fifty years past. The result has been that on low lands many seed crops have suffered and in various instances total acreages of various seeds have been destroyed. This is especially true of onion crops that were being grown in the Sacramento and San Joaquin river district. One seed grower lost 150 acres and another lost twenty-five acres of onions. These losses were accounted for by the breaking of a levee which flooded the land. In the Santa Clara valley district the onions have suffered as a whole by excessive water fully twenty-five per cent, some crops of onions being totally destroyed while other crops of onions are looking remarkably well. It is the writer's opinion that there still remains in good condition sufficient onion going to seed to supply a reasonable demand of the seed trade for the season of 1910.

Lettuce at the present writing is being reseeded and at the best we can not look forward to any large crop of this seed. Of onion, as said before, there will be enough to go around, with the probable exception of Red Wethersfield and White Portugal. These two sorts, it is our opinion, will be very short. Of carrot, there is a limited acreage growing here in California this season. What crops are planted are looking well and we see no reason why we should not harvest a good crop of this seed. Salsify is doing well. Sweet peas are doing very well.

SEED TRADE APPROVES.

Aldrich Bill Rates Acceptable.

In last week's Review there appeared in full those paragraphs of the Aldrich tariff bill, now pending in the United States Senate, covering the item of seeds. To most of the trade it was a surprise that the bill contained a schedule of specific duties on seeds. Even though these rates are in some cases materially higher than the old ad valorem duties, the trade in general is disposed to accept them joyously, as affording the only possible relief from the vexations of the old system. The letters received by the Review since its publication of the schedules last week are here given, to show the way they have been received:

Joseph Breck & Sons.

Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, telegraph as follows:

"We do not object to a moderate duty on seeds. We strongly advocate specific instead of ad valorem duties. The Aldrich bill schedule is good, but we consider the schedule recommended by American Seed Trade Association and Wholesale Seedsmen's League as being better balanced.

"We strongly advocate specific duties on Dutch and other flowering bulbs. The seed associations suggested an admirable schedule on these as well as on seeds."

D. Landreth Seed Co.

Burnet Landreth, of D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., writes:

"This firm is well satisfied with that portion of the proposed Aldrich or Senate bill as it bears on seeds; indeed, we would be satisfied with almost anything to get rid of the very inquisitive and domineering custom house methods under an ad valorem system.

"All these tariff bills on seeds are in one view very funny, and funny is a small word to use, but it just suits the case in that they are so particular to enumerate: Fenugreek, cardamom, hoarhound and St. John's bread."

A. C. Kendel.

C. E. Kendel, of A. C. Kendel, Cleveland, writes:

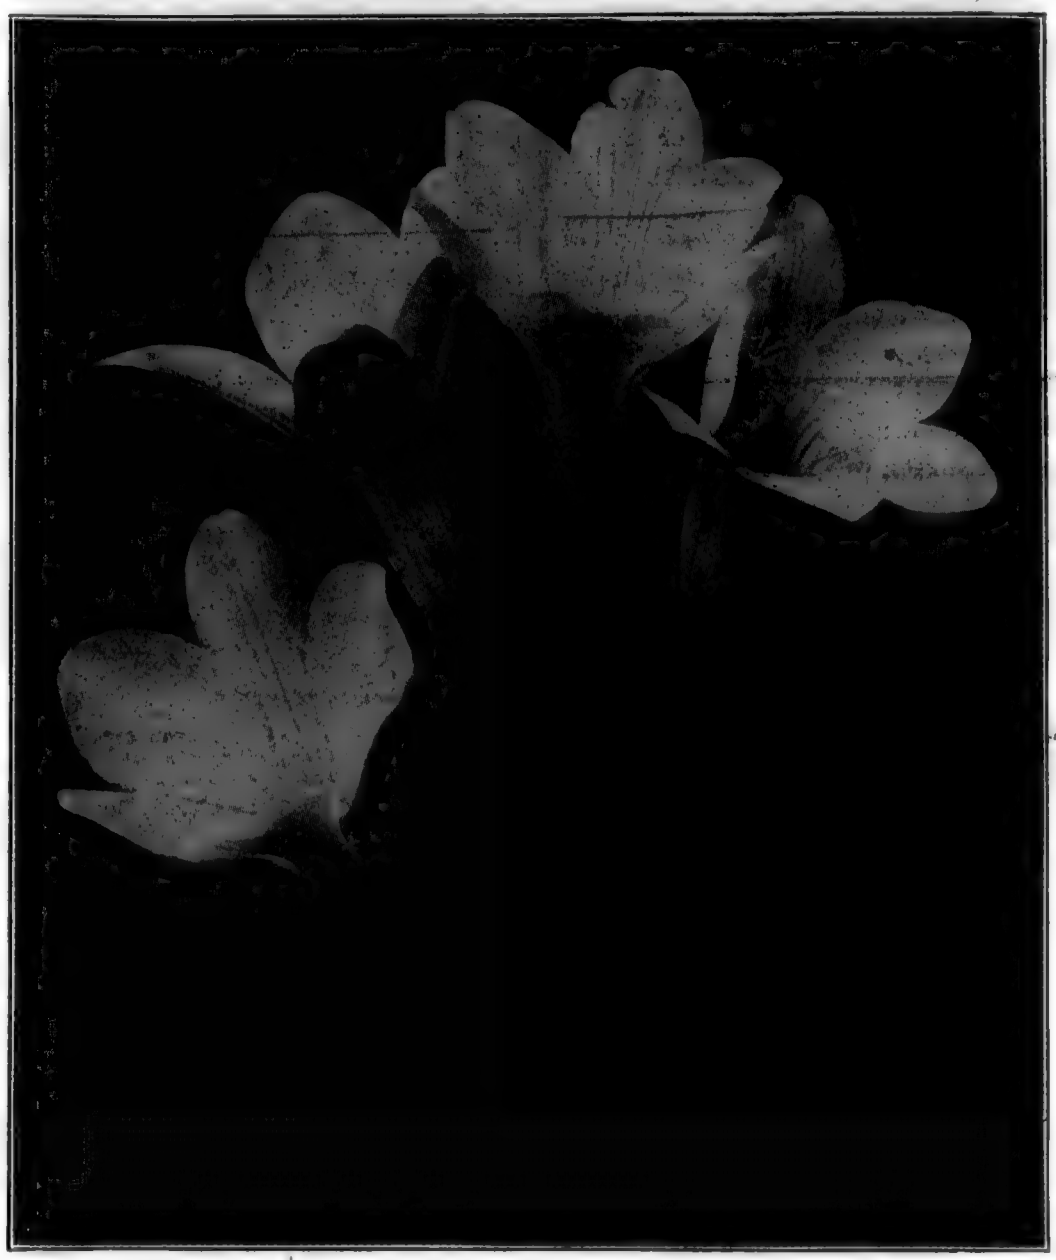
"Comparing the Aldrich bill with the duties now in force, I do not think the rates excessive. The advantage of having specific duty will overbalance the advance in rates on the items increased. Business can adjust itself to the new prices, as it does every year when there is a shortage. But business can not adjust itself to the rapidly changing prices caused by the present ad valorem system.

"There is, of course, a decided increase in some items that are largely imported, over the schedule offered by the Tariff Committee of the American Seed Trade Association, and I, for one, am sorry their schedule was not more closely adhered to, but, on the other hand, the drop on cauliflower from $1 per pound to the free list, and the less decided drop on one or two other items make up in some measure the increase from 2 cents to 4 cents per pound on turnip. The bill is evidently intended to raise revenue, and it certainly will until such time as American growers will produce stocks equal to imported of some varieties.

"I have written to Senator Aldrich suggesting a duty of 5 cents per pound on yellow trefoil, clean seed or in mixture with other seeds. If the grass seed men intend to put an end to the adulteration of clover and alfalfa they have a good opportunity to get in a few licks where it will count. Such a duty will not injure the legitimate use for yellow trefoil, and it will discourage its use for other purposes."

Northrup, King & Co.

J. E. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, writes:



"We have not had time to closely scan the proposed Aldrich bill, but it appears to amount for the most part to a very considerable increase in duties. However, it will be a blessing to get specific duties, but 5 cents a pound is certainly sufficient on all seeds not especially provided for in Section 1, and we hope that an amendment may be secured to that effect. We are writing our senators urging such amendment. On cauliflower seed $1 a pound is outrageous; 25 cents is ample, 50 cents the limit."

[Mr. Northrup evidently is expressing his opinion of the recommendation made to the house committee on Ways and Means; in the Aldrich bill cauliflower is on the free list.—Ed.]

Burpee & Co.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, writes:

"It will be a great mistake if any leading seedsmen trying to secure entirely ideal tariff on seeds should make such objections to the rates specified in the

Aldrich bill that, after all the work that has been done in favor of specific duties, we should have to be content with the old system of thirty per cent ad valorem. I cannot do better than enclose a copy of a letter written to our senior senator this morning, as follows:

April 19, 1909.

Hon. Boies Penrose,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I acknowledge with thanks receipt today of your favor of April 17, and hasten to express our appreciation of your courtesy in favoring specific duties on seeds.

While, of course, there may be some unimportant criticisms from a few growers and dealers, I am sure that an overwhelming majority of both seed growers and merchants will be delighted if Section 262 of the Aldrich Bill, specifying specific duties on vegetable seeds, is passed as it now stands.

While in some cases this makes the duty higher than the ad valorem duty, yet, as I have emphasized in my previous letters to you, it is not the idea of the seed trade generally to have a reduction in duty, but merely to save all annoyance both to the importers and Custom House officials by having the present ad valorem duties replaced by specific duties.

With kindest regards, sincerely yours,
W. ATLEE BURPEE.

Wood, Stubbs & Co.

Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, write: "We have not had time to analyze the difference between the old ad valorem and the proposed specific duties, but it seems that a good many of the items are higher on the specific than they were by the ad valorem rates. There is always the danger and trouble, however, that when contracts are placed at a specified price, the price will be raised by the custom house officials when the goods are delivered, they claiming that the contract was taken below the market price; hence specific duties are eminently desirable. Then in buying high qualities, ad valorem duties added to the cost price make the total cost much greater in proportion than on cheaper grade articles. We are in favor of specific duties."

What Others Say.

C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, wire: "Aldrich bill as per REVIEW of April 15 highly pleasing to us, especially the increased rates."

Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: "The rates in the Aldrich bill are O. K."

S. F. Leonard, of Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, says: "We went over this schedule several days ago with some of the seed trade, and the schedule as it is prepared now in the Aldrich bill is satisfactory to us."

Charles P. Braslan, of Braslan Seed Growers' Co., wires from San Jose, Cal.: "The Aldrich schedule on seeds is a vast improvement. Seed dealers and growers should feel well satisfied if same becomes a law."

FREE SEED DISTRIBUTION.

Its Development and Misuse.

The board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, at its meeting April 1, passed a resolution expressive of its disapproval of the methods and extent of the congressional free seed distribution as a restraint of trade, and, they might have added, as class legislation, always much opposed to the American idea.

To make clear how this abuse has developed, I give a brief record of the appropriations by Congress over a series of years to cover the cost of the seeds purchased and distributed.

The first distribution was made in 1839, now seventy years ago, the distribution then being made by the commissioner of patents, the expense being $1,000, with which 30,000 packets were distributed.

The Patent Office continued annually thereafter to distribute seeds, the expenses all the while increasing, the money being taken out of the appropriation for agricultural statistics.

Increase of the Appropriations.

In 1852 the first special seed appropriation was made by Congress. By 1864 that appropriation had risen to $50,000, and thenceforward for forty-five years it was as follows:

Year.	Total Appropriation.	Year.	Total Appropriation.
1865	$ 61,000	1888	103,000
1866	70,165	1889	104,200
1867	115,000	1890	104,200

1873	55,000	1896	185,400
1874	65,000	1897	150,000
1875	95,000	1898	130,000
1876	65,000	1899	130,000
1877	85,000	1900	170,000
1878	75,000	1901	170,000
1879	75,000	1902	270,000
1880	75,000	1903	270,000
1881	102,157	1904	290,000
1882	100,000	1905	290,000
1883	80,000	1906	242,920
1884	75,000	1907	240,920
1885	100,000	1908	287,000
1886	100,000	1909	258,000
1887	100,000

In 1900 the distribution had grown to 15,000,000 packets, not of rare seeds, but of common, everyday seeds, such turnip, cabbage, radish and pumpkin seeds as can be obtained from any cross-roads store; nothing in these seeds to advance the agricultural tone of the country.

These 15,000,000 packets of 1900 have increased by leaps and bounds, until now it is proposed to issue this spring 60,000,000 packets of free seeds—common, everyday seeds, to be sent out from the United States seed shop. In these 60,000,000 packets, at a retail price of 5 cents per packet, is represented a restraint of trade to the extent of $3,000,000. Certainly this paternalism is a restraint of trade, as the volume is equal to half the annual sale in small, flat packets of all the seed houses of the land. The interesting point is raised that this restraint is by the government itself—not by some individual or some trust, but by the government.

The Original Purpose.

The original intention of the authors of the government free seed distribution was to advance the art of agriculture by the introduction of new or but slightly known and supposedly valuable varieties, drawn from all parts of the world, of seeds of vegetables, fruits, flowers, grains, grasses, fibers, forage plants, and the encouragement of new agricultural industries—an excellent plan, really a statesman's idea, and for which $50,000 should be ample. But the Department of Agriculture seriously fails in these purposes, for now the free seed distribution is mostly of the most common varieties of seeds, purchased at the cheapest price, an example of offensive class legislation with a vengeance. It is an octopus, a gigantic graft, supported in its increasing growth by the votes of the country members of Congress, who wish to compliment, at the expense of the taxpayers in general, their rural constituents by presents of free seeds, 62,000 packets from each congressman, in the hope that they may be reëlected to office as good fellows and again get more graft; a practice discreditable to congressmen as the lawmakers of the land; discreditable to them as men, take them in any sense, for they all well know the whole distribution is such a farce and a stench as drags the United States Department of Agriculture far below the dignity of any other department of government—a department which should be the people's pride, but, by the free distribution of standard varieties of seed, is made the butt of every joker in the land.

Why should seedsmen handle this subject with gloves—kid gloves? Any other commercial interest so outrageously interfered with would use sledge-hammer arguments.

Burden on Postoffice Department.

The congressmen know this is one of the most offensive grafts, as it is an annual fraud and a steadily increasing fraud, and that its promoters and abettors are only grafters. They know that the nearly $300,000 wasted on seeds and labor is only half of what the distribution costs the government, for there is a secondary expense of an equal amount forced on the Postoffice Department by loading down and blocking the operations of the postoffices, mails and delivery men by the thousands of tons of mail matter; an expense saddled on a distinct department of government, an expense just about equal to the amount of money spent on seeds and their handling by the Department of Agriculture. The whole seed subject as connected with the government is most unsavory.

It is the lower branch of Congress on which rests the blame for the continuance of this most ridiculous and asinine free seed distribution as inclusive of common seeds of garden vegetables. The Secretary of Agriculture, as head of an executive branch of government, must carry out the several provisions of the general act of Congress known as the Agricultural Appropriation Bill, assigning money for various purposes, and among these ordering and defining the free seed distribution as inclusive of garden vegetables. But if Congress would cut out the garden vegetables and direct that the cash expended be only used for the purpose of purchase and distribution of big things, as Durum wheat, and other foreign varieties of wheat, oats, rye, barley, seeds of foreign and promising grasses, clovers, fibers and fruits, the already good work done at a very small expenditure, compared with the waste of cash for common garden seeds, would be increased fivefold, resulting in an almost inconceivable profit to the nation.

Of course it is too late to arrest the free seed distribution this spring of 1909, but it is hoped that the President of the United States can be induced another year to veto the entire agricultural appropriation if it contains a repetition of this most offensive form of congressional graft.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

grower and those who appreciate flowers from an artistic standpoint.

Exhibition blooms are produced by practically the same methods. Varieties are selected for this purpose which produce the largest blooms, as size is considered the chief feature. Early propagation and planting are essential to this end. Rich soil and liberal feeding are also of equal importance. You are all aware that achievements in floriculture are not the result of any one thing we do today, but the many things which receive prompt attention from time to time. It is equally true that it is not so much the superior knowledge, but the ability and energy to put this knowledge into practical use, which gives one the advantage over another. Those of you who have been successful with carnations know full well that the promptness with which you have looked to every detail marks the degree of your success, and so it is with the chrysanthemums, a small amount of knowledge and a large amount of energy well applied.

Clinton, Mass.—Albert W. Schneider, foreman for Edward W. Breed, has been appointed by the board of selectmen as superintendent of Central park. Among the other appointments made by the board, were the following: Michael F. O'Malley, superintendent of Franklin park; William McGown, superintendent of moth extermination; Daniel W. Goss, forest warden.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

It seems quite the fashion nowadays for city park systems to grow their own supplies of nursery stock.

There is an unusual call for Euonymus radicans, probably largely due to the advertising the plant has received in the gardening press at the hands of one nursery.

NURSERIES IN KENTUCKY.

The nurseries in Kentucky, as shown by the state inspections of 1908 and thus far in 1909, are as follows:

P. F. Adams & Son, Waco.
Christian Abersold, Rock Haven.
W. S. Ashby & Son, Cloverport.
The Bridges Bros., Maple Grove
W. W. Clark & Co., Sharpsburg.
W. M. Combs, Shepherdsville.
George W. Dickerson, Adairville.
C. P. Dieterich, Maysville.
J. B. Dodd, Fulton.
F. N. Downer, Bowling Green.
P. E. Downer, Fairview.
Downer & Bro., Guthrie.
Charles W. Eades, Robard.
S. T. Everett, Cave City.
Boswell Fox, Winchester.
L. E. Hall, Oakville.
H. F. Hillenmeyer & Son, Lexington.
Kennedy, Bondurant, Warford & Co., Jordan.
A. A. McGinnis, Bowling Green.
J. A. McKee & Co., Kingsville.
C. G. Moreman, Brandenburg.
T. G. Neal, Auburn.
Albert R. Sherron, Paducah.
G. W. Willingham, Sturgis.
J. J. Tippett, Hanson.
Mark Tudor, Cottonburg.
The Donaldson Co., Warsaw.
James Childres, Auburn.
O. C. Mahan, Clinton.
A. R. Cotton, Versailles.
F. M. Burnett & Son, Oakland.
Boone Gardiner, Louisville.
Nanz & Neuner, St. Matthews.
Edwin Stovall, Vine Grove.
J. Q. A. Rahm, Leitchfield.
Elvis J. Whitmer, Bremen.
F. M. Burnett & Son, Oakland.
The Kentucky Nurseries, Louisville.
P. Ligon, Robard.
W. A. Sandifer, Robard.

CONNECTICUT INSPECTION.

The State Senate of Connecticut has passed an act providing for the inspection of nursery stock by a state entomologist and the appointment of an entomologist. The act provides that the State Board of Agriculture shall appoint a state entomologist, whose duty it shall be to inspect orchards, fields and gardens where he suspects that the San Jose scale may be found; in case that it is found he may order the owner to spray his property or take steps for the protection of surrounding places. It also provides a fine for failure to obey the order, but no recompense for any expenses incurred by the owner of the property.

The second section provides for the inspection of nurseries, and makes it imperative for the state entomologist to inspect them at least once a year and give a certificate to the owners, providing that no pest is found. No certificate can be issued if a pest is found until the owner has overcome it. A fine of $25 to $100 is provided for violations of this section.

Further provisions make it imperative for agents, other than growers, to secure a license to sell, give away or ship within the state any nursery stock; and such stock shipped must be properly tagged with official tags furnished by the state entomologist. Before a license can be secured, the names of the nurseries furnishing the stock must be filed with the State Board of Agriculture. Firms outside of the state must furnish a copy of their certificates and then tags will be furnished them. In case the stock is not tagged, it can be confiscated by the State Board of Agriculture.

Fines for failure to apply tags or for common carriers who transport the goods are provided for in the last sections of the act, these fines ranging from $10 to $100. An appeal from the decision of the state entomologist to the Board of Agriculture is also provided for by the act. W. H. M.

CUTWORMS.

I was troubled with a dark bore worm in my shrubbery border, attacking everything tender, such as Golden Glow, gaillardias, deutzias, currants, trees, etc. Spraying did not reach them. Can I do anything now? E. R. E.

The pest which troubled you was probably the well-known cutworm, which will soon be paying his annual visit. These worms are destructive on hardy perennials, cutting off the shoots of many varieties by the wholesale. On the first appearance of the pests scatter soot, such as you obtain from soft coal, freely around the stems of the plants attacked. Also prepare a poisoned mash of shorts, molasses and Paris green and drop around their haunts. You cannot do anything for cutworms by spraying. They do not work in the day time, but can usually be found curled up a little below the surface soil under plants attacked. Give your land a liming in the fall. If you can obtain any gas lime, a light scattering of this will be found to be distasteful to the worms. You can usually secure a little gratis at any gas works.

PACIFIC COAST.

Ernest A. Bailey, of Santa Cruz, Cal., has bought a half interest in the A. Mitting Calla Lily Bulb Co. Mr. Mitting will be president and manager and Mr. Bailey will be secretary and treasurer.

Santa Clara, Cal.—The firm of Hazleton Bros. has dissolved partnership, and the business will be continued by H. H. Hazleton. He has sold the ground on which the greenhouses stood, and the material of the houses is at present stacked up, to be reërected as soon as a new location can be found. Mr. Hazleton says that at present there is a prospect of a bountiful crop of everything. The weather, however, is a little unfavorable in this one particular, that there is a great contrast between the day and night temperatures, and one of the consequences is a plentiful supply of split carnations.

WANT US TO EAT RAISINS.

The raisin growers of California have organized, appointed a publicity committee and designated April 30 as "Raisin day," a day they hope everyone in the United States will eat raisins, eat enough raisins to consume a good share of the 20,000 tons of last year's crop of raisins that have not been marketed. The committee says the American people consume only one-fifth as many raisins per capita as the people of England. The object of the present campaign is to create a greater demand and a greater consumption of the California raisins. There are produced annually in the state of California about 60,000 tons, or 120,000,000 pounds of raisins.

BULBS IN THE NORTHWEST.

In his annual report as chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, B. T. Galloway reports on the progress and plans regarding the government's work at bulb growing, as follows:

"It having been demonstrated that the propagation of Dutch bulbs is a possibility in the Puget Sound region, it was decided to undertake this work on a more definite basis. In order to do this it was deemed best to have a suitable tract of land exclusively under the control of the department. Such a tract, consisting of ten acres, was located near the city of Bellingham, Wash., and the people of that city, through the Chamber of Commerce, secured a lease of this tract for a period of ten years and tendered the same to the Department. The offer was accepted with the understanding that the tract was to be put in proper shape for the work contemplated, a suitable dwelling house erected thereon for the superintendent of the garden, and such other buildings and improvements made as were necessary. The tract with all improvements was to be leased to the Department at a nominal rental, and the Chamber of Commerce was to take care of any taxes and assessments against the property during the life of the lease. This lease has been made and the work of grading and clearing such part of the tract as required it is now under way, the superintendent's house is nearing completion, wells are being driven with a view to securing ample water supply for all purposes, and every effort is being made to carry out the terms of the lease.

"The Department has placed in Holland an order for bulbs with which to begin the work of propagating and testing the coming fall. It is hoped under this project to secure bulbs for Congressional distribution, to show whether or not Dutch bulbs can be profitably grown on a commercial scale in the Puget Sound region, and to secure considerable data, which is now lacking, in connection with this industry, particularly as to methods of cultivating, manuring, best soil conditions for each class of bulbs, etc. In about five years it is probable that a sufficient number of bulbs from this work will have been secured to begin making a distribution through the usual channels."

McMINNVILLE, ORE.

It is a matter of much interest in the town that H. S. Crego will grow aster seed here this year. A local paper says:

"The latest innovation here is the establishment of a flower seed farm. G. S. Crego, aster specialist, late of Chicago, came to Oregon a year ago in quest of a good location for growing the seed of his famous floral production, the Crego aster, which is in good demand in the markets of all parts of the United States, Canada and in Europe. Mr. Crego's attention was called to this section of the country by the continued large shipments of Crego asters to Portland by local florists during the season of 1908. He decided that if the soil at McMinnville would produce such fine asters it ought to grow the seed in abundance. Acting on this belief, he has just completed arrangements whereby the seed will be grown in large quantities by the florists on their farm a mile west of town."

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Now that Easter is a thing of the past, we can calmly, at our leisure, make a recapitulation and see where we are. Retail business did not commence at the stores until Saturday morning, which in itself is rather a poor sign, and whatever trade was done was accomplished practically on that day. There was a fair amount of out-of-town shipments for several days before, and these added materially to the Easter receipts. It is safe to say, however, that the business done was not in excess of that of last year. In a few cases there was a slight rush, but in a majority of instances there is nothing to brag about.

There were not as many first-class lilies grown around San Francisco as could have been handled, but the Alameda county growers had more than they could use and we received the benefit.

Roses and carnations were in oversupply and could be had at low prices. There was a scarcity of violets, which are now past their prime, and another few days will find them out of business. Tulips and valley sold well and a few late daffodils helped to make color. Sweet peas are daily becoming more plentiful and the price has lowered somewhat. Lilac is over for the season and wild flowers are showing the effect of the warm spell. Smilax, maidenhair fern and asparagus are not as plentiful as usual at this time.

Various Notes.

The annual election of officers of the California State Floral Society was held April 9. H. Plath was reëlected president.

A flower show is planned for September, at the Fairmount hotel, for which premiums to the value of $475 have been already given by city merchants and several hundred dollars more are promised.

Fred Peach, a florist at 3041 Baker street, was assaulted and robbed by two soldiers at his home on the evening of April 9. He lost $14 in the encounter and his assailants have not been located.

James Walters, gardener to W. S. Kittle, of San Rafael, has recovered from his recent severe illness. G.

DETROIT.

The Market.

A steady flow of business has kept stock moving nicely. With Lent over, society is doing things again. One of the largest, most elaborate weddings of the season took place Wednesday, April 21. This affair also called for a number of dinners for the bride, in all using up many hundreds of dollars' worth of flowers.

Various Notes.

Daffodils came in so plentifully at Sullivan's last week that they were obliged to advertise a sale at 25 cents a dozen for Saturday, in order to dispose of a part of the surplus.

Many dinners and the decorations for the Stearns-Boyer wedding, April 21, kept some of the florists on the jump. The house and church decorations, which were unusually elaborate, were carried out by the Bemb Floral Co.

E. A. Fetters and B. Schroeter both had some costly tables to decorate for the aforementioned function.

With the spring weather coming on, the call for laurels and boxwood has again begun. H. S.

Mayor Phil Breitmeyer opened the baseball season here and got his picture in the papers, tossing out the first ball.

ERIE, PA.

The usual reaction has set in and business has been pretty quiet since Easter. Stock is keeping up well, though the demand is not so great.

Miss Thekla Baur is visiting relatives and friends at Toledo.

Baur's are putting in concrete benches on their new place. B. P.

Ogden, Utah.—John Chopp, Sr., an early settler and one of the leading florists of the city, died at Rock Springs, Wyo., March 28, at the age of 76 years.

Attleboro, Mass.—Business has been excellent this spring, owing largely to a demand for funeral work, but cut flowers have been selling fairly well. Martin Ockert reports an excellent Easter business.

SANGAMO

Is the new, brilliant, glistening pink carnation shown at Indianapolis and awarded the A. C. S. Certificate of Merit, attracting the attention of every carnation grower on account of its very pleasing color, long, stiff stem, and well formed flowers, measuring 3 to 3½ inches. The calyx is strong, and as a producer, it cannot be excelled.

Orders booked now for January, 1910, delivery.
$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

CONQUEST

A new seedling Carnation to be disseminated next season. This is a variety that florists have been wanting ever since they discarded Prosperity.

CONQUEST is a light flesh-pink, overlaid with a deep rose-pink, the color extending over the petals from the center almost to the edge. It does not fade, making it a most beautiful and attractive flower. Its habit is somewhat on the order of Lawson, although the stem is somewhat longer, and very stiff. The flowers are well filled and nicely formed, which add to its attractiveness. Without a doubt, it will be the most attractive, as well as the most profitable variety to be disseminated the coming season.

Orders booked now for January 1, 1910, delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

MARY TOLMAN

A new light salmon pink Carnation, of a somewhat warmer tone than Enchantress and does not fade on the edge of the petals, having a clear, even shade all over the flower, which measures from 3 to 3½ inches, although 4-inch flowers are very common. The stem is long and stiff holding the flower perfectly erect. The calyx is very strong, and as a producer it comes early, is very free and continuous.

Orders booked now for January 1910 delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ANNOUNCEMENT

WE have made arrangements with Messrs. Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., whereby they will grow part of the stock of our new white Carnation SHASTA, and assist in its dissemination next season, 1910. Orders intrusted to them will receive the same careful attention as those sent to us. 12,000 plants between us.

SHASTA is the variety which attracted so much attention at the American Carnation Society's Convention held at Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 27-28, 1909. It scored 89 points and was easily the best looking White Carnation in the hall.

We claim for it, purity in color, good size, fine form, splendid keeping quality, excellent stem, and extraordinary freedom in blooming. It's a money maker for grower and dealer.

We are booking orders now at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Dealers will please write for discounts on large lots.

Dorners' New Chrysanthemums

We are offering three new Chrysanthemums which we have given a thorough trial and can recommend as strictly commercial varieties. A good stock ready now from 2-inch pots, and well rooted cuttings from sand. Orders filled in strict rotation as booked.

DOLLY DIMPLE—Take 1st bud. Height, 3½ ft. Ready to cut Nov. 18 and later. Color, a deep straw yellow. A seedling from Eaton, having an immense flower on a perfectly straight and stiff stem. Form is reflex with center petals incurving. One of the largest and best of Thanksgiving varieties. 40c each; $3.50 per 10; $35.00 per 100.

PATTY—Take 2nd bud. Height, 2½ to 3 ft. Ready to cut Nov. 5. Color, a beautiful shade of Enchantress pink. Form, Jap. incurved. Large and heavy foliage up to the flower. Of easiest culture. 25c each; $2.00 per 10; $15.00 per 100.

MERRY JANE—Take 1st bud. Height, 3 to 3½ ft. Ready to cut Oct. 28. Color, bright yellow inside of petal and light yellow on reverse. A very large, full, round flower, partly incurved type. Stem straight and well clothed with foliage. 30c each; $2.50 per 10; $20.00 per 100.

GOLDEN EAGLE—We can still supply well rooted cuttings from sand, for April and May delivery. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business was quiet last week, giving the retail dealers a chance to recuperate after the Easter rush. Stock is plentiful, with the exception of bulbous stuff, which is available only in small quantities. Now that the Easter rush is over, the florists who grow bedding plants are busy filling the space vacated by the Easter plants. The weather has been warm, and if it continues, florists will be planting flower beds inside of three weeks.

Various Notes.

F. A. Conway has a fine lot of geraniums and is cutting quantities of callas.

The Department of Public Parks will go into the nursery business on a large scale. Under the superintendency of Houston Tall they have planted 125,000 seedlings of various trees, shrubs and perennials. An act of the recent legislature provided a liberal sum to be expended each year on our parks. In a few years we hope to have a park system equal to any in the west.

The Florists' Club had its regular monthly meeting at the Walhalla April 14.

Adolph Baur has taken over the secretaryship of the American Carnation Society.

Smith & Young have received a number of cases of imported orchids.

The premium list for the Indiana State Fair may be secured of A. F. J. Baur.

Lester F. Benson has put on a new delivery wagon.

A. Wiegand & Sons report their motorcycle delivery a great success.

The florists of the city were well represented at the first baseball game, April 18.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, now ready for delivery, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready now, $35 per 100, 250 for $82.50, 500 for $150, 1000 for $300.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

DENVER.

The Market.

Reports on Easter business average from ten to twenty per cent better than last year. Everything moved off satisfactorily, at good prices. Early in the week the weather was bad, but during the last three days, including Sunday forenoon, it was fine and clear, so that plants did not need to be wrapped.

There was a plentiful supply of everything in the plant line, except lilies. The supply, however, was almost exhausted Saturday morning, and most of the remaining plants were of poor quality. There was not much novelty in the plant line. As to what sold best, it would be hard to say. Azaleas were great favorites, as also were spiræas. The Lady Gay rambler sold out clean. The increase in business was largely in the plant line.

There was a good demand for cut flowers. Violets were all sold out; the demand was for doubles, the singles being nearly done. Everyone had carnations, for there was an abundant supply—more than enough. The price was not prohibitive, either, as they retailed for 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Tea roses were also plentiful, there being more white left on hand Monday than any other. Beauties sold out clean, the medium stemmed ones being the scarcest.

Various Notes.

The churches, perhaps, were more elaborately decorated for Easter this year than ever before.

J. Hamlin, formerly with the Riverbank Greenhouse Co., of Geneva, Ill., and previously with the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, Mass., has taken over the business of C. Dankworth, 1441 Perry street.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Easter sales this season ran about twenty per cent over those of last Easter. Everything in plants sold well, at prices about the same as last Easter. Lilies, of course, were in great demand, but the supply was short. Azaleas, spiræas, rhododendrons, primulas, cinerarias, lily of the valley and bulbous stock in pots and pans were in good demand. Rambler roses, such as Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, etc., were good and plentiful and sold all the way from 50 cents to $5 each, depending upon the size and quality. Hydrangeas were of fairly good quality, but were not as plentiful as in former years.

All the florists had a good cut of roses, carnations, violets, narcissi, jonquils, valley, violets and bulbous stock. Beauties were in good demand. Carnations were good and had a brisk demand. Good tulips also sold well. Violets were good, but the supply was somewhat short. Lilies sold at $3 per dozen, cut.

Weather conditions were excellent.

Various Notes.

James P. Keller had a magnificent display at the downtown store on Main street. His spiræas were of exceptionally good quality. Cut flowers were in great demand with him, at prices about the same as last year. He reports sales about twenty per cent over those of last Easter. The firm has also been very busy with funeral work for the last three weeks.

S. S. Kelley, at Clifton Heights, had a fine lot of plants and sold everything he could lay his hands on. He says cut flowers were in good demand also. Funeral work, also, has been plentiful at his place of late.

Lucien Le Clere, manager for his father, reports a much better business in both cut flowers and plants than he anticipated. His Dorothy Perkins and other rambler roses were especially good.

Honaker's store, which is one of the finest and most commodious in this city, was beautifully decorated with lilies and other plants. They also had a good cut of roses and carnations.

The Michler Bros. Co., on Maxwell street, took care of the business in that section of the city.

William Bell had a large decoration in Paris, Ky., last week. Quantities of cut flowers were used.

Anderson & White are busy with spring stock at their greenhouses. They report a satisfactory Easter.

Recent visitors were Grover Shearer, of Winchester, Ky., and Andy McMullen, florist at Natural Bridge, Ky.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Business.

Bright, warm weather prevailed during last week. Consequently, crops of all kinds are coming in heavily, and stock could not be better. There are only a few bursted calyxes among the carnations, and roses are mostly of the longer stemmed grade.

The market is holding out well. Business last week started out with a boom, and for the first four days kept up remarkably well, but as stock became more plentiful a gradual decline was noticeable. As yet, however, there is no room for "kicking," and little or no attention is given to the ash barrel. The market has been good on Easter lilies, which were used abundantly in wedding decorations, and there has also been a good call for callas.

The outdoor tulip, hyacinth and daffodil beds resemble a rainbow in color and beauty. The fruit trees are a mass of blossom, and the flowering shrubs are daily becoming more beautiful, reminding us that spring, though a little tardy, is here at last. Geraniums and bedding plants have started on the move, and orders are steadily coming in.

Various Notes.

Last week was a record breaker at H. H. Ritter's establishment. Weddings, receptions and parties kept them busy decorating, not to speak of their other work.

The Miami Floral Co. will commence planting carnations in the field this week. Their stock is strong and in first-class condition.

The Dayton Floral Co. is advertising with electricity, and its ad., accompanied by many others, is conspicuously placed on one of Dayton's skyscrapers. In the center of these advertisements is an elaborate electrical display of the chariot race, as described in "Ben-Hur." The sign was completed and charged for the first time April 17, and attracted great crowds of admirers.

The Heiss Co. is doing its part in beautifying the business district of this city. At present the firm is putting up one of the largest iron vases made, which stands eight feet high and the bowl of which measures thirty-eight inches in diameter. This will be placed at the curbing in front of the Heiss store, and will be kept in first-class condition by the firm. R. A. B.

HEADQUARTERS FOR Araucarias

"By Jingo!" was the remark the other day of a bright looking gentleman, as he stepped, with his lady friend, into our Araucaria houses. "If these aren't the best shaped and finest looking specimens of Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa I have ever seen, then I'm a mark. What a sight for this time of the year!"

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price.

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. Allen. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Construction.

By Prof. L. R. Taft. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.

By Peter Henderson. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. Bailey. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By Arthur Herrington, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By Alex. Montgomery, Jr. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. Allen. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authorative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By Charles Henderson. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $3.50

Handy Manual.

By J. W. Johnson. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 125 pages. $1.00

The Propagation of Plants.

By Andrew S. Fuller. Illustrated with numerous engravings. Describing the process of hybridizing and crossing and also the many different modes by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied. Cloth. 359 pages. $1.50

The Rose—Its Cultivation, Varieties, etc.

By H. B. Ellwanger. Directions for cultivation—for planting, pruning, propagation, the treatment of diseases and insect enemies—particularly valuable for its classification. Alphabetical and descriptive list of nine hundred and fifty-six varieties. Cloth. $1.25

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.

By Wm. Falconer. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. Bailey. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. Bailey. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By Clarence M. Weed, D. Sc. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.

By Prof. L. R. Taft, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

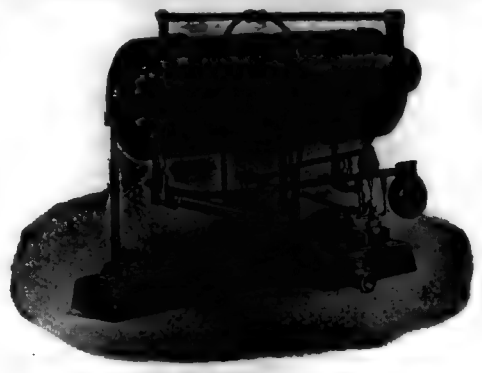
THE SMOKE PROBLEM.

Chimneys will still be needed when the so-called smoke problem is solved. The popular solution consists in changing the color of the gases flowing from the chimney from black to a light gray. At least, this is all that the public and the smoke inspector will demand. But even when this problem is well solved, our chimneys must continue to discharge immense volumes of heated gases, and these gases will often carry with them fine particles of ash which cannot be burned; all of which may produce something of that disagreeable haze which floats over manufacturing cities. The dense black smoke from chimneys is certainly a nuisance. It can be stopped for about ninety per cent of the time, and if this is accomplished a most wonderful improvement will be observed in the atmosphere.



It often has been stated what relation should exist between the weight of coal burned in a grate and the weight and volume of air required for perfect combustion. It is sometimes more striking, however, to bring out this point by using a larger unit than the single pound. Take, for instance, a 100 horse-power boiler plant. Many such plants would burn 500 pounds of coal an hour; the air supplied would weigh 10,000 pounds and the volume of this air at a chimney temperature of 500 degrees would be about 240,000 cubic feet. The chimney for this plant must therefore discharge nearly 10,500 pounds (5.22 tons) of gases into the atmosphere each hour; that is, for each ton of coal burned the chimney will discharge from eighteen to twenty-two tons of gases. To keep these gases of the right color and composition for ninety per cent of the time is the problem to be solved, not only by florists in residence districts, but by those who want to keep their glass clean.

TWO SMALL HOUSES.

We are building two connected greenhouses, each 19x35, ten feet six inches to the ridge and five feet six inches to the eaves. The south gables will be of glass to within three feet of the ground. The sides will have eighteen inches of glass. The north gables will be protected by a boiler-shed. The sides, and the south gables up to the glass, will be double boarded, with paper between. The houses will have two side benches, raised, under which we would like to run the heating pipes. The center bed will be on the ground. We expect to grow asparagus in the center.

Will a two horse-power tubular boiler give sufficient heat with hot water for a climate where the temperature rarely goes below zero? How shall we pipe these houses? Please give size and number of pipes. C. & R.

The two houses, each 19x35, will require at least ten 2-inch pipes in each house, with hot water, to carry a temperature of 50 degrees during your coldest weather. A flow with four returns under each side bench probably will prove as satisfactory an arrangement as you can make. The boiler in question will carry the houses in mild weather, but is too small for best results during cold weather. You should have a boiler rated to carry about 750 square feet of heating surface for best results. Your boiler will carry about 350 square feet. F. R.

The Market.

Business is a little quiet now, but such a state of things is always looked for immediately after a holiday. Every day shows an increase in the supply of stock and a corresponding decrease in its value. It begins to look now as if the usual spring oversupply of stock is upon us. Such being the case, it will not be many days till the retailer will have the market his own way. We are having a spell of regular summer weather and the stock, especially roses, is showing the effects of it. Carnations are good in quality, but the bright sun is bringing them in by the thousands. There is not much coming in from outdoors, but if the present warm weather holds out it will not be long till it is here in large quantities. Green goods are selling well and this class of goods will soon be on the scarce side. Spring weddings will use great quantities of it, and wild smilax and strings of asparagus and smilax will be in great demand.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club room on the evening of April 17. It was well attended and a great deal of business was done. A report from the financial committee was heard and there was also a report from the souvenir book committee. Both of these reports show that much progress is being made and are very encouraging. A special meeting of the executive board will be held this week and then all committees will be expected to make thorough reports. This is to keep a line on all of the work being done and to see that no point is being overlooked.

William Murphy and Thomas Windran left April 20 for a two weeks' trip through the south. They will spend most of their time in Florida.

William Murphy, superintendent of the trade exhibit, is receiving many applications for space at the coming convention. As yet he is not in a position to reserve space, but within a couple of weeks everything will be in working order and then allotments will be made as rapidly as possible.

B. P. Critchell is in with a crop of snapdragons that are certainly fine. They are the best we have ever seen in this city and are selling well. C. J. Ohmer.

Bay City, Mich.—H. F. Potratz and C. B. Schweers have bought the Wm. Reuther greenhouses and will continue the business under the firm name of Potratz & Schweers.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Easter business was good, probably a little better than last year, with prices about the same. Roses, carnations, valley, sweet peas and violets were the cut flowers that sold best. In plants, Easter lilies and all bulbous plants were in demand. Owing to warm weather, the bulbous stock was not in good condition. The weather was ideal for all deliveries.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel had a fine cut of roses and carnations. His lilies were extra good, and were easily disposed of.

The Blackman Floral Co. has had a great rush of business, including a large amount of funeral work. They cut about 5,000 carnations. This firm has secured Harry Wallace, formerly of Vaughan's, at Western Springs, as rose grower. Saturday they planted a house of Bride, Maid and My Maryland, all grafted stock.

Ben Kramer was extremely busy Easter and sold lots of carnations.

Henry Seymour has had a great deal of funeral work lately, and has certainly had plenty to do. E. L. F.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

George Asmus, who is one of the members of the committee on state fair appointed by the Illinois State Florists' Association, reports that the department has secured for next fall's exhibition at the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, all of the rotunda of the dome building, a circular space containing about 13,000 square feet of floor space, exclusive of the main aisle. There is a premium list of over $2,700 offered in this department. The walls will be well decorated and every facility offered for making the finest display ever shown in the state, outside of the Coliseum in Chicago, and the superintendent of the department is arranging for private space for the florists to make up their designs and pieces in the building, and also is trying to arrange for cooling rooms.

ACME POT WASHER

This machine is built substantially and will withstand severe wear and tear; sides, ends and bottom are taken from 1 clear. Red Gulf Cypress Board, and are mortised and bolted together, after which they receive two coats Lead and Oil of first quality, assuring long life, no leakage and durability. Body of machine will hold from 300 to 800 pots (according to size), which is filled with enough water to cover said pots, thereby causing dirt, etc., to soak loose; then same is lifted from water and placed on brush of machine (full set of brushes go with each machine), which will do better work than would be possible to obtain by hand.

Two men can wash with this machine 15,000 pots per day, or one man 7500 pots per day, or 7500 pots can be washed for $1.50. One man can wash by hand 1500 pots per day (if he works hard), therefore you will plainly see that in one day one man will wash, with machine, 6000 more than he can wash by hand, or five times as many. Above figures will show that by hand it will cost $1.00 per 1000 to wash pots; they will also show that it costs by use of our machine 20c per 1000, a saving of 80c per 1000. This means that if you have 35,000 to wash same will pay for machine. Write for prices and particulars.

NEW ORLEANS.

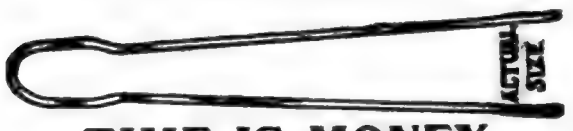
Current Comment.

Following the example of several large cities in the United States and Europe, New Orleans is contemplating the establishment of a municipal nursery to grow trees and plants to be used on the streets. The idea is good, but such an enterprise should be directed by competent men. The New Orleans Horticultural Society has certainly among its members some able men, but so far it seems that the parking commission has entirely disregarded any advice from that source and a committee of two has been appointed to appear before the city council in order to see that the features of the proposed commission be not too drastic.

R. Eichling's snapdragon and sweet peas grown outside are good. Spanish iris grows here to perfection.

James A. Newsham has the finest field grown carnations that have ever been grown here at that time. It should certainly give a new idea of the culture of an important flower which so far has not been much of a success under glass in New Orleans. Mr. Newsham is constantly increasing his stock of orchids by importation and is more than satisfied with his venture. He cut 2,500 Easter lilies for Easter and could have sold many more.

A. Alost reports a heavy cut of roses.



R. Eichling says that the Easter trade was much better than last year. The same with P. A. Chopin. M. M. de Lapouyade says that the demand for plants was not so good, but the demand for Easter lilies is on a big increase and was heavier than previous years. Abele Bros. had a large demand for cut flowers. H. Doescher received more orders for ferns than before.

George Thomas has been adding a new greenhouse to his place. He will give more attention to growing begonias, being quite an expert in the culture of this plant.

A. Alost, of Gentilly avenue, has invited the members of the club to his annual dinner for Sunday, May 2.

M. M. L.

Roland Park, Md.—Arthur Albrecht says that Easter here compared favorably with any Easter since he has been in business, and surpassed Christmas, though that was good. Some of the florists had sold out on Saturday night, and none of them has any reason to complain. The cool weather here aided in making business lively.

We Are Opening A Chicago Office

You western folks will be glad to know of this. It will be more convenient for you all. Being centrally located as Chicago is, we can give personal and prompt attention to things west. Such attention is always the most satisfactory.

A member of our firm, Mr. George Sykes, will have charge of this office. He has been identified with us for upward of fifteen years and has a thorough practical knowledge of all branches of greenhouse building.

You will find Mr. Sykes in snug quarters in The Rookery Building, which is handily located on the corner of La Salle and Adams streets.

Run in and get acquainted with him. If it is not convenient for you to do so, then mail him your inquiries. He will be at the office after May first.

THE GOOD & REESE CO., Springfield, Ohio

The Largest Rose Growers in the World.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list.

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the fall and early winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE AIRSHIP.

Not so long ago it used to be said that this is the steam age, and then it was the electric age, or the gasoline age, but times have progressed rapidly of late and now comes the age of air-ships. Automobiles are behind the times in New York; to be up-to-date there the decorator must go one better, and the accompanying illustration shows how M. A. Bowe employed an airship for a recent dinner. Most of the supply houses now handle "airships" for this purpose. They are to be filled with flowers and suspended above the table. Mr. Bowe used Farleyense fern and American Beauty roses, with American Beauty ribbon. The propeller and rudder of the airship also were made by the decorator of ribbon bows.

MOTHERS' DAY.

It's Important to Florists.

To honor the best mother who ever lived—your own. That is the purpose of Mothers' day, and its emblem is the emblem of purity, a white flower.

Every florist is interested in Mothers' day, not only because we each of us had, or have, "the best mother who ever lived," but also for the reason that most of us have some white flowers that will wear well on the second Sunday of May. The white carnation is the Mothers' day emblem par excellence, and if we haven't the carnations ourselves, most of us know a wholesale man who will send us some, or at least white roses.

It is fortunate that Mothers' day calls for no special flower. The emblem of McKinley day was the pink carnation; if it had been just the carnation—any color—the observance of the day might by now amount to something. As it was, it was killed the first year or two by the scarcity of pink carnations. But Mothers' day calls for just a white flower—carnation or rose—and doubtless light pink will do at a pinch, so that lets Enchantress in.

And, furthermore, don't make the mistake of putting Mother and McKinley in the same class. To most of us McKinley was only a name, while he is indeed a poor specimen of mankind who does not hold Mother in closest, fondest regard or tenderest memory.

So get ready your white flowers and push the day along. The date is May 9.

Mothers' Day Last Year.

Not many people had heard of Mothers' day in 1908, but where a little publicity was given it the idea "caught on" and the florists felt its force. For instance, Chapin Bros., Lincoln, Neb., wrote:

"It's a sentiment that appeals to every man and boy, and people bought flowers who never bought before. The florists' stores were crowded from early Saturday morning until Sunday night. Every florist in Lincoln was cleaned out cleaner than it has been done for years.

"We hope to make it a holiday for the United States. Crowd it and push it; it has Decoration day beat a mile, and comes when flowers are cheap and plenty. Get a swing on your pen; let the trade know."

In a great many other places Mothers' day came as a welcome surprise to florists. Little had been done to exploit it. No one was prepared.

The result has been much inquiry as to the origin of Mothers' day, the date, and, above all, what is being done to advertise the day this year. Every florist would like to help it along.

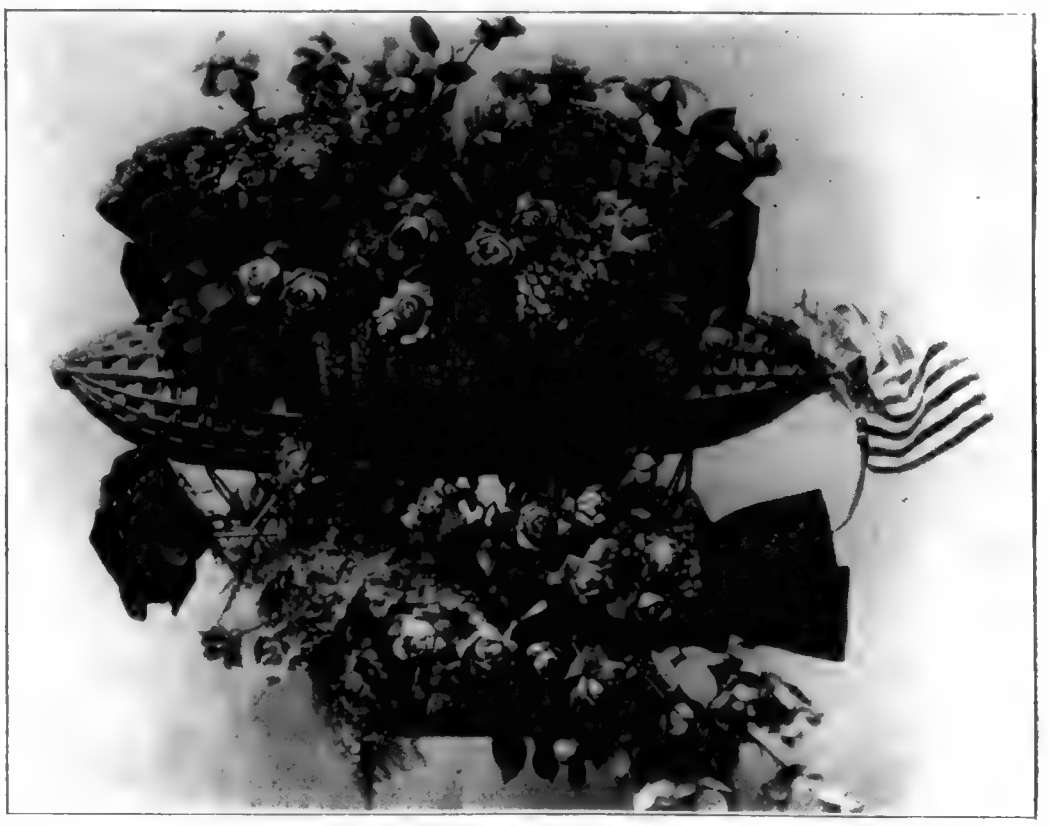
Origin of Mother's Day.

The origin of Mothers' day seemed shrouded in the mists of antiquity—it is just a year old. The Federation of Women's Clubs, when appealed to, disclaimed responsibility, but said, "It's a fine idea." Officials of the Congress of Mothers replied, "We have no record of Mothers' day, but the idea is good; we shall call attention to it at our next annual meeting." Finally, the search for someone to whom the credit could be given led to an individual, Miss Anna Jarvis, 2031 North Twelfth street, Philadelphia, who conceived the idea three years ago in the desire to commemorate the anniversary of her mother's death. It was not only the thought of laying some flowers on mother's grave, but it occurred to her that it would be a beautiful tribute to all mothers, the living as well as the dead, if their children, on a given day, would unite in the simple wearing of white flowers. She wrote a letter about it to a Philadelphia newspaper and it was this that caused Mothers' day to break out in spots last year, all over the country, at Los Angeles, at Dallas, Brooklyn, Providence and many places in between.

The mayors of Omaha, Lincoln, Hastings and Fremont, in Nebraska, and Council Bluffs, in Iowa, issued special Mothers' day proclamations last year and Brand Whitlock, the widely-known mayor of Toledo, O., directed special attention to it. The newspapers everywhere commented favorably. The pulpit was interested.

Observance This Year.

Miss Jarvis suggested the date as the second Sunday in May, and in a circular issued a few weeks ago asks that every person join in doing homage.



"The white carnation is the emblem of Mothers' day," reads the circular. "Its whiteness stands for purity; its form, beauty; its fragrance, love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness—all a true mother's attributes.

"The fitness of the observance of the day appeals to all social, fraternal, civic, military and religious organizations alike; to him who has missed life's crowning joy, the tender ministrations of a mother's love, no less than to the one who has derived the elements of noble character from the maternal care bestowed in childhood."

The day this year will have a much wider observance than in 1908, for General Henry M. Nevius, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Edgar Allen, Jr., commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans, have issued requests to all posts and camps throughout the United States asking that each member of the two orders wear a white flower and properly observe the day. Other national fraternal organizations have done the same. Mothers' day has been set aside as an official state holiday by Governor R. S. Vessey, of South Dakota.

But why not get your mayor to issue a proclamation similar to the one issued by the mayor of Lincoln? Here it is:

MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION.

Office of the Mayor,
City of Lincoln, Neb.

To the People of Lincoln:

The secretary of the Lincoln Young Men's Christian Association having suggested that Sunday, May 10, be observed by the people of this city as Mothers' day, every man to wear on that day a white flower in honor of his mother, I have been requested to ask for general compliance with the suggestion.

Therefore, in pursuance of this request and as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., I hereby recommend that by general consent, Sunday, May 10, 1908, be set apart as Mothers' day and that on that day every man and every boy in the city of Lincoln and every visitor within our gates, wear a white flower in honor of his mother.

And I suggest that the day be made a special occasion for sending flowers to the invalids in Lincoln homes, to the sick in hospitals and to the orphans in public and denominational institutions.

It is eminently fitting that in this, as in other worthy movements, Lincoln take the lead. Let us hope that the first Mothers' day observed in this beautiful city will be so successful and inspiring that other cities will, in future years, follow the example.

Witness my hand as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., this 6th day of May, A. D. 1908.

F. W. BROWN, Mayor.

You see he did it at the suggestion of the Y. M. C. A. If you think your own "pull" isn't strong enough, get a leading minister to approach His Honor. Don't be bashful about it. It's a good idea and they'll all take to it. Tell your local newspapers about it. Get them to publish articles about Mothers' day, now and again May 8 or 9. Advertise Mothers' day in your own newspaper space, and get a neat card printed for your window:

MOTHERS' DAY—MAY 9.

To honor the best mother who ever lived—your own. That is the purpose of Mothers' day, and its emblem is the emblem of purity—a white flower.

If you live in a town not too large, deck out each street car conductor with a white flower early on the morning of May 9—they all had mothers. Start the church-goers and Sunday promenaders wearing a flower, and you soon will find the idea will take a big hold and mean a good day's business.

WREATH OF PANSIES AND GALAX.

The wreath in the accompanying illustration, made by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, is an extremely pretty arrangement, with galax leaves and pansies. The pansies were half light and half dark blue. The color combination given by this one flower is exceptionally pleasing and appropriate. PHIL.

LAWSUITS OVER BOARDERS.

C. H. Hune, of the Memphis Floral Co., Memphis, Tenn., was given a verdict for $1,000 damages against Pinckney Latham, Jr., by a jury in the circuit court April 15. The verdict was the outgrowth of a dispute over a "boarder" plant. The plant belonged to Mr. Latham, and in the winter of 1907-08 was stored with the Memphis Floral Co., of which Mr. Hune is manager. Five plants were stored and four of them were returned to Mr. Latham in good order. When he demanded the fifth, it could not be located; and after waiting some time he caused a warrant to issue, charging Mr. Hune with fraudulent breach of trust. The warrant was issued in April, 1908.

Within a few hours after the warrant was issued it was dismissed at the instance of Mr. Latham, through a recommendation of the attorney-general. Almost immediately Mr. Hune filed suit for $10,000, alleging false arrest and malicious prosecution as his cause of action. The case was called for trial April 15, 1909, and quite a number of witnesses were heard. The suit was hotly contested by both sides, Mr. Latham declaring that he secured the warrant while firmly convinced that his plant had been kept from him wilfully, and Mr. Hune asserting that he had made every effort to locate the plant at the proper time, and that he did, subsequently, locate it with a lot of others, and return it to Mr. Latham.

The Wreath of Pansies.

THE ARMSTRONG WREATH.

The illustration on page 7 is prepared from a photograph taken in the store of M. Armstrong, 807 Riverside avenue, Spokane, Wash., showing a wreath made in that establishment for the funeral of the governor of the state. The design was made on the order of the City of Spokane, and was considered one of the notable designs at a funeral where the display of flowers was extremely large. The background of this wreath was made of Oregon grape, known in the east as Mahonia, instead of the galax leaves employed for the purpose in retail stores through the greater part of the United States. The roses were Bride, with a few nicely colored blooms of Golden Gate among the valley. The airy green was adiantum and asparagus.

AN EASTER STORE.

At Hornell, N. Y., there is a progressive florist named Harley M. Walbridge. The city has only some 15,000 inhabitants, but it is a flower-loving community and gives support to several successful greenhouse establishments, as well as to Mr. Walbridge's retail store at 159 Main street. The accompanying illustration gives an idea of the store and of the Easter stock. One point which is specially worthy of note by other retail florists is that, while the Easter trade was good in every respect, it was especially strong on baskets of plants and on plants in novel and artistic receptacles. A great many florists in smaller cities still think their trade does not require these plant embellishments, but it only remains for one florist in a town to show his holiday stock thus decked out to capture so large a proportion of the trade that the others will promptly change their minds about the necessity for and profit in the many articles so truthfully termed requisites, which are now offered by the leading supply houses.

SWEET PEAS.

Sweet peas under glass are being better grown each year, although the number who can produce such flowers as Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., are still few. At present they are the most popular flowers on the market, many purchasers preferring a fragrant bunch of well grown Mont Blanc or Christmas Pink to either roses or carnations, neither of which latter possess the delightful odor of the sweet peas. Just now sweet peas under glass are at their zenith, their stems being of exceptional length. The first warm wave affects them adversely and a perceptible shortening of the flower stalks will be quickly noticed.

If your peas are grown in big, light, airy houses, shading is not to be recommended, but if, on the other hand, your plants are growing in small structures, where temperatures fluctuate violently, a light coating of kerosene and white lead will be an advantage. Air abundantly, but avoid cold draughts. Look out for red spider, which will speedily ruin the plants if once fairly started. Near steam pipes or in close proximity to the glass is where this pest is likely to appear. Use the spray nozzle in such places as a preventive.

The Armstrong Wreath.

Keep faded flowers and seed pods removed. Pull up any dead or dying haulm. Afford an abundant water supply. If the ground is well drained, there is little fear of an oversupply of moisture now. A dressing of finely broken sheep or cow manure lightly forked into the soil will now prove of great benefit.

Early sowings have probably been made outdoors some time ago, if your climate permitted. Any plants which were started in small pots some weeks previously should now, if well hardened, be planted out thinly. Place supports in position before planting them. Successional sowings of sweet peas outdoors in the greater part of the country are generally unprofitable after the end of April, as the ground has then become fairly warm and well dried out, and shoots will appear almost before the peas have any roots.

SPIRAEA FOLIAGE BROWNING.

We have had some elegant spiræa, apparently healthy, but as soon as the buds show white the foliage curls under and browns. We fumigate with Nico-fume and have not syringed since the first indications of trouble. Can you give us the reason and remedy? I live in the state of Kansas. E. H. K.

Fumigation with Nico-fume we have never found to be injurious to the foliage of spiræas, but these plants will simply not stand the smoke from tobacco stems. Are you quite sure that you have given your plants an abundant water supply? Dryness at the root is a more probable cause of the curling and browning than fumigation. Spiræas, as astilbes are still mostly called in the trade, can hardly be overwatered in your climate. They will do better if you place a saucer under each pot when the flower spikes begin to push up.

Keep the saucers full of water. There is no fear of the roots becoming soggy, as the plant requires more water than any other greenhouse flowering plant when in full growth. Especially is this true when the flowering period arrives.

LETTERING IN PLANTS.

One of my customers has asked me to do some carpet bedding and lettering in front of a club house. The building sits back only a short distance from the street. There are two curved drives which form the arc of a circle, running in from both the east and the west sides of the lot and passing in front of the house. The visitors drive in at one side and pass out at the other. The entrances to the drives are only thirty feet apart and there is a hedge along the street for these thirty feet. The driveway at the center is only fifteen feet from the hedge and between the driveway and the hedge is lawn. I want the lettering "Wednesday Club" in a curve at the back of the lawn. What would be the best plants to use? Would you recommend red and yellow alternanthera, or could I use Tom Thumb alyssum for the background and lobelia for the letters? Would letters twelve inches high be large enough? Should the lettering be so it could be read from the street or from the house? About how much would the whole thing cost? M. O.

Alyssum and lobelia, if you could depend on them both flowering all summer, would answer well for your bed. Unfortunately the lobelia is unreliable, frequently damping off during warm, damp weather, when there is little sunshine. On the whole, I think a groundwork of red and lettering of yellow alternanthera would give the best satisfaction. The letters would be rather small to show effectively if only a foot in length. I would advise making them twenty-four inches long, certainly not less than eighteen inches. You should get $4 per hundred for your alternanthera. Decide on the length of your letters and reckon on a double row of plants for these. They should be planted fairly close to make a show from the start. Be sure the soil is well enriched and do not plant out in your latitude (Massachusetts) before the first week in June. Face the letters toward the street. C. W.

Retail Store of H. M. Walbridge, Hornell, N. Y.

AN ORANGE YELLOW.

Is there a chrysanthemum that produces large blooms of a true deep orange yellow? T. H. W.

One of the novelties of this season, Rose Pockett, comes near to filling the bill as an orange yellow, as does also Mrs. W. Wells. The latter is small in the flower, but in color is one of the finest things we have in cultivation. Another fine variety in that color is Old Gold. This is a splendid variety for pot work and is very highly esteemed by some growers. Other good deep yellows are Mary Donnellan, General Hutton and the old Golden Wedding. C. H. T.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

The Important Elements.

The season is rolling along and it is time that stock intended for early planting was cut of the sand, if not already potted up. It is a great mistake, though a common one, to leave the cuttings too long in the sand. Just as soon as they have emitted roots half an inch long they should be potted up; then the plant does not get the chance to become spindly and drawn up.

The chief secret in handling mums successfully is not to let the plants suffer at any time after the cutting has once been started till the flower is fully developed. True, the plant will live and make some kind of a showing under conditions that would kill other plants, and for that reason is often neglected for other stock that will not as well stand rough usage, but that does not alter the fact that the mum requires just as careful handling as any other plant ir one is looking for the finest results.

Lack of Space.

How often do we see, at this season, batches of mums that were most likely nice stock when potted, but are now drawn up, spindly, hard at the bottom and jammed into a spare corner with not half room enough! Granted that one is crowded for space, and none of us seems to have room enough in spring, still Easter has gone now and cleaned out lots of stock. This gives considerable room, and while the bedding plants need most of it, leave a space for the mums.

Few florists' places have as many coldframes as they should have. Some, in fact, have none. I know of no position better suited to the young mums than are coldframes for the month of April. There the plants will not get drawn up, but will bush out and make ideal stock for planting out later.

Watering and Repotting.

If your plants are getting potbound, move them along to 4-inch or even 6-inch, rather than have them get stunted. Do not let them get dry either, if you can help it. Much stock runs up to bud every year in May and early June, and while this can at times be traced to other causes and some kinds do it out of pure cussedness, still much of it is caused by neglect of watering in the spring rush. The plants get hard and stunted, and the hardening of the wood will invariably throw them into bud. Plants in a coldframe, when the nights are running, as they have been, down to the freezing point, should not get much water, of course, or the foliage will become diseased, but good horse sense will keep the cultivator on the right track in this respect.

Cutting Down Plants.

I am often asked how close to the ground plants should be cut, when they have become too tall (by being propagated too early), in order to have them come away strong and healthy again. In the first place, plants should not be allowed to run up like that. If they are too tall, pinch them back before the wood gets hard, and then the check to the plants will not be so great and they will break better than if cut down into the hard wood.

Where one's head room is restricted, it is better to strike the cuttings later than to have plants hanging around too long before planting, but by a judicious use of the thumb and finger one can keep the plants down to almost any height.

Singles.

Those who are growing singles for pot plants should pinch out the tips almost as soon as the plant is established in the pot, to keep the plant dwarf and robust. Some kinds, like Arthur Horne, Ethel Beer or Miss A. Holden, are naturally dwarf and branching, but most of them should be kept closely pinched till the end of June. The prettiest pot mums I have ever seen were singles that were put in the sand June 1 and then grown right along, without any check or pinching or anything else. They flowered in 6-inch pots and the owner of them told me that he never grew a crop in the same space of time that turned him in as much money. Charles H. Totty.

SINGLE MUMS NOT PROFITABLE

W. J. Godfrey, the well-known English grower of chrysanthemums, is quoted as follows:

"Single chrysanthemums will never become popular for market growers. Let anyone note the cut from a given space and it will be found the money they make will not compare favorably with the ordinary market varieties. For florists who do a good class of retail business and grow the flowers they dispose of, single chrysanthemums will be found an attraction and profitable, but they must be of good form and color, with plenty of substance. Market growers are conservative in respect to acquiring new varieties, possibly not without cause, and require a lot of coaxing to try them. Many, in fact most, of the so-called early flowering 'single' chrysanthemums are little better than rubbish in the eyes of the market grower and not to be compared to the older section of ordinary early-flowering varieties for general decorative purposes. They are rough in form, dull and poor in color and miffy doers. Because a variety produces flowers with an 'eye' or hollow center, but has from three to five rows of florets, frequently badly arranged, it is hardly fair to dub it a 'single.'"

COAL ASHES ON THE BENCH.

Some years ago a neighbor florist came to me in great distress regarding his geraniums. A sample at once showed them to be in bad shape, and an examination proved the trouble to be at the roots. A visit to the greenhouse showed the trouble to be caused by the coal ashes on the bench on which the pots were set. Those on sand were in prime condition.

Now, I am not prepared to say what the trouble was chemically. Perhaps these particular ashes were contaminated with some foreign substance. At all events, they produced nervous prostration—in the florist.

Since then I have had some suspicions about coal ashes, except as a road material. Sand suits me and, luckily, I have an abundance. E. Z. Nuff.

POOR COMPOST.

In a recent issue of the Review someone complained about plants failing to do well in a particular soil, and inquired as to the cause and remedy. This calls to mind some recent troubles of the writer.

I composted my soil last summer as usual, using a load of manure to six of sods and soil. The weather following, and continuing well into the winter, was unusually dry. The result was that the compost did not get soaked, and when taken under cover, late in October, was quite dry, but well rotted. But, as results showed, it had not properly composted, owing to this dryness.

The effect of this soil on different plants was as varied as the plants themselves. Stock plants of salvias and geraniums failed to take hold, many dying outright. Sword ferns lifted from the bench did absolutely nothing, though they remained in an apparently healthy condition, and they were given new soil later. Cinerarias and double petunias did remarkably well.

Cuttings of salvia did poorly, showing a weak, yellow growth. These, without any change, started an unusually vigorous growth in March, showing that the watering brought about the proper soil conditions. Cuttings of cuphea were a failure, and cuttings of vinca nearly so, but later they took hold, as did the salvia.

Some of the soil, left out to the action of the weather, has proven all that could be desired.

I have no doubt that many florists have suffered from a like cause. Moral: See that your soil has one thorough soaking, artificially if not by the grace of God.

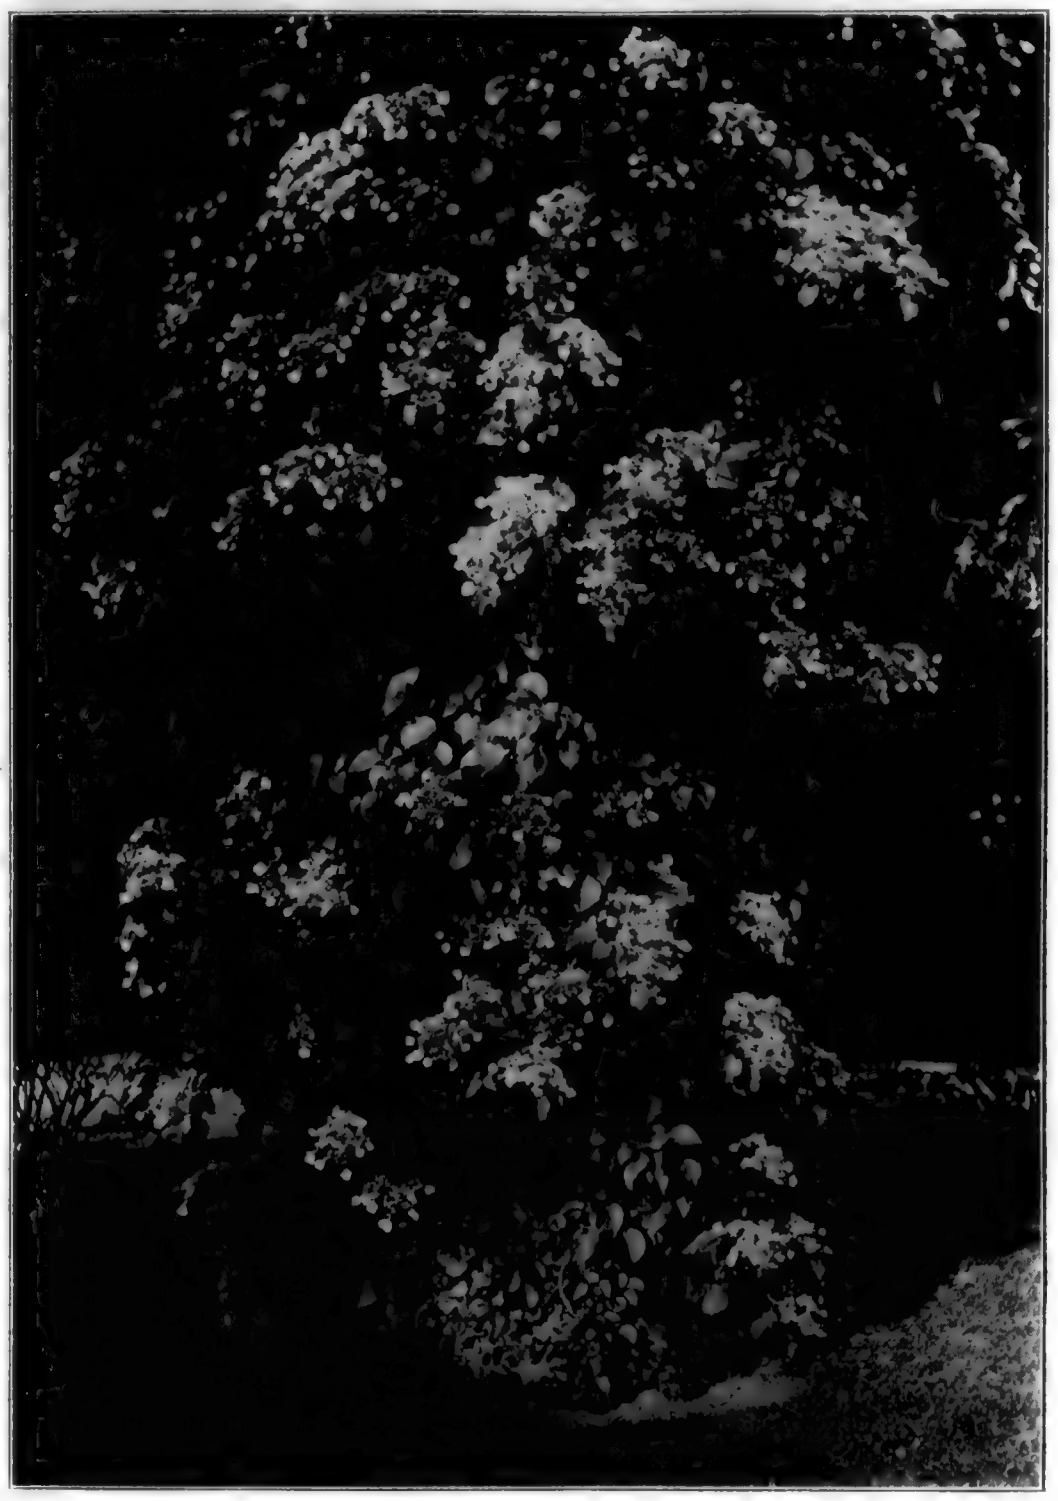
HOW OLD IS ANN?

S. F. Leonard, president of the Leonard Seed Co., is 56. He is the pioneer grower of onion sets at Chicago, and is autochthonous.*

Father Dorner will be 72 November 29. He was born at Baden, Germany, and now the florists there are beginning to grow the carnations he has raised at La Fayette.

A. F. J. Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, is 33. A Pennsylvania minister's son, born at Bloomfield, it was inevitable he should go into the flower business.

L. L. May, florist, seedsman, nurseryman and police commissioner at St. Paul, is 52. He was born at Oshawa, Ontario, and became a member of the Seed Trade Association in 1895.



Carl N. Thomas, who spends the summers on the old home farm and the winters doing the worrying for the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, is 44. He was born, brought up and still lives at West Springfield, Pa.

Benj. Dorrance, who got his sheepskin at Princeton, will be 63 in August. He was the first president of the American Rose Society, and but for him we might never have known the forcing quality of Killarney. His town is named for him.

Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., is 47. He is a conservative, perhaps because he was born in Yorkshire, England, and his early residence at Chicago was too brief for his complete recovery. He was the first rose forcer to graft Maid and Bride on Manetti.

Edgar F. Winterson, chief of the Chicago Indians when the tribe was young, is 42; born at Devizes, England. His scalp lock has long since disappeared—not lifted, just gone the way of plants that have too much bottom heat. He is treasurer of the Chicago Florists' Club.

*This is not an infection; look it up in Webster.

The Climbing Hydrangea.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, will not be 40 until the last day of August. Born in Upper Darby, Delaware county, he was the first to install artificial refrigeration for the wholesale flower business.

THE CLIMBING HYDRANGEA.

The climbing hydrangea is not a hydrangea at all, but a schizophragma; it might as properly be said the schizophragma, for it is a monotypic genus. Schizophragma hydrangeoides is closely allied to the hydrangea. The species is often confounded with Hydrangea petiolaris and, like it, young plants produce small leaves and make little growth if unsupported and suffered to trail on the ground. There is no more beautiful plant for covering walls or for climbing on the trunks of large living trees.

There is a mistaken idea as to the hardiness of Schizophragma hydrangeoides. Bailey, in his Cyclopedia, says it is hardy north as far as New York city, but plants have withstood the test of winter unprotected in the vicinity of Boston. At Brookline, Mass., there is a splendid specimen on the A. W. Blake estate and on the Ames estate at North Easton there is a large plant growing on a nut tree, where it has a cold northern exposure and where temperatures 30 degrees below zero have done no harm. W. N. Craig says that any plant which will withstand such temperatures may be described as reliably hardy anywhere.

Schizophragma hydrangeoides succeeds best in rich, moderately moist soil and in partial shade. Propagation may be by seeds or by greenwood cuttings rooted under glass. At first growth is slow, but as soon as the plants become established they go ahead with remarkable rapidity, climbing to thirty feet and more, clinging firmly by aërial rootlets. The leaves are bright green above and pale below, almost glabrous and two to four inches long. The loose cymes of small white flowers with enlarged sterile ones at the margin make it an especially attractive feature of large grounds. The blooming season is in late June or early July.

Thompsonville, Conn.—The Brainard Floral & Nursery Co. has secured the contract for beautifying the grounds around Memorial hall, in Windsor Locks.

Bangor, Me.—Frank P. Lane, known as a high class musician as well as a florist, has been visiting neighboring towns for the purpose of making arrangements for a chorus concert, to be held in Aroostook in June.

PINK AND WHITE COCHETS.

I have some Cochet roses, both pink and white, received from a large rose house in the first part of March. They were from 4-inch pots and intended for summer flowering. How shall I proceed with them? They are in a cool house, run at 48 to 50 degrees at night. Will they do better benched or outside in this Pennsylvania climate? I have no room for them inside until after Memorial day. W. S. K.

These roses will do all right if planted outside. Of course they would do better if benched from their present pots. It might be better to give them a shift into 5-inch pots until you are ready to use them. Ribes.

BEAUTIES AT GRAND RAPIDS.

The Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., at Grand Rapids, Mich., has had exceptional success with American Beauties this season, as the accompanying illustration will show. It is from a photograph made in one of the Beauty houses four and one-half months from the date of planting the house with young stock.

The Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co. is proving the benefits of co-operation. Having united a number of the greenhouse interests at Grand Rapids, the management is able to effect a large number of economies and at the same time secure the results of the most successful of those entering into the organization, improving the quantity and character of output and the methods of marketing. The concern is conducted really as two establishments, which cooperate. One is producing cut flowers and pot plants and the other growing vegetables. N. B. Stover is the manager of the florists' department and S. J. Perry the manager of the vegetable department.

RHEA REID IN EUROPE.

It is well known that the Rhea Reid rose carried off the grand prize in the Bagatelle gardens contest in Paris, France, last summer, and it seems to be making a decided success everywhere in Europe. To the many growers in this country who have been more or less disappointed at the behavior of Rhea Reid under glass in its first season, the following from a grower in England will be of interest:

"For a long time there was a demand for a really good dark red hybrid tea or tea-scented rose, and when Liberty was introduced in 1900 we thought we had the right thing. Good as Liberty is, it has not the grand habit of Rhea Reid. I grant that Liberty is a deeper and clearer red—almost scarlet in intensity of color, an exquisite shape, fragrant, and a free grower under glass, but it is too tender and erratic in growth to become a popular rose in the open.

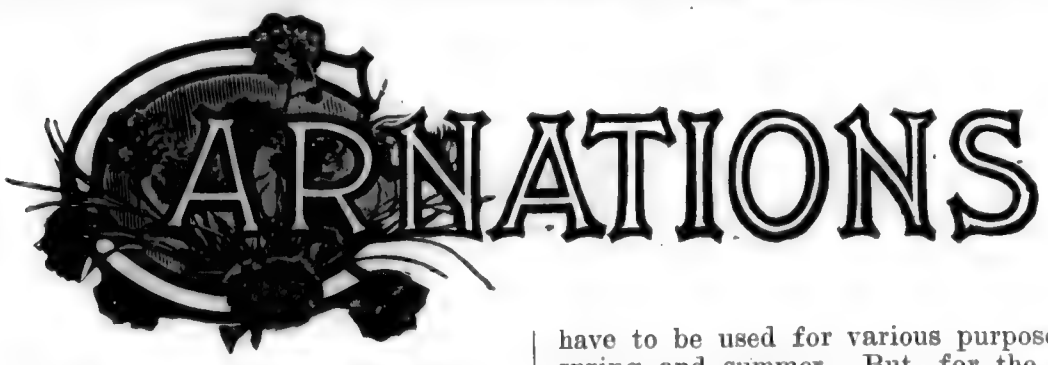
"Five years later (1905) Richmond was sent out. This is decidedly better in growth, but with us it is not so good and deep in color as Liberty. Its better and more vigorous habit, however, has enabled it to push Liberty on one side, and to quite surpass it as a forcing rose. You can cut Richmond with a much more useful stem than is possible with Liberty, and not feel grieved that so much of the plant is gone.

"Rhea Reid was sent out last year by the E. G. Hill Co, the introducers of Richmond, and they gave it a most glowing description: 'As large as American Beauty, as double as Bridesmaid, as fragrant as La France, as red as Richmond in winter,' etc. American Beauty is not much grown on this side, but Rhea Reid has a decided likeness to it in shape. Rhea Reid is a grand rose, and is almost all that is claimed for it by the raisers, but I think they go a trifle too far when they claim for it the fragrance of La France, although it has much of the sweet perfume found in General Jacqueminot.

"Rhea Reid has done well with us. We had plants over early in the spring of 1908, full of growth when they arrived; so much so that buds were taken off and worked upon a few early stocks in the open. These grew, and flowered during the same summer, while the plants that were put in the open border continued in flower almost as late as the dwarfer forms of polyanthas. Under glass, too, it was constant, and it is here, I feel sure, it will be most welcome. It stands remarkably well. As a matter of fact, the fullest blown flower shown at the R. H. S., when it gained an award of merit, was a fortnight old.

"Earlier in this note I mentioned that Richmond produced good growth for cutting from, but Rhea Reid is much more vigorous. A friend of mine has a quantity under glass—some 4,000 plants—and thinks much of it, but it does not oust Richmond, in his opinion, under glass. It is a little too double, and long in opening for his purpose, nor is it so finely formed in the bud stage as Richmond.

"After only one season's growth in the open it is hardly fair to say too much of this rose, but it is a remarkably free and vigorous grower, floriferous, stands the sun, and lasts well, while that it is hardy is proved by the way our plants and dormant buds have passed through the late severe weather, and I must say they have stood as well as the most hardy of the hybrid perpetuals.



"It is of ideal habit, vigorous, and yet free, not throwing up a few long growths and unbalancing the plant, as so many do, and this will be in its favor as a permanent bedding rose."

Trenton, N. J.—Easter stock at Martin C. Ribsam's was better and more plentiful than ever before. The prevailing prices were not higher than they usually are at that season; in fact, some prices were lower than last year.

Macon, Ga.—In contradiction of a published statement, that Easter lilies were scarce here and that they are becoming less and less popular for use in churches, two florists, D. C. Horgan, of the Idle Hour Nurseries, and C. N. Woodruff, issue the statement that they had a larger supply of Bermuda lilies for Easter, and sold more of them, than ever before.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Potting Late Cuttings.

If you still have some cuttings in the propagating bench, do not allow them to remain any longer than is absolutely necessary. They will be late even at best, and will need every possible encouragement to make fair plants for housing next fall. Some varieties, with a fair growing season, will make it all right, but only the stronger growers will do it.

Varieties like Lady Bountiful or Victory will make only small plants unless they are well established in pots by this time.

When potting cuttings this late in the season, use the smallest pots you have, 2-inch or less. The smaller the pot the quicker will the young plant establish itself, and the sooner can the plant be handled without breaking the ball. This latter point is worth a great deal at planting-out time. Pot in rather light soil, as you want quick root action.

The Young Plants.

Of course you have been going over the young plants regularly and topping those which were advanced enough. We like to have every plant topped when it is planted out, as it saves considerable labor. If the young breaks are just showing the first leaves, we consider the plants in perfect condition for planting. When the breaks have grown long, there is danger of their hardening off before the plant gets under way again, and with many varieties a sprawly plant will result. Instead of one crown with many shoots, there will be several smaller crowns hanging to the main stem. At housing time there is much breaking off of branches, and the plants will need supporting early. That is why I have always advocated close topping at the beginning.

Water the young plants carefully and watch for dry spots. When potbound they will dry out rapidly on bright, warm days. Repeated severe drying out will cause them to harden, and the breaks will come weaker and slower when you top them.

Did you put your young plants outside in a coldframe a week or two ago? If you did, they will be in fine condition to plant any time you can get the land ready. If, however, you have kept them in the growing houses, do not be in too big a rush to get them out. A frost may not kill them, but no one has ever convinced me that it will do them any good. A. F. J. BAUR.

VENTILATION.

At present my employer is building a carnation house 18x50, designed by a landscape firm who are in charge of certain improvements which are being made on this estate. The house in question is designed not to have side ventilators; to which I object, as I know the house will have to be used for various purposes in spring and summer. But, for the sake of argument, would not a house of the above dimensions strictly for carnations be better with side ventilators? The designers claim that the best carnation growers in New York state have no side ventilators on their houses. This is a point I have not seen discussed in the REVIEW, and would like to have some of your readers' views on it.

MANURE FOR MULCHING.

Is well rotted cow manure better than finely chopped fresher cow manure for mulching carnations and roses? I mix it with a double quantity of soil and run through a coarse sieve. J. P. K.

When cow manure is about half rotted —that is, rotted enough to have lost its rankness—it is in the best possible condition for fertilizer. When mixed with soil as you describe, it makes an ideal mulching material for carnations, roses or almost any other crop. Mixing it with soil safeguards against an excess of ammonia, which the soil will take up and give off later, gradually.

Cow manure which is well rotted can be used alone and makes good mulch, but has not the strength of the fresher kind. Especially is this true of manure which has lain to rot outside, and has been leached by the rains while rotting.

RUDD'S WEED KILLER.

The following is the weed killer formula used by W. N. Rudd at Mt. Greenwood Cemetery, Chicago:

"Twenty pounds common arsenic, fifteen gallons water; boil fifteen minutes; thirty-five gallons cold water to be then added; forty pounds caustic soda; boil till clear. For use dilute with four parts water to one part stock solution and apply after a rain or at least after the walks and drives have been well sprinkled, as it does not penetrate to the roots well when the roadway is dry. Materials should be purchased in quantity from wholesale druggists. The last lot bought here was at the rate of 2 cents per pound for sixty per cent caustic soda and 4½ cents for arsenic, thus making the cost of material less than 7-10 cent per gallon.

"As in many other cases, prevention is better than cure, and if applied when the weeds are small much less material and much less labor is needed."

READING, PA.—Irvin H. Anderson, proprietor of the Brookside Greenhouses, will open a store in this city.

Peonies.

Peonies are now pushing up quite vigorously. The cool, moist, spring weather hitherto enjoyed has been much to their liking, and a good crop of flowers should be vouchsafed us. Beds or nursery rows of plants should have the soil stirred. Any winter mulch will, of course, have been removed before this time. Peonies are gross feeders, and they will be much invigorated by a top dressing of dried blood or blood and bone now, hoeing the ground over after applying it. It is a good plan to give a second application of some quick-acting fertilizer, like sulphate of ammonia or nitrate of soda, when the buds appear. Keep the hoe or cultivator constantly at work among the plants. It will astonish you how much faster they will grow than if left with a hard baked surface.

Lilies.

Lilium longiflorum intended for Memorial day should now have the buds in sight. They will be in season if you can count them a month before you want them, growth now being much more rapid than before Easter. It will, of course, be necessary to move forward plants to cooler quarters and backward ones to more heat. Prices are somewhat lower at the end of May, but it will pay you to hold as many lilies as possible for that time.

Speciosums and auratums in pots or boxes will now have stems of considerable length, and should be given a light bench in a cool house. These lilies must not be forced. An ordinary greenhouse temperature will give you stocky plants. Coddling tactics will make lanky stems and simply ruin the plants. Aphis must be guarded against. If it gets a good foothold in the tops of the shoots, it will mean a loss of many buds. Keep some tobacco dust dropped on the tops, or spray with some tobacco extract. Fumigation, now that the weather is so much warmer, should be done on cool, damp nights. Avoid it as much as possible on warm nights. The higher the temperature, the greater the chances of injury to tender foliage.

Outdoor clumps of lilies will, or should be well above ground now. A mulch of old decayed manure or partly rotted leaves to keep the roots cool and moist will be found beneficial. Have you ever noticed how much more vigorously lilies will grow in a bed constantly mulched with leaves than where the surface soil is exposed to the sun? All lilies, with the possible exception of candidum, are benefited by a mulch during the growing season. Candidum makes a circle of leaves on the surface of the ground, and any mulch applied to it must be light, or the leaves will be covered, which will cause decay.

Marguerites.

The white and pink forms of Marguerite Queen Alexandra are useful for Memorial day. The house containing these will now need shading, to hold back the plants. The yellow varieties are all good sellers, and bring profitable prices at the same holiday. If grown in pots, an abundant water supply will be necessary. If the plants can be stood on a bed and allowed to root through, they will be much improved.

Cuttings rooted earlier in the spring and intended for flowering next winter must not be allowed to become potbound. Keep all flower buds removed. The plants will show a persistency in wanting to bloom in preference to making growths, and cuttings taken now, while they will root, are not desirable. It will be necessary to wait until the early days of autumn before suitable propagating wood is found. After flowering, be sure to retain a few plants of each variety of marguerite, cut them back and plant outdoors when danger of frost is gone.

The pink form of Marguerite Queen Alexandra promises to make a desirable pot plant, and should be useful at both Easter and Memorial day.

Gloxinias.

Seedlings of gloxinia must be transferred to flats as soon as of sufficient size to conveniently handle, using a compost of leaf-mold, sand and a small proportion of loam. Keep them shaded in a warm, moist house. Our earliest seedlings have just been potted off singly. These will make useful flowering plants in late summer.

Early started gloxinias are now flowering and, as these when well flowered are very salable, care should be taken to avoid wetting the foliage. Leaves with sunburns disfigure plants so that they cannot be sold. Gloxinia flowers, while not considered of much trade value, work very nicely in floral designs, and for choice bouquets at Memorial day are splendid. The plants like a house with a temperature of 60 degrees at night.

Bedding Geraniums.

Any pinching out of flower spikes on your geraniums should now be discontinued, if you want plants in nice bloom for bedding out time. It is an advantage at selling time to have a flower open on as many plants as possible, for have you noticed how your customers will always want such, even if the plants are half the size of those without flowers? Be sure the plants are not too crowded. If given necessary space, they will easily be worth 50 cents per dozen more at retail. Some may be showing foliage of a pale color and not be making satisfactory growth. Probable causes are too poor compost and not sufficiently firm potting. Use weak doses of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia at intervals of four or five days. One ounce of the chemical to five gallons of water is strong enough.

Pick off decaying foliage and flowers, and as the weather is now much warmer an increased water supply will be necessary. Always plan to have foliage dry at nightfall. Plants will do well in closely built frames, but may require covering on occasional cold nights. We are never sure of settled weather until the end of May in the northern states.

Tuberous Begonias.

Except it may be in specially favored spots near the ocean, tuberous begonias cannot be classed as satisfactory bedding plants. In some parts of Maine, Nova Scotia and the Canadian provinces they stand the sun well and bloom even more satisfactorily than geraniums, but as a rule the intense summer heat is too much for them. This is to be regretted, for where they will succeed, as in the British Isles, they are incomparably superior to zonal geraniums, withstanding heavy rain storms far better and flowering until cut down by frost.

Where partial shade can be given them, such as on the north side of a building or with high overhanging branches, they succeed well, especially if a mulching is given and an occasional soaking with the hose afforded. It is time now to start the tubers for bedding. They will be starting to grow as it is and, if placed in flats of sand and leaf-mold, will be fit to pot in a few days. It is an advantage to have a few with flowers on at bedding out time. Your customers can then better see what beautiful subjects they are.

Plants started a month ago should have some blooms open by the end of May. Begonias do not like much heat and should be grown 10 degrees cooler than gloxinias. A compost of turfy loam, decayed cow manure and sand suits them. For vases and piazza boxes partially shaded, tuberous begonias will be found persistent bloomers.

Asparagus Seedlings.

Seedlings of Asparagus plumosus nanus and A. Sprengeri should be potted off now before they become crowded and drawn. A compost of sandy loam with a little leaf-mold suits them. Give them a stand on a sunny bench, pot to pot, and they will grow fast. The night temperature should not be less than 55 degrees at this season for them. If you are short of A. Sprengeri and have some ripe berries, sow these at once. They can be grown along into useful little stock before Christmas. If you have no seed, it can be purchased reasonably. There never seems to be much of a surplus of this plant.

Primulas.

The earliest sown batch of primulas should now be ready for a shift into 2½-inch pots. Give them a lightly shaded shelf in a cool, light house, or a bench well up to the light. A suitable soil for the early potting should consist of two-thirds leaf-mold, one-third loam and a good dash of sand. A coldframe is the ideal place in which to grow these during summer, but bedding and other plants will fill them for at least another month.

Cattleyas.

The increasing power of the sun will necessitate some additional shading, especially on the south side of the houses. It is unwise to shade heavily at any time. Cattleyas grown under such conditions are green and soft, presenting a beautiful, healthy appearance. These usually, however, fail to flower as freely as those exposed to strong light. A little more water can now be afforded C. Trianæ and C. labiata, which are rooting freely. Early summer varieties, such as Mendellii, Skinneri and Mossiæ, are now coming in season and those in bloom should be placed where they can get a little more shade and have a rather lower temperature. Early in the afternoon of hot days a light syringing will benefit cattleyas. Avoid it on dull days. A temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 degrees in the daytime, will suit the general run of cattleyas. On warm nights a little air can be left on all night with advantage.

GOLDFISH.

A number of florists have found goldfish and aquarium supplies a profitable side line and it might pay others to add these items to their business.

The accompanying views show the ponds in which goldfish are bred by W. E. Dwight, Oak Park, Ill. He finds the Comet, Japanese Fringe Tail and Japanese Fan Tail the most profitable and satisfactory, and says that ten of each of these sorts should be sufficient to start a stock.

The fish spawn about June 10, on the roots of the water hyacinths. When the spawn is deposited he removes the plants to an aquarium, in which the fish hatch in three to five days. Mud from the pond is placed in the bottom of the aquarium and this generates the microscopic organisms upon which the minute fish feed. Additional food is given in the form of imported dried ox heart. After ten days or two weeks in the aquarium the fry are removed to one of the small ponds. By September 15 they are salable at 15 cents each. As they attain size they are shifted to other ponds, it being unwise to keep the large and very small fish together. At 2 years old the fish retail at $1 each. As a dollar's worth of feed will carry a thousand fish through a season, there is a satisfactory return for the slight expense and trouble involved.

HILLEGOM BULB SHOW.

Exhibition of Bulbs in Flower.

With a view to creating a wider demand for bulbs for spring bedding, the Hillegom bulb growers some months ago decided to open an exhibition to demonstrate to Holland's visitors the merits of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi for spring bedding in public and private parks and gardens.

This exhibition was opened April 8 and will continue until May 8. Nothing could be more natural. Hillegom is fortunate in having its town hall standing within the precincts of a small park, and this was converted into a series of flower gardens and planted with bulbs in the fall of 1908. The Hillegom bulb growers, to the number of fifty or thereabouts, contributed the bulbs, 200,000 of them. An organizing committee took the work in hand and April 8 the mayor of Hillegom declared the exhibition open.

Eighteen Miles of Flowers.

Thousands of visitors from European countries and from America also travel in the bulb district each year in April. And it is a glorious sight—mile after mile of fields of flowers, a gaily colored carpet stretching from Haarlem to Leiden, a distance of about eighteen miles, with a width of four or five miles. Visitors, however, unless they are trade buyers, rarely have an opportunity of walking in the fields and noting names and particulars. It is for the benefit of these that the exhibition is planned, and the purpose, as already mentioned, is to stimulate a demand for bulbs, the demand to come through the merchants to whom the bulb growers export.

It is worthy of note that the annual export of bulbs from Holland is 15,000,000 kilograms, and the United States is responsible for only eighteen per cent of the total. Great Britain takes forty per cent and Germany twenty-five per cent. It is computed that there are 2,000 growers and about 150 exporters in Holland.

Arrangement of the Beds.

Coming again to the exhibition, hyacinths, tulips and narcissi are the leading features, but other flowering bulbs are also in evidence. About 350 varieties are represented in beds and plots, ranging from twenty-five bulbs of a sort upward.

In the general view of the gardens the beds have been planted to demonstrate the best color schemes in spring bedding. The beds are of varied designs and sizes. In long borders, varieties are planted side by side for convenience in taking notes; for instance, fifty varieties of single tulips, twenty-five bulbs of each; fifty varieties of double tulips, twenty-five bulbs of each, and so on with hyacinths and the different sections of narcissi.

In April next an exhibition on similar lines, but on a considerably larger scale, will be opened at Haarlem, and the general committee is now busily at work preparing the plans. Bee.

BURLAP SAVES CROP.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made April 21 at the establishment of John T. Conger, at Hartwell, O., a suburb of Cincinnati, over which heavy hail fell the day before. Out of a total of 5,000 feet of glass Mr. Conger lost 4,500 feet, or practically nine panes out of ten. The illustrations show how he covered his houses with burlap, thereby saving what of the crop had been spared by the falling hail and glass. Mr. Conger is seen standing at the end of the houses.

Department of Plant Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that E. Y. Teas, of Centerville, Wayne county, Ind., offers for registration the plant described below. Any person objecting to the registration of this plant or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name — Hydrangea cinerea sterilis, Teas' Snowball hydrangea.

Description—Collected from forest; a sport from Hydrangea cinerea; growth, upright, spreading; foliage, glaucous, pointed, serrated; height, four feet; flowers, snow-white.

Will you please give directions for the culture of Amaryllis Johnsonii?

L. G.

Amaryllis Johnsonii is the oldest of the hybrids, having been raised over a century ago. Like all of the family, it requires to be kept growing from the time it is started—usually February—until the end of September, when it should have the water supply gradually reduced and be rested in a dry house or frame, where a minimum temperature of 45 to 50 degrees can be maintained. Amaryllises are sometimes planted out in beds and lifted each fall. If well mulched, they will make big bulbs under this mode of culture, but they cannot become established in pots before the flowering season comes on.

Pot culture is to be preferred, 6-inch to 8-inch pots being suitable. For larger specimens with a number of bulbs in a pot, 10-inch to 12-inch pots may be used. An 8-inch pot will carry three to five bulbs, according to their strength. For compost use a rather heavy fibrous loam, dried cow manure, broken charcoal and sand; a little fine bone may also be added. Plant the bulbs just sufficiently in the soil to firm them; never bury them.

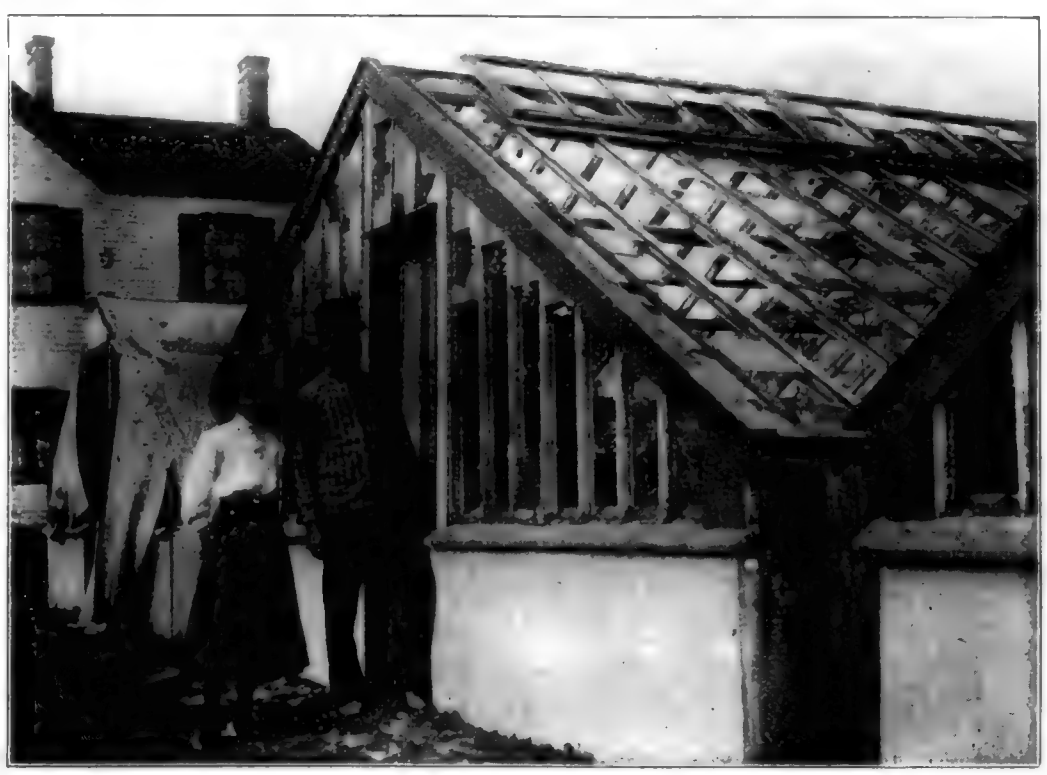
When starting amaryllis in early spring, if they are in 7-inch or 8-inch pots, see that the drainage is good. Pick away the loose surface soil, give a liberal top dressing and feed as the spikes appear. We find potting once in two years is sufficient. Start in a temperature of 60 degrees and spray daily, but do not overwater until leaves and spikes appear. A little bottom heat is an advantage.

Many failures in amaryllis culture are due to neglect of the plants after blooming. We have seen some growers lay them on their sides, as they would poinsettias. This is all wrong. The plants should have a light, sunny house or frame all summer, and if plunged, all the better. Treated thus, they will give returns commensurate with the labor bestowed upon them. C. W.

OBITUARY.

Charles Biederman.

Charles Biederman, a member of the firm of Schultz & Biederman, Thirty-fourth street and Prospect avenue, Kansas City, was stricken with a hemorrhage while walking along Grand avenue about 4 o'clock April 13. He was assisted to the office by Dr. Julius Frischer, 507 Grand avenue, where he died. Mr. Biederman, whose home was at 3325 Prospect avenue, was 70 years old, and had lived in Kansas City forty-five years. He was a noted hunter and was Kansas City's oldest sportsman. He is survived by his wife, a son William, three daughters, Mrs. Edith Eagles, of Leavenworth, Mrs. C. A. Schultz and Mrs. J. Redmond, both of Kansas City, and sixteen grandchildren.



Mrs. A. T. Peterson.

Mrs. A. T. Peterson, wife of the florist at Wheaton, Ill., died April 20, the funeral being held April 22. Both Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were old residents and widely known in Du Page county and the obsequies were largely attended.

Mrs. Gottfried Amling.

Laurette Amling, wife of Gottfried Amling, died April 24 at her home at Forest Park, Chicago.

Mrs. Amling was 68 years of age. Her illness had been of short duration, dating almost from the day that her husband recently returned home from a severe surgical operation in the Oak Park hospital. Mrs. Amling was born in Saxony. She came to Proviso, then a suburb of Chicago, with her parents when 10 years of age. She was married August 15, 1858, and the golden wedding celebration was the subject of a news note in the Review last summer. Mr. and Mrs. Amling had lived their whole lives practically on one spot and were widely known in that section. Mr. Amling is 76 years old and with him survive nine children, thirty-three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Of the sons three are well known in the trade. The eldest is Albert F. Amling, president of the company which bears his name, with a large range of greenhouses at Maywood, Ill. The second son, Ernst C. Am-ling, is the Chicago wholesale florist, whose home is at Oak Park. William Amling recently removed from Milwaukee to Maywood and became a highly successful grower of carnations.

Greenhouses of J. T. Conger After Hail Storm.

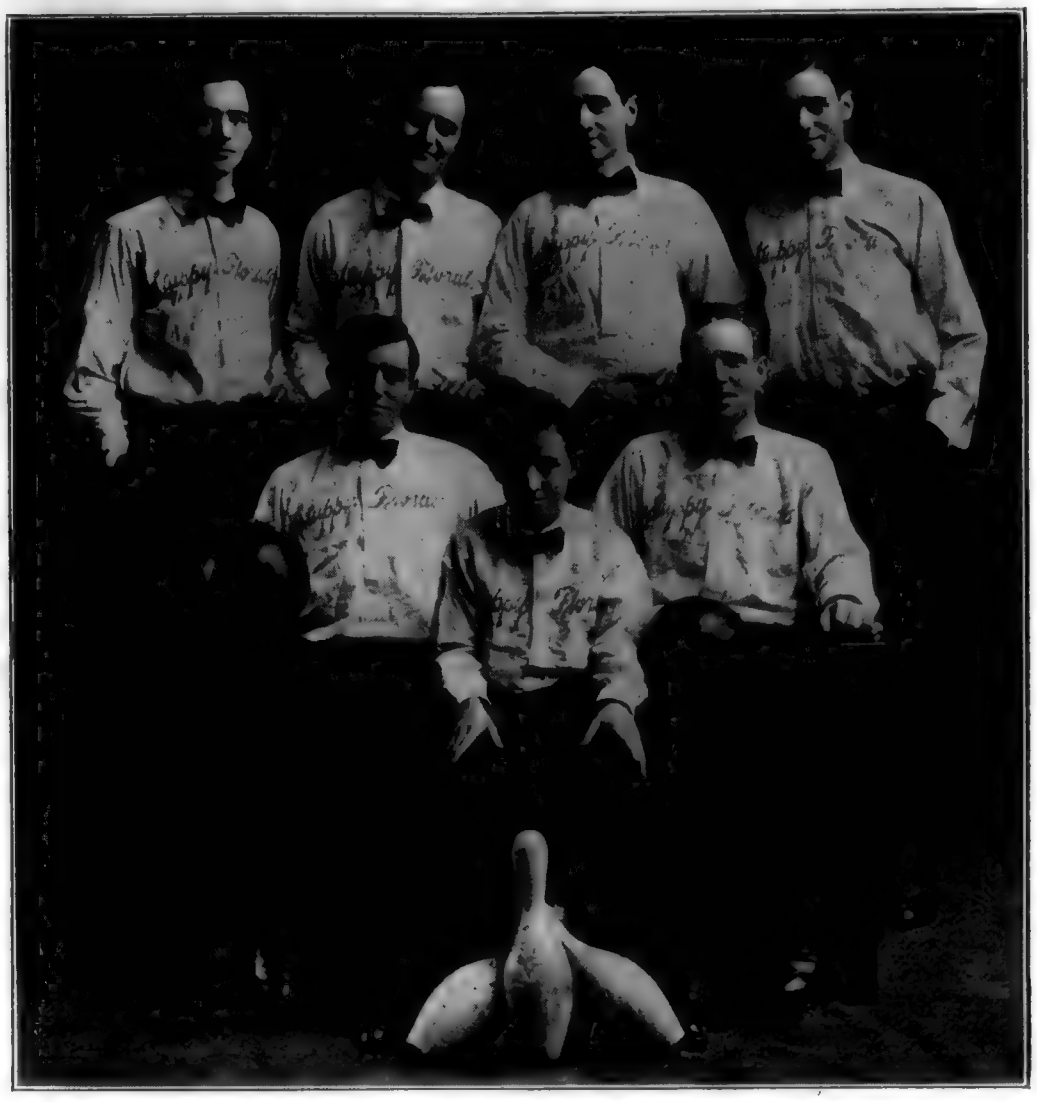
The funeral was held from the family home and church at Forest Park, Wednesday, April 28, and was largely attended. The many floral pieces sent attested the high esteem in which the venerable couple and their sons are held.

Walter S. Hogg.

Walter Scoon Hogg, one of the pioneer florists of Providence, R. I., died suddenly at his home, 34 Congdon street, Sunday night, April 18. Although he had been in poor health for several months, he was not confined to his home, and on Sunday attended church service and Bible class session. Later in the day a hemorrhage of the brain caused his death.



Mr. Hogg was born in Scotland in 1844, but came to Providence with his parents in early childhood. He was educated in the public schools, and always lived in the section of the city where he died. After leaving school he entered the employ of Royal C. Taft, who was afterwards governor of Rhode Island, and was for several years a gardener on his estate.

In 1864, in company with his brother, the late Robert Hogg, who had been a gardener for several years in Bristol, R. I., Mr. Hogg entered the florists' business at the corner of Benefit and Meeting streets, succeeding Walter Paddock, whose business they purchased. At that time there were but three establishments of the kind in Providence, and the work was largely in the laying out and caring for private grounds. Both brothers were capable and successful, and many of the most beautiful grounds surrounding wealthy residences of that city were originally designed and laid out under the personal direction of one or the other. The brothers remained in copartnership for about ten years, when Robert withdrew and opened the greenhouses on Broadway, where William Appleton, who succeeded him, is still located. Robert died several years ago. Walter Hogg continued the business at the old stand with considerable success until he sold out in 1900 to Theodore R. Peterson.

Mr. Hogg was a member of the Central Congregational church for forty years and treasurer of the Bethel Mission for twenty years. He was identified with almost every charitable enterprise of the general character that was set on foot during his years of active interest in affairs. He was a constant contributor to private benevolences, and many instances of his kindly help to young men will be recalled. He owned a fine summer place at Digby, Nova Scotia, where he spent a portion of each year. The deceased was a Mason of high degree and a Knight Templar. He is survived by a widow and one daughter.

Thomas Kennedy.

Thomas Kennedy, who was an employee in the gardeners' department at Swan Point cemetery, Providence, R. I., for nearly half a century, died at his home in that city April 21. He was 62 years of age, and was widely known. His funeral was held April 24, at which there was a profusion of flowers. From Superintendent McCarthy, of Swan Point cemetery, came an immense wreath of magnolia blossoms and early shrub flowers which the deceased had assisted in raising within the cemetery grounds. There was also a large cross and mounded base made of carnations, from the men who worked about the grounds. Six men whose friendship has existed for many years served as pallbearers. Mr. Kennedy leaves a widow, five daughters and two sons.

Bowling Team of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo.

Samuel W. Marshall.

Samuel W. Marshall, one of the best known California nurserymen, died at Fresno, Cal., April 15. Mr. Marshall had been actively interested in tree growing for twenty-five years and had built up a large business at the time of his death. He leaves a wife and a son, Wm. S. Marshall, the latter having long been associated with him in the conducting of his business.

L. B. Baxter.

L. B. Baxter, nurseryman, of Nichols, Mo., died April 21, of pneumonia, after a brief illness. He was about 48 years of age and leaves a wife and sister.

R. M. Maeder.

R. M. Maeder, of Dauphin, Pa., died April 2 and was buried April 6. His wife survives him.

Long Branch, N. J.—W. G. Eisele has just completed an iron-frame greenhouse on the Behr property in Cedar avenue, at a cost of $8,000.

Baldwin, N. Y.—Hitchings & Co. are building for George T. Schuneman, widely known as a violet grower, three houses, each 30x150, of semi-iron construction. The houses are so arranged as to make it convenient to drive through them with a horse and wagon. A gang of twenty men are pushing the work along and the houses will be ready for use by June 1.

STUPPY'S BOWLERS.

The bowlers of the S. A. F. will now have to sit up and take notice of the team of the Stuppy Floral Co., which has just won the pennant in the St. Joseph City Bowling League. They won the pennant by good, consistent bowling, high game for the season being 275 and high three game 2,754. They say that any florists' team will be welcomed to St. Joseph and, if the Stuppys do not win, the visiting team will know they are in some game. For company it is suggested that the bowlers bring their friends who are in the trade and a committee will show them some flowers that are also pennant winners, for good bowlers are almost always good at their business.

Kenton, O.—William Sabransky, proprietor of the Kenton Floral Nursery, will have an uptown stand in J. E. Gasson's drug store. Part of the room on the first floor is being remodeled for this purpose.

Attleboro, Mass.—Martin Ockert says Easter trade was good here. Almost twice as many lilies were sold as a year ago. Daffodils in pans sold extra well, bringing from 35 cents to 50 cents a pan. There was but little call for tulips. Hyacinths sold well. In the cut flowers, carnations were mostly in demand, bringing 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Daffodils and Paper Whites sold for 60 cents per dozen. The demand for violets was much greater than the supply.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE losses by hail have been unusually heavy this month, and have occurred in widely separated sections of the country.

ALL the indications point to better general business conditions throughout the country—and the florists will unquestionably get their share.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

IN the early part of April a great international flower show was held at Berlin, Germany. The United States was represented by two fine plants of Nephrolepis Scholzeli, exhibited by Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia.

THE new "independent" window glass trust has been incorporated in West Virginia. Newspaper reports have it that this concern, to be known as the Imperial Window Glass Co., will include all the independent factories, except 204 pots, or about ninety per cent of those not heretofore in the combination.

THE week's press service of the National Council of Horticulture consists of articles on "Easy Plants for the Aquatic Garden," "The Elephant's Ear," and "Making an Asparagus Bed." Watch for these in your local paper. If they do not appear, ask the editor why. The service is free to all newspapers reaching the public and your editor can get the articles regularly by addressing J. H. Burdett, 1720 West One-hundred-and-fourth place, Chicago.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

It is the earnest desire of those interested in the Chrysanthemum Society of America to increase its membership.

It should be understood the secretary is the only officer receiving a salary, and he only a nominal sum, much less than the work involved deserves.

The other officers, including the executive committee, and the members of the committees who judge the varieties each year, perform their duties solely for the welfare of the society.

The work of the committees deserves unlimited endorsement from all persons interested in this branch of floriculture.

There was a time when new varieties were sent out in large numbers upon the merits as they appeared to the originator, and in many cases they did not sustain the glowing description applied.

Today all new-comers must be endorsed by the society's committees to interest the public to any great degree.

Some may say all the certified varieties do not come up to the standard.

I know from experience there is no favoritism shown in the awards.

The members of these committees are not superhuman and can not discern from the six blooms submitted certain defects that are either constitutional or controlled by cultural conditions.

I refer to those susceptible to disease, difficult of propagation, insufficient petalage, etc.

They give their unbiased opinion of the six blooms before them, and that is all any mortal man can do.

These gentlemen are certainly entitled to the hearty support and praise of every grower for the unselfish zeal they have manifested in devoting time and money to this work.

Their benevolence enables the society to protect the buying public against worthless sorts.

I feel there are too few commercial and exhibition growers interested in this charitable work.

I say charitable, because we save dollars for every grower by indicating the best kinds for his purpose, and do this without compensation.

Am I asking too much of any grower, either private or commercial, to send C. W. Johnson, secretary, Rockford, Ill., $2, the annual membership fee?

All of us spend this small amount in some foolish way without benefit.

Some may say it is unnecessary to join the society, as its important matters are made public through the trade papers without additional cost.

This is true, but we all have a moral obligation which should not be lost sight of.

The florists of this country are like one large family, whose interests are in sympathy. One grower's failure with a certain crop prevents him meeting his obligations, and thus his misfortune bounds and rebounds to others in the trade.

If this organization through its efforts has pointed out the best sorts and has thus been a benefactor, it is up to those receiving such service to join hands and assist. Let us hope every one in the trade has interest in the welfare of all, and has pride enough to support this worthy cause by giving liberally of moral and a small amount of financial support.

The Great Central Market.

The market was weak up to April 23, when there was a good clean-up, although at exceedingly low rates. This week started out with conditions somewhat improved. Supply has been considerably reduced, so that prices, while there has been no change in quoted rates for selected stock, are averaging better than they were in the corresponding days last week, when it was impossible to clean out at any price.

The weather has had a great deal to do with the market conditions. The week has been cold, unseasonable and rainy. The result has been that production has not been as great as might reasonably be expected for this time of the year. There is now an abundant supply of Beauties and the quality is especially good. Several growers have run part of their Beauty houses for summer flowers, and these are just coming into crop with splendid buds on medium stems. Kil-

Sweet Peas

Finest Fancy Flowers Today

There is no flower that makes so great a hit, used in so many different ways.

We have been handling great quantities of Sweet Peas this season. Grand stock. The spring crop is just in—fancy flowers on long stems—nothing like them to be had elsewhere. White, pink and lavender, in unlimited quantity. Fancy shades for those who order in advance.

To be sure you get them in best condition, peas are picked specially for all orders on file at noon for evening shipment.

Beauties

Our annual crop of summer Beauties is now beginning to come in. Grown cool all winter, these have wonderful color and substance. A good supply in all lengths. Use them, they will make friends for you. We shall be specially strong on Beauties this spring and summer.

Roses

Maid, Bride, Kaiserin, Killarney and Richmond are all fine and our supply heavy. Order some of these and you will be back for larger lots.

Carnations

Carnations are in heavy crop, the largest lot of strictly high-grade stock on this market. It pays to handle the best. Can fill orders of any size.

Mignonette

Good stock; your customers always like it in boxes of flowers.

Lilies

Fancy, long Easter Lilies for your spring wedding decorations. Also Callas for funeral work.

Hardy Cut Ferns

Hardy Cut Ferns are reported scarce and poor. We are fortunate in having a large supply of Ferns that are exceptionally good for the season.

larney is in full crop, and is the most abundant rose in the market, but at the same time it continues to be the best seller. Maid is not in such large supply, but is of good quality and is selling fairly well. Bride is abundant and so good that Kaiserin is not meeting with active demand. Richmond also is in good crop. There are now quite a number of other roses grown in enough quantity so that one who wants to get away from the staples can always find some good stock suited to his uses. Perle, that has been scarce all winter, is now abundant.

While carnations continue in large supply, they are meeting with a little better sale than a week ago, and prices are not quite so low as then. There are too many Enchantress. Growers should cut down on this variety next season.

The violet season is practically at an end. A few fair flowers still come from Rhinebeck, but most of the growers have found it no longer pays to pick. Local singles are over. The Glencoe growers are still picking a few good doubles.

Sweet peas are coming in heavier again, for the spring crops are on. Sweet peas never were so good in this market as they are this year, and there is no better selling flower. Bulbous stock is about at an end, although there are still a few daffodils and jonquils. Outdoor tulips are expected in a few days. Outdoor irises are coming from the south to compete with the indoor irises, which have been selling so well. The southern lilac is about at an end, and it will be some time before the local crop is ready. Callas and longiflorums are bordering on a glut, not that there are so many of them, but that no one seems to want any.

Smilax is still the scarcest item on the market. Some of the wholesale houses have advanced good quality ferns to $3.50 per thousand.

Peony Prospects.

The backward spring is beginning to alarm the peony growers in the central part of the state, whose crops ordinarily are just about right for Decoration day. A letter from Spaulding & Son, at Villa Ridge, in the southern part of the state, where Kennicott Bros. Co. has a big planting of peonies, puts it laconically as follows, "It looks good to father," and then goes on to explain that conditions are about normal and stock in good shape. But A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, last week made a flying visit to some of the large peony growers in the center of the state and found things there considerably behind time. The plants are not more than half as high as usual at this date, but are in fine shape. The ground is full of moisture, and the stock is in condition to go ahead at a tremendous rate with settled warm weather.

E. C. Amling received the first peonies of the season April 24, from R. E. Kennicott & Co., Carbondale, Ill.

The peony is an important item for Decoration day, many thousands of dozens being required to meet the demand. There seems to be no limit to the number of good peonies that can be sold for Decoration day, if the price ranges from 35 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Higher prices curtail the demand.

Business Growing.

The flower business is steadily increasing in that every few days someone opens a new flower store, and hardly ever does one go out of business. Recently Fred Quasthoff has built a greenhouse and store at the corner of Forty-sixth street and Cottage Grove avenue, in a district where there was no flower store for several blocks, and E. Morton has opened the Park Flower Shop, at 1094 East Fifty-eighth street, close by the busiest elevated railroad station on the south side.

Various Notes.

A deal is on foot for the purchase of the retail store of the Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet, by the Schiller estate. If the transaction goes through, as now seems likely, it will mean that Herman Schiller, at present in the West Madison street store, will go to Joliet to take charge, and his friends who know of the matter allege that he and a Joliet girl are at the same time planning a matrimonial partnership.

The son of George Asmus has been ill with appendicitis, but is now recovering, though still in the hospital.

The death of Mrs. Gottfried Amling, mother of the Amling brothers, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

Peter Reinberg is figuring on being right in it again this summer with a big supply of the Mrs. Field rose.

Ernest A. Asmus, who in partnership with Emil Buettner formerly was in the retail business on Evanston avenue, the stand now occupied by L. Koropp, has for the last two years been with the State Nursery Co., at Helena, Mont., but has now entered the government Forest Service, and will have charge of the new Muskrat Nursery on the Helena Forest Reserve.

Decatur, has leased the greenhouses of Mrs. A. M. Schafer on Balmoral avenue for a term of five years, beginning June 1.

Monday morning all the wholesalers were in receipt of a neatly-printed card, as follows:

Mr. Robert Rahaley, Manager of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, and Miss Helen Murphy
have just been married and intend to spend their honeymoon in Chicago.
They will, of course, visit all of the wholesale flower shops. Kindly treat them well and advise them a little, as they are both very shy.
Very truly yours,
Some of the Detroit Florists.

At last accounts the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Rahaley was being awaited with interest.

Carl N. Thomas went to West Springfield, Pa., April 24, to spend the summer on the farm.

John Mangel had a half dozen Golden Glow chrysanthemums in his window April 26. They were the first large mums of the year received by the A. L. Randall Co.

The many friends of C. Frauenfelder will regret to learn of Mrs. Frauenfelder's illness.

L. Coatsworth had no sooner returned from Mudlavia, Ind., freed from his rheumatism, than he was taken ill with appendicitis. The physicians feel that an operation will be necessary, but fear to perform it in his present weakened condition.

Ed Armstrong, who has been with Weiland & Risch for some time, has acquired the Palace Floral Co., at 189 North Clark street, from Margaret Nichols. This is one of the oldest flower stores in Chicago, having been in existence twenty-three years and having graduated several of the now well known retailers.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has practically completed its big new range at Plant B, and the soil is now being put in the benches. At Plant A posts are just being set for the range to go up there. At Plant B a new chimney 125 feet high is up about seventy-five feet. This will be a landmark when completed. It is made of tile reinforced with iron and concrete.

E. B. Washburn has been proposed for membership at the Chicago Athletic Club.

Clifford Pruner, of E. H. Hunt's, expected to go on the road this week, but is detained by an ulcer on his right eye.

The condition of Mrs. O. P. Bassett, who is ill at the Mary Thompson hospital, is slightly improved.

C. M. Dickinson is building a new residence at Park Ridge.

C. W. McKellar reports that Cattleya Mossiæ is coming into crop and that the scarcity of orchids will be relieved in a few days.

George Wittbold was 77 years of age April 25.

Ami Allison Lindley Randall is spending the week on his farm in Michigan.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has for some days been receiving well grown candidum lilies. They have sold rather slowly at $3 per dozen stalks, because Harrisii and callas were so plentiful.

George Reinberg is pushing the rebuilding of several of his oldest houses.

Phil Schupp says that the present crop of Beauties is the best ever cut at the J. A. Budlong establishment.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, May 6. The following have handed in applications for membership: A. A. La Vaque, of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co.; Otto Goerisch, of the A. L. Randall Co.; W. J. Smith and T. M. Vogel, also P. W. Peterson, Joliet, Ill. Secretary Winterson has sent each member a copy of the proposed new constitution and by-laws.

F. Schramm, at Park Ridge, has a light pink sport from Lawson that he has submitted to the American Carnation Society for registration under the name, Kathleen B. W.

Jacob M. Prost was the successful contestant in the civil service examination for the recently established position of city forester. His salary will be $2,000 per year. He formerly was an assistant to Jens Jensen in the west parks. The examination was conducted by Mr. Jensen, J. F. Foster of the south parks, and Henry C. Cowles, of the University of Chicago.

The many friends of E. A. Kanst will regret to hear that Mrs. Kanst has been seriously ill, but will be glad to know she is now gaining strength.

Visitors this week were: R. P. Atwell, Fort Dodge, Ia.; Fred Rowe, Bloomington, Ill.; Wm. Feniger, Toledo.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Trade since Easter has been pretty good; quite a few receptions and other affairs, which, with a steady run of funeral work, kept everyone good-natured to date. The retailers now have easy sailing, for there is more than enough stock in almost every line. Especially is this true of roses and Harrisii, the latter bringing prices that are nothing to brag about. Carnations are more plentiful, but the quality is fine and not many remain over. Violets are nearly at an end for this season. The only flowers still holding their own are sweet peas.

Various Notes.

William Helwig is now nicely domiciled in his new quarters on Mitchell street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

Wm. Manke, of North Milwaukee, who was confined to the house with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, and not grippe, as previously reported, is again able to perform some of his duties at the greenhouses.

Nic Zweifel, at North Milwaukee, now has a team of young horses to make the trip of fourteen miles to the wholesale houses and back.

At the recent city election Mrs. C. B. Whitnall, wife of C. B. Whitnall, retired florist and honorary member of the local florists' club, was elected a member of the school board. She also is chairman of the Outdoor Art Association.

The park board has just received a consignment of 1,200 hardy roses from Holland, to be used in beautifying Lake park.

The committee of the Outdoor Art Association will begin work this week on the river front projects. Much credit is due them for the way they proposed and carried out the plans for beautifying the river front last year. They intend to continue the good work by urging the planting of hardy vines, trees and shrubbery.

It has been customary in this vicinity to begin planting carnations into the field the last week in April, but this year nobody has dared to think of it up to this date, April 26, for we have been having rain one day and sunshine the next for the past week, and as some of the nights have been mighty chilly, operations probably will not commence till May 3.

Every member is requested to attend the regular club meeting May 6, as important business is to be transacted.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Trade since Easter has been quiet, especially in the cut flower line. There has been some demand for flowers for funeral work, but not enough to consume the increased cut in roses, which are coming in by the carload.

The street fakers have been busy the entire week, and quantities of stock were moved by them which would otherwise have been an absolute loss. Violets took a tumble along with other things, and piled up early in the week. About the only articles that sold were sweet peas, valley and carnations.

Various Notes.

The wind storm that visited this vicinity on Wednesday, April 21, did considerable damage to many greenhouse plants. Those suffering the heaviest loss were E. G. Wilson, Isaac Kennedy and John Hudson, whose places were almost wrecked. The storm traveled in the form of a hurricane, and any kind of structure in its path had to suffer. Almost every florist in or about Cleveland was busy putting in glass after the storm, which did not last over ten minutes.

Dear Sirs:--Now that the sweet pea season is closed for us, I wish to express my thanks to your firm, its management and employees, for the very satisfactory results you have attained for us.

I expect to plant three large houses next season, and will try to arrange a longer season by planting at different times, running from Oct. 15 to Easter.

I shall plant largely of pink and white, also white, and would like to know if you think it advisable to plant lavender; if you have a market for a small amount I will grow them.

I have recently had a request from your neighbor for regular shipments but I shall ship to you exclusively, as I do not consider it justice to you to give them to competing firms, at least without your consent.

I hope to be able to come to Chicago this summer and get acquainted with you people and get in touch with your requirements so I can take better care of you in the future. Yours very truly, escape during the wind storm. A large brick chimney was blown down and came crashing through the roof close to where they both stood, looking at the storm.

It is with regret that we report the illness of Frank Freidley, of the Gasser Co., who has been confined to bed for three weeks.

A visit to John Kirchner's place found everything in shipshape. The stock of bedding plants here looks better than ever for Decoration day trade.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in a fine cut of Kaiserin and Richmond, also some good sweet peas and valley.

Smith & Fetters had some beautiful floral pieces for the McBride funeral, among which was a blanket of pansies and valley; also a casket cross of violets with a cluster of valley in the center.

B.

In the storm April 21 Carl Wilson, 14 years old, son of Ella Grant Wilson, narrowly escaped being killed when he was buried under the debris. The chimney on the heating plant, fifty feet high, fell and the falling bricks shattered all the glass in the greenhouses and tore down the boiler shed in the rear. Carl, who was in the boiler shed, was saved by the iron steam pipes overhead that stopped the fall of the wreckage. He was dug out by firemen. Besides the loss on the buildings, all the plants were destroyed. There was no insurance on the property.

The Rocky River Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated, with $50,000 capital stock, by Charles C. Christensen and others.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The trade in cut flowers is apparently at a rather low ebb. Prices are away down and even then it is impossible to clean out arrivals, many going into the ice-chest and later the rubbish barrels. There is a fair call for roses, but values are cut in two as compared with a fortnight ago. Carnations are selling at almost any price; $2 per hundred is a high figure, some going at one-fourth that price. Owing to absence of hot weather, the quality and color remain remarkably good for the last of April. Few single violets are seen. The present week will end them. Doubles will arrive in small lots for two weeks longer. Sweet peas sell as well as anything in the market, many preferring them to roses and carnations. Prices on these have a wide margin.

Valley is rather scarce. Mignonette is getting poor. Snapdragons and gladioli are both selling poorly. Narcissi and tulips are less abundant and, considering the prevailing conditions, sell fairly well.

In cattleyas the scarcity prevalent of late is being relieved by the arrival of Mossiæ. Gardenias are still good sellers, as are Spanish iris. The latter are made a good deal of at the better class stores for window decorations. Adiantum and asparagus are abundant, but hardy ferns continue scarce and higher in price.

Green Goes to Providence.

Fred C. Green, superintendent for a number of years of the noted estate of Senator N. W. Aldrich, at Warwick, R. I., some notes of which appeared in the last issue of the Review, leaves Warwick early in May to assume the superintendency of the Providence, R. I., city park system. Mr. Green has been with Senator Aldrich since he commenced developing his princely estate and has had charge of all the extensive planting, construction and other operations there. His many friends in Boston and vicinity wish him every success in his new field of labor, which he is well qualified to fill, and have no doubt but that he will eventually put Providence's park system well in the front ranks. James Hamilton, indoor foreman for Mr. Green, succeeds him in charge of the horticultural department at Warwick.

Club Jottings.

In the discussion on L. J. Reuter's rose paper, printed in last week's Review, the lecturer said Chatenay is the only rose he grows on its own roots. Some My Maryland died off at graft, but if run warmer did not die. He now prefers own-root to grafted stock of that variety. He has a house planted with My Maryland for July flowering and anticipates that it will prove a great summer rose. It is certainly a great keeper and holds its color well in hot weather.

W. H. Elliott said he averaged his roses' money-bringing qualities differently from Mr. Reuter, going on the basis of what each would give per hundred foot run of bench. With one lot of Killarney, grafted stock planted in May and which he started to cut from early in August, he had 65,000 flowers from 6,000 plants in thirty-two days. With him Richmond, Bride and Bridesmaid are about half the value of Killarney. Safrano grown in a small way proves extremely profitable. Richmond's faults are a weak stem, smaller flowers and the fact that it loses color quickly, although less speedily than Beauty. It is a great pity that Rhea Reid fades as it does, for it is in many respects a grand rose. He hopes E. G. Hill Co. will be able to give some further valuable additions in the near future, as a new American race of forcing roses seems to be coming. He will try some My Maryland for summer, but will not yet pull out any Killarney to make room for it. Bridesmaid now seems to be gradually going out of style, but no other rose has ever netted the growers the money that this variety has done.

Speaking of home-grown Manetti stocks, he said he once raised 4,000 as a trial, froze and rested them, but they did not prove nearly so good as imported stock. He criticised the American Rose Society for not allowing other roses to be pinched in the same way as Killarney. It is the way to get big exhibition blooms on long, strong stems.

Eber Holmes said it is possible from a single rose bud to raise 500 plants in one season, and if that can be done, 250,000 in ten years is quite feasible. With him Killarney is the most profitable sort. Bridesmaid pays better than Bride.

P. Welch said Killarney is the best seller, Richmond coming second. He thinks it debatable if White Killarney will displace Bride. Roses are with his firm still ahead of carnations in money turned over, but carnations are now pressing them rather closely.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 18, when Peter Bisset, of Washington, D. C., will give a stereopticon lecture on "The Water Garden," promises to draw out a large attendance. Many ladies will probably be included in the audience.

WASHINGTON.

Club Dinner.

Members of the Washington Florists' Club, their wives, sweethearts and friends, made merry at the annual banquet, held at Congress Hall hotel on the evening of April 20.

You could easily tell it was a florists' banquet. Evidences of their decorative art were on every side and the speeches were flowery at times, although Toastmaster William F. Gude opened festivities by saying it wasn't to be a talkfest particularly. F. H. Kramer, recently reelected president of the club, side-stepped when it came to presiding, and boldly announced at the beginning that Mr. Gude would act for the rest of the evening. Mr. Gude looked surprised a bit, but, evidently remembering that Mr. Kramer was appearing at the annual banquet for the first time as a benedict (he married just about a month ago), Mr. Gude got on the job, just as though he were presiding at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

If there was one surprised man at the banquet it was George Shaffer, who recently retired as secretary of the club. Mr. Gude first said a lot of nice things about Mr. Shaffer's energy, ability, and determination to do all the work, which caused the former secretary to look a little abashed. Just then the music started up. Mr. Gude held up a warning hand and, reaching under the table, began to unwrap something. A moment later he had placed in the hands of the astonished Mr. Shaffer a handsome silver tray. The retiring secretary expressed his surprised thanks, amusing the crowd considerably when he said he "wished it had been done a little more privately."

Between the speeches, in order that the orators might corral a good supply of breath and think of something different to say, the Greater Washington Quartet was heard in several popular selections. Pistoria's band kept playing the balance of the time, making everybody feel happy.

Peter Bisset, former president of the club; I. Rosnosky, of Michell's, and Secretary O. A. C. Oehmler were among the speakers, each having some word of congratulation on the growth of the club and the cleverness of the banquet arrangements. Several Holland salesmen also were present and were given a chance to say something pleasant.

CORRY, PA.—The new greenhouse for A. E. & B. C. Pettit, on East Main street, has been completed and is well stocked with a general line of plants. It is a cypress house, of John C. Moninger construction. The Pettits had a fine Easter trade, in spite of an all-day snow storm on Saturday.

ALVIN, TEX.

Cook & Cook say that jasmines this year will be short for Decoration day, owing to the late spring.

Mrs. P. E. Nelson also reports that cape jasmine buds will be late this season—the main crop too late for Decoration day. "Last year," she says, "the crop was too early, so we have two years of failure in succession."

"We had a late freeze this year," Mrs. Nelson continues, "and all tender outdoor plants were frozen. Early in the season we had nothing to ship but violets — the Governor Herrick variety, which does finely in our section. Later, however, sweet peas came along nicely, as well as tuberoses and Shasta daisies. The strawberry crop is fine this year; there is no overproduction and prices are good. Figs are also promising. Satsuma orange trees are laden with blooms and a fair crop of fruit is assured."

W. A. Dennis feels greater confidence than some of the other shippers of jasmine buds. April 25 he gave it as his opinion that the greater part of the crop will be just right for Memorial day, when it is most wanted. Last year it was much too early.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

About as disagreeable a week as the year has furnished closed on Sunday morning, April 25, with a frost, after several days of rain and cloud. There has been undue lingering in the lap of winter, and while the weather has been especially manufactured for the nurserymen, the seedsmen and the auctioneers, the needs of the cut flower growers and wholesalers have been sadly neglected. Consequently, gloom and stagnation in cut-flowerdom, with low prices and light demand. The cleaning-up process on Saturday was accomplished only at starvation prices, and roses and carnations were forced to join the violet procession and accept whatever the highest bidder saw fit to offer. It is unwise and unnecessary to specify. Every variety of cut flower sank to its summer level.

Decoration day preparations are already under way, and a visit to the plant growers last week found evidence of great expectations for the final floral demonstration of the spring season. A call upon the seedsmen finds the night and day method of distribution still a necessity, and the demand exceeds all other years in this and the nursery departments of horticulture, at any rate within a radius of twenty-five miles of New York city.

Various Notes.

The wholesale cut flower branch of the trade is now wisely contemplating a Sunday closing movement. In fact, on Saturday night the committee in charge of the departure had secured the signature of nearly every wholesaler, and those who had signed seemed more than pleased with the innovation. There is no good reason why the wholesale cut flower merchant should open his doors at all on Sunday, and most of the retailers would welcome a similar decision. May 1 will doubtless find the scheme almost universally adopted.

May 10 the New York Florists' Club will hold its spring meeting.

Astoria has decided to enter the S. A. F. convention contest, and will give a good account of itself.

W. H. Kuebler, the wholesale florist in Brooklyn, has doubled the capacity of his store and added a florists' supply department to his enterprise, which his brother will manage. All the Brooklyn wholesalers have cause for encouragement in the rapid growth of their business during the last year. There has been constant progression yearly.

Jay Hammer, of the Bonnet & Blake store, is claimed to be a hero by the firm since Monday, April 19, when he rescued a child at a fire in Brooklyn and carried it down a ladder to safety.

A. L. Young opens this week, Saturday, May 1, the Manhattan flower market at 46 West Twenty-eighth street. Mr. Young will fix up the big store with many conveniences for growers, and expects to let the entire space to cut flowers and plantsmen. He has leased his own store at 54 West Twenty-eighth street until 1914.

The funeral services of the late John Scott, of Flatbush, Friday, April 23, were attended by the largest gathering of the trade ever seen in this vicinity. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, many members of the New York Florists' Club from adjacent towns and cities and almost every active member of the Plant Growers' Association paid this last token of sorrow and respect to his memory. The floral offerings filled many carriages. The walls were banked to the ceiling with them, and a blanket of valley and Richmonds from the Plant Growers' Association was especially beautiful. The New York Florists' Club, of which he was an honored ex-president and loyal member, and dozens of his friends in the wholesale and retail trade, sent these evidences of sympathy and loving remembrance. Rev. Scott, his brother, took part in the solemn services and at the grave. He was buried with Masonic honors. Over fifty carriages accompanied the remains to the cemetery. His friends and associates have been greatly shocked by this sad event. No more popular man, with a larger circle of friends, has been called away in this generation. He has toiled faithfully for nearly twenty years, had built up his business on a sure foundation and was just beginning to enjoy the fruit of his labors when so suddenly taken. The heartfelt sympathy of all goes out especially to the bereaved widow and her children. At the annual dinner of the club, Mr. Scott was one of its happiest participants, and at the club's last monthly meeting never seemed in better health and spirits. He will be sadly missed by all who knew him.

David Clarke's Sons had several large church and home wedding decorations last week.

Mr. Warendorff, manager at the Ansonia flower store on Broadway, has returned healthful from a month's holiday in Bermuda, and with a distinct English accent.

Harry Crawbuck, of Brooklyn, has added more nursery land to his place at Summit, N. J., and will soon be cutting dogwood, lilac and apple branches for the decorations in the city of churches.

Interesting visits last week to Louis Schmutz, Alfred Zeller, A. Demeusy, H. Hession, Dailledouze Bros., and others, in Flatbush, found in the big plants of the first two extensive preparations for flowering plants for Decoration day, while at David Mellis' the new houses built since last year and the large outdoor plantings indicate a rapidly growing cemetery trade locally and a goodly daily shipment of cut flowers to the Greater New York Florists' Association on Livingston street, of which society he is the president. At the other establishments carnations hold almost absolute sway. Mr. Demeusy has built two large houses for them, and grows all the popular varieties. Hession's output, sold by Ford Bros., always is in request by those who realize his skill as a grower. Dailledouze Bros. have fifty-eight varieties of seedlings under trial, which beats the Heinz record of fifty-seven, but the White House is the queen of them all.

At a meeting of the Retail Florists' Protective Association, April 21, resolutions were adopted on the death of the late John Scott, and an engrossed copy forwarded to the family with the signatures of President Charles A. Dards and Secretary Herman Warendorff. A committee consisting of M. A. Bowe, Herman Warendorff, Gottlieb Myer and J. P. Klausner is working to secure city legislation making it necessary to hold a license to peddle flowers on the streets.

Wertheimer Bros. last week made a shipment of ribbons to a leading florist at Belfast, Ireland. Florists all over the world have ordered Wertheimer's ribbons.

Wm. Hagemann & Co. have been incorporated, with $50,000 capital stock, by V. P. Donihoe, R. S. Batson and C. S. Clark.

NEW ORLEANS.

A recent issue of a local newspaper contains a picture of a large vase of Beauty roses, and standing by their side is a lady who, though presumably of good height, looks diminutive in contrast with the tall flowers, and is trying, gracefully but in vain, to reach some of the topmost blooms. Under the picture are the words: "This picture gives refutation to the general impression that 9-foot stem American Beauty roses cannot be grown in New Orleans. The roses shown were grown by the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., Ltd., of which H. Papworth is president."

RICHMOND, IND.—William Meine, for years a traveling salesman for the Chas. Knopf Floral Co. and now a member of the firm of Meine & Noss, was married in Chicago to Miss Anna Michelsen, of that city, April 6. As Mr. Meine is well known among the florists throughout the country, the congratulations will doubtless be numerous and sincere.

MINNEAPOLIS.

For the third time this year the flower store owned by Miss H. B. Whitted, 34 South Fifth street, was broken into by burglars and money and valuables taken. Entrance was gained by prying open one of the rear windows and breaking in a door. The cash register was smashed, but it yielded only $5, for experience had taught the proprietress not to leave much cash in the drawer.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

It is a buyer's market, with values declining in all staple varieties of flowers, barring orchids and the few varieties that are gracefully bowing adieu for the season. Curiously enough, it sometimes happens that these retiring favorites are immensely popular as the curtain is rung down.

One naturally takes the hopeful side first, so we will talk about the orchids. Cattleya Schrœderiana has been joined by Cattleya Mossiæ. Together they hardly make enough to satisfy the light demand and prices rule firm at $9 a dozen. Sweet peas have been in rather short supply, quality considered. The buyers want them for the rearguard of the April weddings and find it hard to get enough good ones to make their bouquets. Valley has also been in demand for these weddings, the stock coming into the market realizing fair prices. Gardenias have sold moderately well, the fancy stock being scarce. Ordinary grades will not fill their place.

Both Easter lilies and callas drag, the demand being light. Violets are nearly over. There are a few fair doubles in town, with prospects of their disappearing after a hot day or two. Carnations are abundant. Prices rule low, $3 being rarely obtained except for extra fine stock. Beauties have become plentiful. The quality is excellent, but prices have fallen to the broad level. I mean by this that all the buyers who can use Beauties at any price can use them now, the only drawback being that the medium lengths are not plentiful. Killarney is selling better than Bridesmaid, while in many quarters Kaiserin is preferred to Bride. Richmond is in fair demand. Tulips and daffodils are nearly over. New crop dagger ferns have made their appearance.

Harmony and Contrast.

There was an important point to be decided. A point of many sides, various proposals throwing different lights on an intricate problem. Under these circumstances there is nothing like a walk, a good brisk walk, solitary of course. The park suggests itself as just the place to decide the problem. When well into the park, with the glorious spring air blowing away the cobwebs, trees bursting into leaf, the grass growing greener, the thought of flowers came quite naturally. The dandelions and violets, beautiful in their simplicity, were everywhere. The daffodils and tulips, the daisies and pansies, were in full bloom, a feast of color. To the east of Horticultural hall, on the river side, the circular beds were ablaze with color. Tulips in a single variety and pansies and tulips and daisies were the combinations used—in some cases the colors harmonized, in others they were contrasted.

The most striking effects were formed with the double pink and white variety, Murillo, and Bellis perennis; a single yellow variety that looked like Chrysolora, bedded in purple pansies, and a wonderful patchwork bed of all varieties of single tulips amid varicolored pansies. There was also a solid bed of terra cotta tulips resembling the Prince of Austria, which was more than usually effective.

The parterre on the west, perhaps I should say the sunken garden, was dressed in gayest spring garb. The festoons on the sloping sides were largely in yellow, while the formal straight lines and the graceful curves in the center were mainly white, with other colors by way of variety. It was noticeable in this arrangement that the other colors were not nearly so effective. The pinks and reds, a little later perhaps, were least in the general view. I doubt whether yellow and white set amid plenty of green can be improved upon in a long stretch. For yellow the double Narcissus Von Sion, and for white the single L'Immaculee, appeared to predominate.

The planting is rather far apart, the impression made being that finer bulbs had been given more space. The general effect was excellent.

The Sunny South.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., has just returned from the sunny south, where he seems to have been most kindly received by his many friends, judging from the pleasure with which he spoke of his trip. Mr. Berkowitz called Phil's attention to a few advances to be seen in the handsome show-cases. A hammered brass cornucopia made in several sizes for holding flowers in an automobile (it is attached to the side with a hook) was a striking novelty. Great improvement was shown in the Memorial day designs, the flowers used this year on all the wreaths being wonderfully perfect. They were so artistically attached to the wreaths as to appear natural, the colors being wonderfully delicate. Mr. Berkowitz said that Memorial day business so far this season is ahead of expectations.

CANNA ROOTS ROTTING.

I should like information on the care of cannas. I can winter them through in fine condition. Last year I separated clumps one and two eyes to the piece, placed them in a plant bench with good garden soil, but lost three-fourths the number from decay. This year I left the clumps intact, but the result is the same.

A. J. K.

You are fortunate in being able to carry your cannas safely through the winter. Many more growers lose the stock through decay in the winter than by decay after starting in spring. Presuming that you cut your clumps up to one or two eyes each, with a little root attached to each, you should lay them on a bench in a house with a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night. If there are hot water or steam pipes below the bench to afford some bottom heat, the cannas will start to root and grow faster. Our plan is to scatter a layer of sphagnum moss over the bench and lay the divided portions on this, scattering a little more moss over them. A light sprinkling is given and water is afforded rather sparingly until growth starts, when a little more is given. If you have a moist atmosphere and warm house, your cannas should be fit to pot off within three weeks.

When dividing your clumps, reject all showing signs of decay, or cut clean. Covering with soil is a mistake; it will cause most of the eyes to rot, especially if you soak it with water after covering, and the temperature is rather low. Water only lightly until growth starts, and use moss, or moss and sand, and you should lose only a small percentage of your cannas.

C. W

USE FOR POISON IVY.

In commenting upon the poison ivy, W. J. Bean remarks in the "Kew Bulletin" that among the recent correspondents of Kew was a lady who sent the true Rhus Toxicodendron with the remark that she had used the leaves for dinner-table decoration. As no evil consequences were recorded, she was evidently one of the persons who are immune from the effects of its poison. This correspondent also drew attention to an interesting property of the juice of this plant, namely, its indelibility when applied to linen and similar fabrics. She found that wherever the liquid touched the white tablecloth it produced a perfectly ineradicable stain, and remarks that "it is really better for marking purposes than many so-called indelible marking inks." This property has long been known to botanists. Kalm noticed it during his travels in North America about the middle of the eighteenth century. And in Woodville's Medical Botany (1832) it is stated that "this juice, applied to linen, forms one of the most perfect kinds of indelible ink; it does not fade from age, washing, or exposure to common chemical agents . . . but continues to grow darker as long as the linen lasts." It may be mentioned that the juice (which immediately exudes from a broken or cut surface of the wood or leaf-stalks) is at first milky and yellowish, but soon becomes black.

HAMILTON, CAN.—Thomas Hill, an elderly man employed by Mrs. Walker, King street west, was found dead in his wagon late Saturday afternoon, April 10. He was delivering, and when in the vicinity of Victoria avenue, on King street east, pedestrians noticed that the man was ill, and went to his assistance. Before a doctor could be brought, Mr. Hill was dead.

YOUNGSTOWN, O. — April 22 C. Sigle had a narrow escape from serious injury when the flower wagon in which he was riding turned turtle and started to roll down a 60-foot embankment. The wagon was almost completely demolished. Mr. Sigle sustained a few scratches. The wagon was loaded with nearly 200 potted plants, which were partially ruined and were later distributed free to the bystanders.

FORCING TOMATOES.

be ruined. My advice was to water twice a day and clean off all affected fruit. The disease disappeared almost immediately.

Pollination.

When the plants begin to bloom they must be hand pollinated daily. There are several methods of doing this, but there is no better or easier way than to take a stick about sixteen inches long, tie a rag around one end of it to keep it from bruising the stalk, and walk up and down the rows every day, tapping the stalk sharply close to the blooms. This shakes the pollen loose from the stamen and it floats in the air and alights on the pistils. It is an easy task when performed regularly, and it takes only a few moments to go over a whole house. The hottest, driest time of the day, when the pollen is ripe and dry, is the time to do it. If properly done, no blooms will be found falling off. If any fall, it is because they were not properly shaken and fertilized.

It is one thing to get blooms and another thing to get fruit; to get both requires a good grower.

Right Use of Fertilizers.

If the plants do not bloom right, either not enough clusters or not enough blooms on a cluster, it may be due to lack of food in the soil. In that case a light sprinkling of bone meal or phosphate rock will help them to bloom better, if applied in time.

A study of fertilizers is important in tomato growing. Nitrogen goes principally to make foliage, so only a little is necessary for tomatoes. Phosphoric acid to make blooms, and potash for fruit and stalks, are both required and in about equal quantity. Ground phosphate rock and muriate of potash are better than manures for tomatoes, unless the manure is well rotted.

Too much nitrogen or water, or too high a temperature, may cause serious troubles with the tomato growers. A temperature of 60 degrees or a trifle above at night and 75 degrees on bright days is high enough. Fresh air is necessary.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Under the able management of Mr. Stover, the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co. has developed so rapidly during the one year of its existence that it already ranks as one of the largest concerns of its kind in the state. There are in all fifty greenhouses, thirty-eight of which are devoted to the culture of vegetables and twelve to flowers. There are 300,000 feet of glass in all, 50,000 of which are in the flower houses. Of the twelve flower houses, three are devoted to carnations, and the firm is now preparing to erect more houses for this line of stock. The new carnation houses will require about 15,000 feet of glass.

W. L. Cukerski, former superintendent of city parks, will soon begin the erection of four greenhouses and a conservatory at his home, Valley avenue and West Fulton street. The conservatory will be 50x50 and ornamental in style, and the greenhouses will be of the latest type. Mr. Cukerski is also negotiating for a farm of forty to eighty acres outside of the city for a nursery, and has placed orders with growers in Holland and France for 50,000 shrubs for fall delivery, to use as nursery stock. Until he gets his own nursery going, he will procure his stock from the big eastern nurseries. He has several large commissions for spring work, including residence properties in Traverse City and a cemetery at Cadillac.

The present location of the greenhouses in John Ball park has been chosen by the board of park and cemetery commissioners as the site for a new pavilion. It is not stated what disposition will be made of the greenhouses.

Various Notes.

The resignation of Joseph D. Fitts, superintendent of parks of this city, is in the hands of the park commissioners. Fred C. Greene, head gardener for Senator Nelson W. Aldrich at his Warwick estate, is to become head gardener of the Providence park system, an office created by an ordinance of the city council, passed a short time ago. The park commissioners say that they have not yet decided when these changes will go into effect. Mr. Fitts, it is understood, will engage in business for himself.

Oscar Schultz, of Newport, has just received from Europe a large importation of shrubs.

Charles Coon, superintendent of Wilcox park, Westerly, has been confined to his home by illness for several days.

John D. Dunn, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, has been elected clerk of the house committee on agriculture and mechanic arts.

John S. Kelly has returned from a several months' trip to Jacksonville, Fla., and is now with John Wood.

John A. Macrea has been serving as a petit juror in the superior court.

Frank N. Howe, formerly with the Burns nursery, at Hartford, Conn., has accepted a position in charge of nursery and landscape work for George Johnson & Son.

Eugene Appleton was a member of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the sixteenth anniversary of Newman Council, Knights of Columbus.

George Kelly is busy on outdoor work, having many private estates on the east side under his care.

Elisha W. Champlin has resumed his labors at the W. B. Weeden estate at Wakefield as caretaker and gardener, a MEADVILLE, PA.—Geo. W. Haas & Son expect to enlarge their houses this summer. Easter trade, they say, was good, though injured somewhat by a snow storm on Friday and Saturday. Easter lilies and azaleas took the lead in plants, and carnations and daffodils in cut flowers, but hyacinths, primroses and geraniums also sold well.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE seedsmen's committee may now exert its influence to have the weather bureau do the right thing.

THE pea growers say it is time to plant, but the farmer says the frost is not out of the ground up Wisconsin way yet.

LOUISVILLE reports onion seed for sets all planted, the yellow coming up well, the white coming slowly and in many cases not sprouting at all.

THERE is little wonder that the bean grower finds it hard to get the farmer interested in a bean contract. It is pretty cold for beans when oats freeze off.

THE optimistic farmer says: "There is a time to sow and a time to reap, and there is always sufficient time betwixt the two to make the crop." Let us hope so.

THIS present month has hardly been what an average April ought to be, looked at from any standpoint of the seedsman. It is possible, though, that offhand reports may class it as the best April in years.

ADOLPH KRUHM, who has had a wide experience in the seed trade, west and east, has recently entered the employ of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., to take charge of the catalogues and advertising.

TWO weeks ago the REVIEW reported that the planting of onion set seed at Chicago was discontinued owing to wet weather and that only a small part of the acreage had been sown. Last week we reported conditions still unfavorable, with no chance to add anything to the plantings. The present week came in with conditions much improved and each day of it has added many acres to the planted area. If the week holds good to its end a good proportion of the Chicago acreage will have been seeded. If the seed can all be sown within the next ten days a good crop may be expected. Seed sown after that may or may not make a good crop, with the chances in favor of its not doing so.

THE market gardeners of the central west have not been so far behind with their spring work for many years. Things at present do not look bright for them. The early crops, such as radish, spinach and green onions, which they usually depend on to bring in money soon after the middle of May, are not in evidence at all. The plantings that were made for these crops, where there was any chance at all to get them in, have had no weather to bring them along. Radish has been drowned out or frozen off. Spinach, where it shows above ground, is at a standstill. Lettuce that has been transplanted to outdoor beds from the frames is not doing a thing. Onion sets planted for green onions show above ground, but are weeks behind. It will be well into June before the average gardener will get any money returns from outdoor crops, and this is bound to have its effect on the seedsman's month of May.

REPORTS from California are to the effect that seed crops are doing as well as could be expected with moisture conditions what they were early in the season.

J. BOLGIANO & SON, Baltimore, Md., do an enormous business in tomato seeds and tomato plants with the canning trade in Maryland, their state putting up more than half the entire tomato pack of the United States.

NOT within the memory of the oldest operator on "the busiest street in the world" have prices of many vegetables been as high on South Water street as within the last fortnight. It helps the seedsmen who cater to the market gardeners.

PEAS IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Contracts have been made for over 3,000 acres of peas for seed to be grown in South Dakota this season.

Small acreages of peas have been grown in the state before, but nothing at all large. This year's contracts are for O. S. Jones & Co., of Madison, S. D., who have covered both ends of the deal, with the trade and with the farmers. The contracts are in Lake and Minnehaha counties and planting will be pushed in a few days, just as quickly as the backward spring breaks up enough to make rapid work possible. The varieties will be largely Alaska, Eclipse and Horsford Market, with lesser quantities of some of the well known home and market garden kinds.

D. W. Hill says: "This contract requires more than $30,000 worth of seed. This is furnished by the eastern company for which Jones & Co. are growing this crop, and for this particular planting three bushels of seed per acre will be used, amounting to over 9,000 bushels of seed, every pound of which must be shipped to Madison and distributed to the growers. After harvest, the seed is deducted and the farmer gets $1 per bushel for the balance of the crop.

"While it is true this first crop is an experiment, there is every reason to believe it will prove immensely successful. The company placing the contract did so only after it had investigated every available locality in the United States, and the fact that it backed up its belief in this region with over 9,000 bushels, or $30,000 worth of seed the first year, is conclusive evidence that it feels sure of the result. There are comparatively few regions in the United States where conditions are just right for large successful pea crops. South Dakota gives splendid indications of being a good region for it. At the Brookings experiment station in 1908 an experimental crop of garden peas yielded at the rate of twenty-seven bushels per acre with late planting. This should be an indication of what could be expected of this 3,000-acre crop. It is admitted, too, that there are many parts of South Dakota as well or better adapted than Brookings county for growing peas and similar crops. In Wisconsin, long considered one of the best regions for this crop, the yield averaged in 1908 twenty-one bushels per acre, ranging from fifteen bushels to forty bushels. It is confidently expected that this year's planting in South Dakota will run considerably ahead of the 1908 Wisconsin average.

"The planting of this crop in South Dakota is of far-reaching importance to farmers and state residents. Success with the first crop means that this region will come to the front in long strides as a producer of many varieties of garden products and seeds. Next season this same company will, if success attends the crop this year, place contracts aggregating 10,000 acres of peas, and not only will peas be grown next season, but onions and sweet corn in equally large quantities."

SEED PARAGRAPH HELD UP.

Tariff Schedule Not Yet Settled.

In the consideration of the new tariff bill in the Senate, the paragraph providing for specific duty on seeds was one of those to early encounter obstacles. It had been hoped that with the practically unanimous endorsement of the seed trade, as shown in last week's REVIEW, the paragraph on seeds would go through unchallenged, but not only the seed paragraph, but also the ones covering peas, bulbs, orchids, palms and azaleas were held up. Only those paragraphs covering beans and nursery stock were passed without objection.

In order to sift down the bill, Senator Aldrich's draft was taken up in the Senate paragraph by paragraph, those paragraphs to which objection was made to be laid over for future consideration.

Paragraph 245, beans at 45 cents per bushel, was passed without objection.

Paragraph 258, peas, was objected to by Senator Dupont.

Paragraph 259, orchids, palms, dracænas, crotons, azaleas and bulbs, was objected to by Senator Dupont.

Paragraph 260, nursery stock, was passed without objection.

Paragraph 262, seeds, was objected to by Senator Nelson.

Paragraph 664, the free list of seeds, was passed without objection.

It is hoped that a schedule of specific duties on bulbs can be proposed as an amendment when Paragraph 259 comes up for reconsideration.

Every expression of opinion so far heard is in favor of the schedule of specific duties on seeds, as printed in the REVIEW April 15. Stephen F. Williard, president of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Conn., writes:

"We have noted the Senate tariff bill schedule of specific duty on seeds and, without opportunity to fully consider all the provisions, we are much pleased with it, and feel that if we can secure its adoption, even in this form, it will be a decided advantage to the entire seed trade."

ENFORCING IOWA SEED LAW.

It is reported that Commissioner H. R. Wright, charged with enforcing the pure seed law in Iowa, has set on foot prosecutions in various parts of the state as the result of his inspectors buying impure samples of grass seeds. Commissioner Wright declines to give information as to the steps taken, but says: "I do not wish to discuss in print matters of prosecution until the defendant has had his day in court and had opportunity to make whatever defense he can,'' which might be taken to indicate that only one case has been started.

Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, says: ''We understand from the State Commissioner that all of the parties who are to be tried for violating the seed law are country dealers. These parties have either purchased the seed from farmers and sold it without recleaning, or have purchased low grade seed from seedsmen in other states. This is evidently the case in two or three cases, where the seed sold is found to contain Canada thistle. So far, none of the regular seed dealers in this state have been charged with violating the seed law, and I believe that they are, as a rule, handling a better grade of seed than ever before.''

SEED IMPORTS.

In the month of February, 1909, the invoice value of seeds imported was $648,657, as against a valuation of $683,047 in the same month of 1908.

During the month of February, 1909, the value of seeds exported was $652,017, as against a valuation of $549,835 in February, 1908.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending April 17 were as follows:

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $26,182.

BARTELDES TO BUILD AGAIN.

By the purchase of the lot on which is at present situated its poultry department, at 1525 Fifteenth street, the Barteldes Seed Co., Denver, has removed the last obstacle to the erection of a five-story building which has been under contemplation by the company for several months. The cost will be $50,000.

The business has increased with great rapidity of late. Salesmen are maintained in the northwest, California, the southwest and throughout the state of Colorado. There are seventy-two employees in the warehouse at Sixteenth and Wynkoop, at the two old stores at 1521-25 Fifteenth street and at the grass seed store at 1518 Wazee street.

The present five-story warehouse, where all wholesale orders are filled, and where the office of Manager C. R. Root is maintained, cost $55,000. It was built five years ago and it was not dreamed at that time that it would be outgrown so soon. Where the new building will be erected is now located the city store, where retail customers are taken care of. This is a busy place at this time, although the company has been for several years trying to induce its local trade to come to the new building at Sixteenth and Wynkoop. Florists' and poultry supplies are now handled in the Fifteenth street stores, where the company began business seventeen years ago. One of these has been owned by the company for several years.

The extent of the Barteldes business, scarcely appreciated in Denver, is indicated by the fact that the company pub-

FORCING TOMATOES.

A Critical Stage.

Tomato growers who now have their spring crop in bloom, or about to commence blooming, are in the most critical stage of the game. Considerable skill may be exercised in getting the plants to bloom and set fruit abundantly.

If the plants are kept too hot and wet they are apt to grow too rank, at the expense of bloom. From the time the tomato plants are planted in the benches out of 4-inch pots, until they get to blooming well, they should be held slightly dry; not dry enough to wilt at any time, but sufficiently dry to encourage good root growth. All plants make greater root growth in dry than in wet soil, because if sufficient moisture is not found within a close radius of a plant it extends out much farther in search of the necessary supply. As compared with a near-by plant which has been freely watered, it will be found to have double the amount of roots, and although smaller above ground, it will quickly catch up to and pass the other plant when the proper amount of moisture is given it, having a larger root growth to furnish the food and moisture necessary to growth. Keeping plants somewhat on the dry side also encourages free blooming, and in forcing tomatoes all these facts should be remembered.

A Guide in Watering.

It is easy to tell by the foliage whether tomatoes have been properly watered or not. If they are kept about right, the foliage will have a healthy, dark green color and the leaves will be curved back somewhat. If too dry, they will look too dark in color and be curled back and under too much, and will have small stalks. If given a great deal of water, they will straighten out flat and be a lighter shade. If badly overwatered, they will be very light or yellowish in color, but will have larger leaves and stalks.

If the plants are properly cared for, they will commence to bloom soon after being planted in the benches and should set a cluster of blooms for every two leaves up the stalk. After they get about eighteen inches high and have good roots and are setting blooms well, they will require much more water.

The plants should not be wet above the soil, as sprinkling or wetting the foliage is more injurious than beneficial. It does not benefit the plants, but encourages weak growth and diseases. It also washes pollen from the blooms and may lodge in the clusters and rot the blooms off. It is far better to water close to the ground.

VERMICIDE Insecticide and Fungicide

Kills all worms, insects, etc., in the soil without injury to the roots. Cucumber growers particularly will find it invaluable. A gallon diluted makes several barrels of solution to sprinkle on the soil with watering can. Price, per gallon, $2.00. Cash must accompany all orders.

How to Prevent Dry Rot.

The older they get the more water they require. When of good size they require heavy waterings each day in warm weather, and sometimes twice a day if the soil is shallow. If not watered enough, the fruit will be affected with the blossom-end rot or dry rot. The lowest cluster is liable to get it anyhow, but this disease need not cause any alarm. It will disappear quickly if the plants are given plenty of water to keep the soil right all the time.

This is not a fungous disease, although fungus (mold) is often found growing on the rotten spots. It is a bacterial disease and it is well to pick and burn the affected fruit, but proper watering will keep the plants in condition to take care of themselves and ward off the disease. I have been called to see houses so badly affected that the owner was afraid his whole crop would

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

J. M. Prost will be Chicago's first city forester.

Daniel Wyss, a florist at New Philadelphia, O., will start a nursery near that city.

The death of L. B. Baxter, of Nichols, Mo., is recorded in the obituary column this week.

The commissioner of agriculture, Austin, Tex., has issued a bulletin, "Pecans and Other Nuts in Texas," of interest to nurserymen dealing with the southwest. Several Texas nurserymen contribute articles to the bulletin.

The Valdesian Nurseries, Bostic, N. C., say that early plantings are looking well, in spite of the weather being a little dry the last few weeks, and consider the prospects at this time as especially promising. There will be a good fruit crop.

An importation of orange trees entered at the customs house at Houston, Tex., was classified as nursery or greenhouse stock under paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897, and assessed for duty at twenty-five per cent ad valorem. The importer claimed them to be free of duty under paragraph 560, relating to fruit plants for cultivation. The evidence showed these plants to be imported for cultivation by fruit growers in Texas and the protest was sustained.

It seems fairly well determined that the new tariff bill will provide for duties as contained in the Dingley bill, with the two changes already noted: Stocks, cuttings or seedlings of Myrobolan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, three years old or less, being $1 per thousand, instead of 50 cents per thousand and fifteen per cent ad valorem, and evergreen seedlings being free. The Payne bill so provided, and the Aldrich draft of the bill in the Senate contained the same rates and phraseology as in Paragraph 260 passed by the House. In the consideration of the bill in the Senate, Paragraph 260 was passed without objection. While there is yet a possibility of reconsideration, the chances of any change are slight. When the bill goes to the conference committee, both houses having passed the same paragraph, duties on nursery stock will not be considered.

TWO GOOD ANDROMEDAS.

Andromeda Japonica, commonly and appropriately named the lily of the valley shrub, is one of the earliest flowering and most beautiful of our hardy evergreens. The plants are of comparatively slow growth, but once well established will make satisfactory headway. They grow well in prepared beds of loam, leafmold and sand, to which has been added some well rotted barnyard manure. Where peaty soils can conveniently be procured, they will be found to revel in it. A good, thick mulch of leaves is better left over them all the time, it being a great mistake to remove it in summer, even for appearance sake. This andromeda is a little more tender than A. floribunda, and for that reason should have a covering of evergreen branches in winter. The plants of this beautiful shrub were at their best in the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, April 24.

Andromeda floribunda is the best known and hardiest of the family. The large, white panicles do not droop as in the case of A. Japonica, but stand up rather rigidly, the dense, dark evergreen foliage showing them off to perfection. A. floribunda is a round, compact grower. The buds of several andromedas are formed in the fall. At present they are striking objects, being much in advance of any of the other evergreen flowering shrubs. Occasionally they are subject to attacks of red spider. If kept mulched at the roots and moist, there should be no trouble of this kind. Both the andromedas named make desirable Easter plants, a gentle forcing bringing them in season.

PLANTING TREES AND SHRUBS.

Many florists will, as usual, have calls made upon them to carry out planting of trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants. Every progressive florist should welcome and cater for this branch of trade, which will increase every year and is quite profitable. It need hardly be reiterated that it pays to thoroughly prepare the ground for all this class of stock. It will be more satisfactory for your customers to spend $5 for trees and $25 for preparation of the ground, rather than in the reverse ratio, which is far too often the case. Be careful to keep the roots from becoming dry. Always avoid windy days for tree planting, unless you have water convenient of access. A safe plan is to place the tree or shrub in position, partially fill in the hole and then fill up with water, allowing this to soak away and the soil to dry a trifle before completing the filling in and forming. Much of the success of planting depends upon thorough tamping and tramping of the soil. No tree or shrub loosely planted can thrive.

It is surprising how many still persist in placing barnyard manure in the bottoms of the holes. Such a practice is ruinous. Any manure should be well decayed and either thoroughly incorporated with the soil, or, better still, spread on the surface as a mulch. The later planting of deciduous stock is delayed, the more necessary it becomes to prune it back severely. Pruning in the case of extra large sized trees and shrubs is always advisable; otherwise many will be lost.

will be a hot competitor of the recent apple show held in Spokane. Suitable arrangements are being provided to make this a grand affair. The date in all probability will be December 6 to 11, anticipating that the Western Fruit Jobbers' Association will convene in Denver at the same time.

The officers elected are: President, C. R. Root, of Barteldes Seed Co.; secretary, C. L. Oliver; treasurer, W. F. R. Mills. There will be an executive committee of seven, to be chosen from the leading horticulturists of the state.

PROPAGATION OF CLEMATIS.

Please give me directions for the propagation of Clematis paniculata. I have seed saved from last fall. Can I sow them, or should I take cuttings from the vine now and root them? If so, what part of it should I take and what temperature should they be kept in?

J. F. C.

While it is possible to propagate this easily grown and popular clematis by layering and grafting, seed sowing is the simplest and best method. Seed should be sown as soon as gathered, or it loses much of its vitality. Sow your seeds in well drained flats of sandy loam and keep in a coldframe or cool greenhouse. The seed is slow of germination and seedlings will not appear before July. You are unlikely to get more than a fraction of the plants you would have had by fall sowing. Prick off the seedlings and carry over winter in a coldframe, transplanting to nursery rows in spring.

Another season sow your seed as soon as gathered. November is a suitable month. Stand the flats in a coldframe. It will do no harm if they are frozen solid. Seedlings will come up thickly in summer. Seed may also be sown broadcast or in rows in lath covered frames, but if you want merely a few dozens or hundreds of plants, sowing in flats will answer. Plants are usually three years old before being of sufficient size for selling.

PACIFIC COAST.

On another page of this issue there is a reproduction of a funeral wreath made by M. Armstrong, of Spokane.

This week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Samuel W. Marshall, of the firm of S. W. Marshall & Son, nurserymen in Fresno, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are having an abundance of beautiful weather, and flowers are plentiful and at the lowest prices they have been at any time this season. Carnations are a drug in the market and can be bought at any price the retailer chooses to offer. Roses are a shade better as far as demand goes, but they are sold at low figures. Daffodils and tulips are about over for the season, although a few long-stemmed late varieties of the latter are still seen. Easter lilies are cheap and are moving well; the same can be said of valley. Violets are practically out of the market. Sweet peas, which have been rather scarce up to this time, have now taken more attention than anything else in the outside flower line. Coreopsis and gaillardia, are helping to keep the show up and a few Bride gladioli have been sent in within the last few days.

Business, with the exception of funeral orders, has been quiet. In funeral work there has been a fair trade, both in San Francisco and the surrounding towns, and the low prices at which the retailers have been able to purchase flowers have left a good margin of profit.

Various Notes.

The premium list for the fall exhibition of the California State Floral Society and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society is at hand. Ninety-eight different prizes are offered for seasonable flowers and plants. H. Plath is manager. J. W. Bagge, D. MacRorie, J. R. Atkinson, Chas. Abraham and Wm. Kettlewell are on the committee of arrangements.

A peculiar suit, in which a couple of Greeks figured, held the attention of Judge Ellsworth in Department Six of the Alameda County Superior Court at Oakland, Cal., April 20. G. Symacopu-

If you are doubtful, just write me and I'll tell you the names of buyers; some of them perhaps you are personally acquainted with.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices, as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00
6,000 seeds	10.00
13,000 seeds	20.00
25,000 seeds	35.00
50,000 seeds	62.50
100,000 seeds	100.00

If you send me your order I know you will be pleased with the results.

los was compelled by his uncle, N. Symacopulos, to sign notes for $2,000 at the point of a pistol, according to the court's findings. The uncle brought suit on the notes and the nephew set up the defense that he had received nothing for the notes and had been compelled to sign them while his uncle held a revolver at his head. The younger man is a florist on Broadway and purchased the shop from his uncle when the latter concluded that music was his forte and went to Europe to study. His funds running short, he returned to America, so the nephew alleged, and attempted to get him to furnish him with funds. Being refused, he adopted the revolver and note method. Judge Ellsworth gave judgment to the defendant.

That the retail florists have plenty of confidence in San Francisco and her ability to regain her era of prosperity is shown by the fact that Podesta & Baldocchi have leased for a total of $90,000, for ten years, the store on the ground floor of the Phoenix building, adjoining the White House. This is considered one of the choicest locations in the city and will give this well-known firm a prominent place among the solid firms in the swell shopping district.

PASADENA FLOWER SHOW.

As my place is between Los Angeles and Pasadena, I visited the flower show held by the Pasadena Gardeners' Association and must admit that Pasadena's flower shows are more attractive than the Los Angeles shows. I noticed some plants which I had not seen since leaving Linden's place in Ghent, in 1802. There were three Encephalartos Lehmanni, with stems three feet in circumference and leaves six feet long, the whole plant glaucous. There was also an old plant of Encephalartos villosus. They were shown under the wrong name of E. pungens and E. regalis. There was also a handsome specimen of E. horridus, blue-green in color, a rare and formidable looking plant. They were shown by Mr. Heterich, gardener for H. E. Huntington, the railroad magnate, whose naturally beautiful place of several thousand acres he is now planting with the rarest tropical plants.

Mr. Heterich not only transplanted some thirty Cocos plumosa, C. flexuosa and C. coronata, from twenty-five to forty feet tall and weighing from five to eight tons apiece, from the Ramona Nursery to Mr. Huntington's place, without losing a single leaf, but he also transplanted numerous clumps of giant bamboo and phyllostachys, many exceedingly pretty and large plants of Cocos australis, and some large Jubæa spectabilis, besides some large Sabal umbraculifera and S. Palmetto, which are difficult palms to transplant. Having several acres under water, Mr. Heterich has collected all the best nymphæas, nelumbiums and smaller aquatics and grown the Victoria regia successfully for two years outside. Although only two years in Mr. Huntington's possession, this place, situated between South Pasadena and San Gabriel, is among the finest in California and offers a great field for the student of rare plants. The florist who visits Los Angeles should remember this.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

In giving a report on the business of last week, we are unable to say that there was any increase or decrease. One day the retailer would be kept busy, and the next day trade would be comparatively quiet. We can say, however, that we are able to handle a better trade than the present conditions present, as there is plenty of first-class stock to be obtained in both roses and carnations, as well as callas, longiflorums and all cut flowers in season. White carnations are scarce, and funeral work was quite plentiful last week.

The weather during last week was dull, with an abundance of rain and high winds; thus the crops were checked to a slight degree. The outlook for a good supply of roses and carnations for Decoration day is encouraging.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. says that in order to get home-grown peonies for Decoration day we must have nice, warm rains, and plenty of bright weather, as the present prospect is a little doubtful.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs was kept busy last week with funeral work.

H. H. Ritter is daily booking large bedding plant orders, and feels well satisfied with spring trade.

Arno Hendrichs has been on the sick list for a week, but is now on the road to recovery.

Miss Lucy Johnson has been confined to bed with grip for the last ten days, but at present there is a slight change for the better.

Visitors last week were: Mr. Hudson, of Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works; E. J. Gould, London, O.; J. Q. Mulford, Lebanon, O., and George Bird, Sidney, O. R. A. B.

Millville, N. J.—When the Easter business was over at the Henderson greenhouses, on Seventh street, there was no time lost in beginning systematic preparations for Memorial day. A part of the benches where the Easter plants stood is now occupied by 8,000 geraniums.

SANGAMO

Is the new, brilliant, glistening pink carnation shown at Indianapolis and awarded the A. O. S. Certificate of Merit, attracting the attention of every carnation grower on account of its very pleasing color, long, stiff stem, and well formed flowers, measuring 3 to 3½ inches. The calyx is strong, and as a producer, it cannot be excelled.

Orders booked now for January, 1910, delivery.

CONQUEST

A new seedling Carnation to be disseminated next season. This is a variety that florists have been wanting ever since they discarded Prosperity.

CONQUEST is a light flesh-pink, overlaid with a deep rose-pink, the color extending over the petals from the center almost to the edge. It does not fade, making it a most beautiful and attractive flower. Its habit is somewhat on the order of Lawson, although the stem is somewhat longer, and very stiff. The flowers are well filled and nicely formed, which add to its attractiveness. Without a doubt, it will be the most attractive, as well as the most profitable variety to be disseminated the coming season.

Orders booked now for January 1, 1910, delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

MARY TOLMAN

A new light salmon pink Carnation, of a somewhat warmer tone than Enchantress, and does not fade on the edge of the petals, having a clear, even shade all over the flower, which measures from 3 to 3½ inches, although 4-inch flowers are very common. The stem is long and stiff, holding the flower perfectly erect. The calyx is very strong, and as a producer, it comes early, is very free and continuous.

Orders booked now for January 1910 delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ANNOUNCEMENT

WE have made arrangements with Messrs. Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., whereby they will grow part of the stock of our new white Carnation SHASTA, and assist in its dissemination next season, 1910. Orders intrusted to them will receive the same careful attention as those sent to us. 12,000 plants between us.

SHASTA is the variety which attracted so much attention at the American Carnation Society's Convention held at Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 27-28, 1909. It scored 89 points and was easily the best looking White Carnation in the hall.

We claim for it, purity in color, good size, fine form, splendid keeping quality, excellent stem, and extraordinary freedom in blooming. It's a money maker for grower and dealer.

We are booking orders now at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Dealers will please write for discounts on large lots.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There has been a steady flow of business ever since Easter, giving some hardly a chance to forget the big rush. The call for stock has been for a variety of purposes. With the graduation season coming on, we find some of the florists quite busy evenings.

Still, with all this business, there is plenty of most stock to go around. Carnations have been quite plentiful, especially Enchantress. Roses remain well used up. Some fine La Detroit are helping out nicely. The Michigan Cut Flower Co. is still showing some fine tulips in various colors.

Various Notes.

The latest acquisition to the florists' business is Miss Helen Murphy, Miss Murphy having been married to Robert Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. The wedding took place early Monday morning, April 26, after which the shy young couple went west on an extended honeymoon.

The Anderson Manufacturing Co., of Detroit, is putting on the market a new hose, made under their own brand. It bears the name, Buckskin hose. Mr. Anderson has had considerable experience in this line, and is having this hose made especially for him according to his directions, 500 feet to the reel. H. S.

COLUMBUS, GA.—The Foley Greenhouses, of which Mrs. A. L. Foley is proprietor, are favorably located on East Highlands. Mrs. Foley has a fine general stock and does considerable shipping, besides supplying a steadily growing local demand.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, now ready for delivery, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready now, $35 per 100, 250 for $82.50, 500 for $150, 1000 for $300.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive and most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Business conditions are satisfactory, and have been so since Easter. The weather is about all that could be desired. Funeral work has been keeping the florists busy of late. The death of the late Col. Charles J. Bronston created quite a demand for flowers. A six-foot broken wheel, made by Honaker The Florist, was especially pretty. Other floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

Roses and carnations are of good quality. Geraniums and other bedding plants are plentiful this year, and are seen anywhere and everywhere. Quantities of cut flowers are shipped to the small neighboring towns. Lexington is becoming quite a cut flower center. Some of the growers contemplate the erection of more houses.

Various Notes.

It is reported that F. W. Meyer, who was formerly florist and landscape gardener at the State College, Ames, Ia., has leased the greenhouses of Mrs. E. C. Henry, at Frankfort, Ky., and will grow a general line of stock for the wholesale and retail trade.

J. Ferdinand Keller, manager of the J. A. Keller estate, is particularly busy with spring stock. They have a good supply of geraniums and other bedding plants, and expect a good cemetery trade.

Some of the florists have started wagons out in the streets selling plants.

John Krahenbuhl, gardener to Mrs. A. J. Alexander, Woodburn Farm, Spring Station, Ky., was a recent visitor here, and called on Lucien Leclere at the South Broadway greenhouses.

Thousands of people were in town last week for the spring races, which created a good demand for stock.

Blue Grass.

Ravenna, O.—A greenhouse may be established in Maple Grove cemetery.

Albany, N. Y.—Bids were received by the board of contract April 19 for a new greenhouse and heating plant for the bureau of parks.

Utica, N. Y.—Peter Crowe entertained a party of city officials and business men at his residence, 710 Genesee street, April 22, in a most enjoyable manner. Mr. Crowe exhibited to his visitors fine blooms of the White Killarney rose. Cards were played, refreshments were served and the evening proved one of rare pleasure for all present. Mr. Crowe recently visited Rochester and Buffalo on business.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade has been rather slack this week. If the present dull weather keeps up there will be a shortage of carnations in this market. The supply now is only fairly good. Carnations retail at 50 cents per dozen. Roses retail at $1.50 per dozen. Some nice roses are now coming in. Bulbous stock is not plentiful. Daffodils retail at 50 cents per dozen. A few tulips still are to be seen, which retail at 50 cents per dozen. Violets are about all gone for this season. Sweet peas retail at $1 per hundred blooms; calla lilies at $2.50 per dozen. Funeral work has been good during the last week, using up lots of short stock.

Various Notes.

A. B. Hathaway is cutting some nice sweet peas. He has had some fine Emperor daffodils this season.

William S. Brown is still cutting some nice calla lilies. He will have a large crop of sweet peas for Memorial day.

H. A. Jahn is cutting good ten weeks' stocks. His Lloyd carnations are looking fine.

E. Y. Peirce intends to plant out young carnation stock this week.

E. G. Davis is shipping fern fronds to Boston and other points.

William P. Peirce has an attractive window at all times. He was much pleased with his Easter business.

William S. Brown, Peter Murray and R. H. Woodhouse have large forces of men at work for spring gardening.

The weather is still cold and raw in this section. We need some good sunshine to help along the ten weeks' stocks, which are grown in quantity here for Memorial day. W. L.

Newport, R. I.—Henry J. Hass has rented a tract of land containing about four and one-half acres, on the west side of Bliss Road park and bounded on the south by Bliss road.

Sandusky, O.—Stock for Easter here was of unusually high grade and was also quite plentiful. Indeed, the supply was so large that the prices were scarcely as good as the quality of the stock seemed to warrant. In most cases the prices did not exceed those of last year. Among the establishments which were particularly noticeable for their excellent display of stock were White's Conservatory, on Hancock street; the Matern Flower House, on Washington street; the Central Greenhouses, on Columbus avenue, and Schaub's Conservatory, at 716 Perry street.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade last week was fairly good, the larger part being funeral work, with some few decorations. Counter trade was light. Roses and carnations are of good quality, owing to the cool weather. The heaviest lot of indoor bulbous stuff is a thing of the past. Easter lilies and callas have good demand. Marguerites and mignonette are arriving in fair quantity. Sweet peas are abundant and moving well. Trade in bedding plants is commencing, and some veranda boxes are to be seen already, although it is about three weeks early.

Various Notes.

Hartje & Elder are sending in some fine sweet peas and snapdragons.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana will be held at the State House next Tuesday afternoon.

Baur & Smith are busy filling orders for geraniums. This firm is cutting some fine sweet peas.

A number of florists in the vicinity of the cemetery have agreed on an increase of about forty per cent in the price of filling cemetery vases, and are sending out notices to that effect.

A. Wiegand & Sons had the decorations for the opening at the Country Club this week. C. W. Sellers, of this firm, is on the sick list.

R. L. Woodward, formerly of this city and recently with T. E. Franks, of Champaign, Ill., has returned to the city and has taken up landscape gardening. He reports business good.

The mother of N. B. Tarkington, the author, died last week. Mr. Tarkington is one of the best flower buyers we have. He usually buys everything in sight and a little more. His individual order for the funeral amounted to about $500.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wiegand are going to leave for a three months' trip to Germany, France and Italy about May 20. H. L. W.

Little Rock, Ark.—Every one in the trade here is having a big season. All bedding stock is in heavier demand than ever before.

HEADQUARTERS FOR Araucarias

"By Jingo!" was the remark the other day of a bright looking gentleman, as he stepped, with his lady friend, into our Araucaria houses. "If these aren't the best shaped and finest looking specimens of Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa I have ever seen, then I'm a mark. What a sight for this time of the year!"

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

PANSY PLANTS.

I have made a specialty of growing pansy seeds and plants for 35 yrs. and my PANSY PARK PERFECTION strain is the best in the world. The flowers are of the largest size, over 60 distinct sorts and the greatest variety of rich and rare shades and markings. Fine, stocky, hardy field-grown plants, well rooted, many in bud or bloom. Price, mixed or separate colors, 500, $2.00; 1000, $3.50; 5000, $16.00; 10,000 $30.00. Cash with order.
One of many reports: The Pansy Park Perfection pansies are the most beautiful I ever raised for size, substance and colors.—John Stevenson, Florist, Lynn, Mass.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight P. O., Mass.

500,000 PANSIES.
Best market strain grown; grown from seed of our own raising. This strain is the result of over 25 years' careful selection, and for size, form and substance and wide range of color in clear, brilliant selfs and novel shades and markings, they will be found unsurpassed. The colors are very evenly assorted and the growth is very strong and stocky. Fall transplanted plants, ready to bud and bloom. Price, $10.00 per 1000. Larger sizes, $15.00 and $20.00 per 1000. Express only. Cash with order.

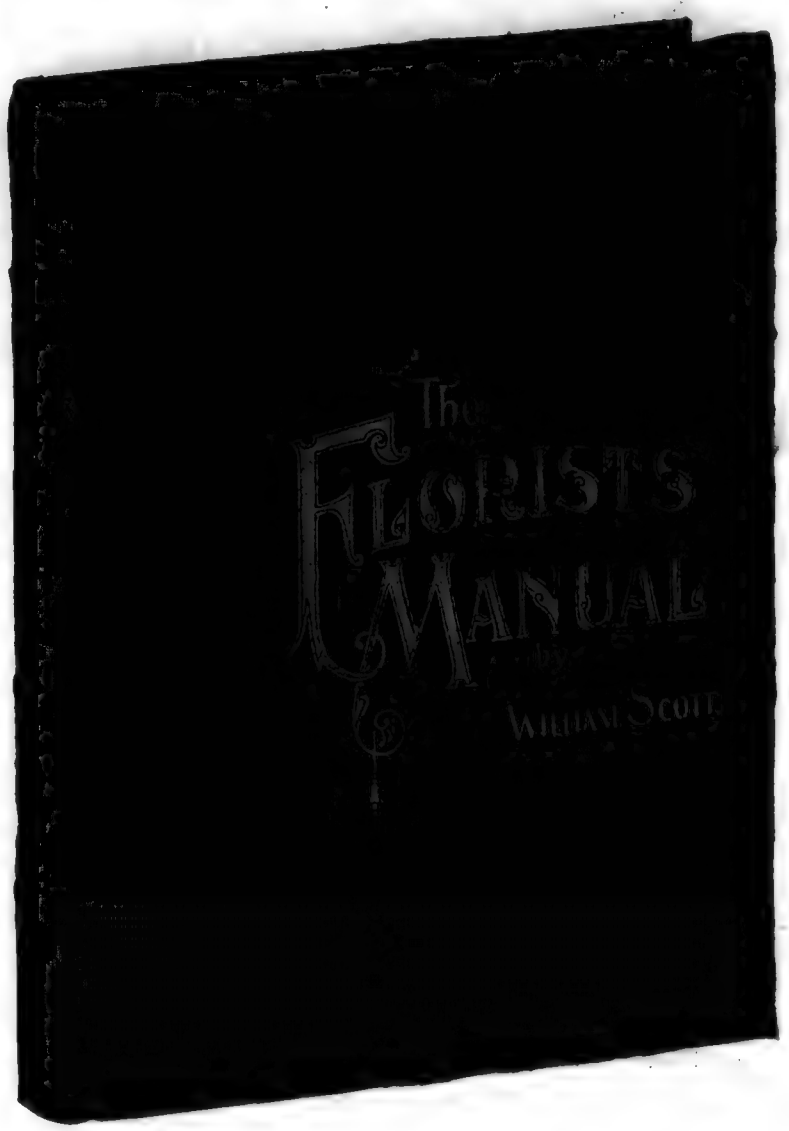
THE VIOLET BLUE ROSE.

The following note with regard to a new rose now being offered in America by Ellwanger & Barry recently appeared in the Horticultural Trade Journal, and will be of interest:



"This season there is indeed a new climbing rose, called Veilchenblau (Violet Blue), brought into commerce by J. C. Schmidt, of Erfurt. From the same raiser we have had such sterling novelties as Aennchen Müller, Tausendschön, and some years ago, Leuchtstern. Therefore, judging the new Violet Blue by its origin, we may anticipate high value. But even the most critical judge will recognize this variety to be meritorious, not only in its quite new color, but also in its growing qualities. It is a seedling of Crimson Rambler and grows at least as quickly and vigorously. It is, at any rate, one of the most vigorous of climbing varieties, and its thick, deep green foliage adds another merit. The flowers are borne in large trusses, after the style of Leuchtstern; they are slightly double or even single, pretty large, and of a deep purplish violet, with light violet center, and prominent yellow anthers. The color is not quite the same in the different stages of the flower; it passes from a more reddish lilac tint when opening to amethyst blue, and at last to a metallic bluish slate color. I use the term 'blue' with precaution, and may repeat that persons who deal less severely with the naming of colors may possibly call it sky blue. There is, however, a wide range of shades from the blue of an auricula or even of Primula Chinensis cærulea to the blue of our true blue violets, and lastly to the blue of Salvia patens and Centaurea Cyanus. Should we insert our new climbing rose, Violet Blue, in such a color chart, it must be placed even before the violet. It is, for all that, a novelty whose qualities will be appreciated by everybody. I may add that as a variety for growing in pots, it is as useful as Crimson Rambler."

EUROPEAN ASTERS.

The purpose of this article, begins a writer in an English trade journal, is to direct the attention of market growers to the Hohenzollern aster class. In habit of growth and form of flower it closely resembles the Ostrich Plume class, but surpasses it by its long, stiff flower stems and the enormous size of its flowers, reaching from five and one-half to nearly six and one-half inches in diameter. The plant, as a whole, has a height of nearly two feet, thus growing about six inches higher than the Ostrich Plume varieties. It comes into bloom seven to twelve days later. For production of fine cut flowers it is to be preferred in every respect, so far as its height and lateness form no objection. The Hohenzollern aster, being of comparatively new introduction, does not include all those beautiful colors we find with the Ostrich Plume class. Nevertheless, nearly all shades important to florists may be had in this new strain; i. e., white, light blue, flesh-color, rosy lilac, rosy carmine, brilliant carmine, and light lilac.

About three years ago there was raised an improved giant-flowering Hohenzollern aster, named Hercules, white. This is the beginning of another class, whose qualities are in the same proportion to the Hohenzollern aster as the latter is to the Ostrich Plume class. It comes into bloom about a week later, and its flowers may, on rich soil, reach a diameter of more than seven inches, being borne on stems yet more vigorous. The plant is for all that of sturdy growth, ranging in height from sixteen to twenty inches. The Hercules aster has been brought into commerce by Ernest Benary, of Erfurt, a house well known to the seed trade by its numerous introductions, especially among annuals and vegetables. As asters of remarkable qualities and fine colors among early flowering strains, I should name Ostrich Plume, salmon colored, being earlier than the original type, and the early-flowering Hohenzollern aster, flowering in July. This early-flowering strain has flowers of about the same size as the Ostrich Plume. It has been introduced by F. Roemer, Quedlinburg.

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. Valentine, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—Conrad Forbach, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

BOILER BLAST WRECKS RANGE.

Miller Place Practically Destroyed.

As the result of the explosion of a 115 horse-power steam boiler, which occurred at 1:30 p. m. April 21, the extensive greenhouses of Miller Bros., of Braccondale, Toronto, Ont., were reduced to a wreck. The most remarkable feature of the accident was that of the twenty-three employees who were working in the houses at the time, not one was injured seriously enough to render him unable to work. The loss is estimated by F. H. Miller at in the neighborhood of $50,000, none of which is covered by insurance.

The scene of the wreck was a picture of almost complete destruction that attracted crowds of people. The solid brick boiler house, the walls of which were nearly two feet thick, was literally level with the ground, and the brick chimney, eighty feet high, was scattered over an immense area. The largest piece of the boiler which exploded was found lying in the center of a field a quarter of a mile away. A smaller boiler, which weighed quite a ton and a half, was intact 200 yards away. The field adjacent to the greenhouses was covered with broken and twisted pieces of iron pipe and machinery, bricks and wood. Smaller scraps of wood and iron are reported to have fallen at various points within a mile of the scene of the wreck. The ends of all the greenhouses next the boiler house were completely wrecked, and the unbroken panes of glass left in the houses were few. Of the residences in the immediate neighborhood many of the windows were broken by the concussion, the noise of which was heard for miles.

The cause of the explosion is a mystery. The fireman, William Warren, who was newly in the employ of Miller Bros., had lit the fire only half an hour before. He with Edwin T. Miller had just noticed that the steam gauge was registering only five pounds of steam, and that the glass tube seemed to show the boiler to be half full of water, but still steam was escaping from the safety valve at the back of the boiler in an unusual way. Seeing that something was wrong, they hastened to warn the others who were in the buildings. They had scarcely left the room when the explosion occurred. Every one was hurled to the ground and received showers of glass, but no one was seriously hurt, their injuries consisting of a few cuts and scratches. That none was killed is regarded by all as little short of a miracle.

The only theory advanced by F. H.

Miller is that some one had been "monkeying" with the valve, and there was a small amount of water in the boiler. Mr. Miller was much affected on viewing the remains of what had been among the show greenhouses of the district. "There is the work of a lifetime destroyed in a minute," he said. For twenty-six years the late F. C. Miller was well known all over York county as a successful grower. When he died a couple of years ago he had put $80,000 into the plant and equipment on his place. Since his death the business has been carried on by his sons, F. H. and Edward, and Mrs. Miller, the widow.

Some of the houses were covered with factory cotton the night after the explosion to keep out the frost, and next morning a temporary boiler was installed. "We are out of the cut flower business for the rest of this year," Mr. Miller said. "Our loss, which I place now at fully $50,000, will be total, because there is no insurance to cover such an accident as that which has happened."

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week the market was in a demoralized condition. Everything in season is coming in large consignments and in all grades. The heavy supply could not be consumed by the small local demand last week. The fine weather of late has sent things along with a rush. Roses are selling at a low figure, and unless extra good nobody seems to want them at any price. Carnations are of extra good quality. Of these it can only be said that the condition is the same as in roses. Sweet peas seem to be the best sellers of anything in the market. At present these, while plentiful, seem to clean up fairly well each day, and only the poorer grades are left over. Violets are done for this season, as only a few are coming in now. The call for valley is erratic, though of extra good quality. Callas and Harrisii are crowded up. The latter is selling as low as $5 per hundred blooms. Double white and purple lilac are selling well. Of the single varieties there are too many just now. There is a good call for smilax and other fancy greens. Fancy ferns are becoming scarce. The common dagger will soon take their place.

Various Notes.

William C. Smith is sporting a new horse and buggy. It made its first appearance in the parks Sunday, April 25.

John Connon, of Webster Grove, was a caller last week, and says that he had the best Easter trade in years. Mr. Connon is cutting some good quality of stock.

The lease of the Eggeling Floral Co. soon expires at the corner of Lafayette and Grand avenue, where it has been doing business for many years. The ground belongs to the Shaw estate and will be laid out in lots. The Eggeling Co. will take up growing plants and cut stock at the place in the country.

Miss Schnell, of East St. Louis, who buys regularly in this market, reports that she has been quite busy since Easter with work of all kinds, and that Easter trade was never better than this year.

C. C. Sanders, whose residence burned recently at his country place on the Henley road, has started to rebuild.

Hugo Gross's sweet peas and carnations are still supreme. Mr. Gross certainly had the finest of success with peas this year.

Adolph Brix is happy now that his new foreman, J. Chapman, of Chicago, has reported for duty. Mr. Brix had his hands full attending to both store and greenhouses during the Easter rush.

The plantsmen at Union market report a good week. The cool spell of last week did not seem to hurt them much. The seedsmen, however, had a little slack time during the cold days. The planting season will begin about May 1.

The Florists' Bowling Club will soon add new members, as some of the older bowlers will take a hand in the Monday night bowling. The city leagues have closed their season, and it would not be surprising to see the old bowling favorites, such as E. W. Guy, C. A. Kuehn, Carl Beyer, A. Y. Ellison and a few others getting early practice for the S. A. F. bowling tournament at Cincinnati.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Everything in the early blooming shrubbery line is either in bloom or just opening. Magnolias, peaches and cherries are about done with, while narcissi and other bulbous flowers are in their glory. A light frost Saturday morning did no harm.

The wholesalers generally are looking down their noses, as they are experiencing what is known as the spring glut. Flowers of all kinds are coming in such quantities that it would keep them busy if they were giving them away, and selling all of them is out of the question.

Roses of the finest quality and special Beauties were selling at prices the wholesalers were ashamed to mention to anyone except the purchasers, and it was hoped they would not give away the prices at which they bought. Carnations were just as bad, and with quantities of outdoor narcissi, such as Emperor, Barri and Mrs. Langtry, it was a serious question how to get rid of their stock. As every doorway on Fifth avenue held a flower seller Saturday night, it is presumed they got rid of most of them, but with violets selling for 5 cents a bunch, and roses and carnations at 10 cents a dozen, business among the retailers was declared "rotten." This report was almost general.

The shopmen all handle some seed, and this, with people inquiring about spring plants, gave the appearance of business, but trade was far from right.

Various Notes.

James Mandes, who conducted the flower stand on Penn avenue, east end, went out of business early the morning after Easter, and is under bail to answer the suits of several wholesalers who want their money.

Frank Faulk, of Faulk & Bros., of North Side Market, is confined to bed and, his physician says, will not be out for several weeks. His friends, however, hope for a speedy recovery.

Charles Peterson, of East Liverpool, O., was here Friday and took in the ball game.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has completed a new office in the front of the store room, where the genial bookkeeper, Ray Page, is holding forth. H. P. Joslin is supplying this firm with the first outdoor flowers, fine narcissi in variety.

P. J. Demas, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, is a sufferer from boils and a glut of Beauties.

Mrs. William Dittmann, of New Castle, Ind., stopped off to visit the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. Mrs. Dittmann is on her way to visit her mother, at her old home in Bavaria. She sails Tuesday, April 27.

The committee having charge of providing quarters for the carnation convention has made arrangements with the new Fort Pitt hotel, which will be the headquarters, and the large hotel hall will be used for the exhibition. It is said by those who have attended the various conventions that it is the finest hall ever provided for this purpose, from the point of light, ventilation and convenience. It is on the first floor, and the hotel is convenient to all depots, right in the downtown section of the city, and the rates are the lowest for a first-class house. The banquet will be in the same house. The committee expects to see almost every member bringing a lady, and no matter what the weather conditions may be, there will be no inconvenience.

Ben Elliott reports from John Bader's that at least the plant business is more than holding its own these days, and shows a large increase over last year's business.

The Florists' Club will meet Tuesday, May 4, in the store room of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., 222 Oliver avenue. "Large doings"—don't miss them.

THE KEWANEE SYSTEM OF WATER SUPPLY

This is a Complete Private Water Works Plant.

The above illustration shows a complete Kewanee System—Kewanee System No. 24. It gives service equal to that offered by the best city water supply system. Notice how compact it is. Notice its simple construction.

This water works plant includes the tank, pumping outfit, and necessary immediate connections. Extend pipe to the source of supply and to your fixtures and you will then be assured of every sanitary comfort and convenience—an abundance of water in the bathroom, kitchen, laundry, lawn, garden—anywhere.

This service, together with excellent fire protection, will be yours if you install

The Kewanee System of Water Supply

With the Kewanee System there is no elevated or attic tank to leak, freeze, overflow or collapse. A Kewanee Pneumatic Tank is located in the cellar or buried in the ground, and the water is delivered by air pressure. Any good form of pumping power which is adaptable to the local conditions, can be used with the Kewanee System.

Do you realize that there had been no improvement in the method of storing water from the time of Adam, until the Kewanee System of Water Supply was invented, about ten years ago? The only system was the gravity system, in which you put the water up in the air, where you didn't want it, in order to get it back where you did want it. This method will look positively foolish in a few years. It does look foolish now, wherever the Kewanee System is known.

Over 9000 Kewanee Systems are in use and every one is a success. Over 9000 water supply problems have been solved by the Kewanee System. Let us show you what we can do for you. No charge for expert engineering service. Our guarantee protects you. It is our rule never to have a customer dissatisfied.

Kewanee Pumping Outfits

Kewanee Pumping Outfits are furnished for any special pumping requirements. The same technical skill and practical knowledge required to develop and perfect complete Kewanee Systems, is devoted to the solution of individual pumping problems.

Write for our complete 64-page catalog, it is fully illustrated and tells where Kewanee Systems are in operation. Ask for catalog No. 55 and please mention this magazine.

Hail Does Great Damage.

One of the severest hail storms in the history of Hamilton county swept over the northwestern part of Millcreek valley Tuesday afternoon, April 20, causing great damage to all florists in the path of the storm. Hail stones larger than walnuts beat down upon the greenhouses in a steady shower for about ten minutes.

E. G. Gillett says W. K. Partridge's loss will be 30,000 feet of glass; J. T. Conger, 4,500 feet; W. Gray, 10,000 feet; Max Rudolph, 10,000 feet; Corbett & Wilson, Geo. Magrie, Henry Corbett, Joseph Linfoot and others all suffered large losses.

Another report says all florists in Cumminsville, Mt. Airy, College Hill, Glendale, Wyoming, Lockland and Hartwell were heavy losers. W. K. Partridge puts his breakage at 30,000 feet of glass, and estimates his money loss at $5,000. In June, 1907, Mr. Partridge's hotbeds were destroyed by a similar storm. J. T. Conger, of Hartwell, lost about $3,000 in glass and stock. George Corbett, of College Hill, lost $1,000. Walter Gray, of College Hill, also suffered heavily. His loss is estimated at over $1,000. The nurseries of Max Rudolph, in Mt. Airy, were damaged to the extent of about $700, and the private conservatory of J. A. Brigel, in Mt. Airy, lost about 300 panes of glass, in addition to many fine plants. About 8,000 feet of glass was broken in George Mayer's greenhouse at College Hill; 5,000 feet at Joseph Linfoot's, and 4,000 feet at Samuel Morehead's. Greenhouses at the public institutions also suffered heavily.

Various Notes.

Business was quiet all last week, but Sunday, April 25, demand sprang up and this week started with everything cleaned up.

The local committee of florists which is preparing for the reception of the S. A. F. in August is preparing to entertain 1,500 visitors. Trolley rides and a trip on the river are on the program. The convention comes here on its silver anniversary, it having been organized in this city twenty-five years ago.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

John W. Ingalls & Co., who recently lost their greenhouses on Corbin street by fire, have purchased the Leonard Lawson greenhouse property, at the corner of Ninth avenue and Eleventh street.

The fire which visited the Ingalls greenhouses last fall completely demolished the plant, and since then no effort has been made to rebuild at the old site. The Ingalls company has been keeping up its retail business, occupying one of the store rooms in the Star block. This uptown store will be maintained in the future. The property just purchased is one of the best plants in the city.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday evening, April 14. President Everett occupied the chair. There was a good attendance, notwithstanding the unpleasant weather. As usual, the flowers, plants, etc., for exhibition were of the best.

The judges for the month were Messrs. Mackenzie, Ingram and Holloway.

The awards by points were as follows: G. Wilson, Frau Karl Druschki roses, 93 points; Paul Reul, antirrhinums, 86⅓; Valentine Clercs, carnations, 86⅓; Henry Gaup, culinary peas, 86; James Elmslie, carnations, 81⅓.

E. Fardell, Great Neck, was awarded a cultural certificate with Queen Alexandra stock.

Julius Roehrs exhibited, for the first time in America, Miltonia Bleuana nobilor, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit.

A pan of Salvia Zurich, exhibited by Paul Reul, is also worthy of note.

J. Ingram read a paper on orchids. Mr. Ingram is an expert cattleya grower. Previous to starting business as a landscape gardener, he had charge of an extensive private collection. His essay contained many valuable hints on growing orchids, the best kinds to grow, their insect pests, remedies, etc. Mr. Ingram was accorded a unanimous vote of thanks for his excellent paper.

G. Wilson and E. Fardell told how they grew their respective exhibits.

Two new members were elected to active membership, Mr. Barton, of Glen Cove, and Peter Macleod, of Westbury.

The Market.

Trade for the last two weeks has been good, both in funeral work and in receptions, etc. Stock has been somewhat scarce, as the bulb stock is pretty well cleaned up and we have to fall back on roses, carnations, lilies, etc. Roses are in fine shape and of good color. Carnations are good, and while they are coming in heavily, it does not take long to clean them up. There is a good sprinkling of Harrisii and callas, which help to swell the stock.

Pot plants are selling well, and there are quite a few ramblers, etc., still to be had. Azaleas are about cleaned up. Everybody is getting busy on the spring rush, and we all look for a good plant trade, with stock in good shape.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting at the store of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co. Tuesday evening, April 13. There was a good attendance, and everybody wanted to get in line early for our annual picnic, which will be held at Buckeye lake.

Mr. Jones, formerly grower for J. R. Hellenthal, is now with the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., at its country plant.

The change in administration will no doubt make some big changes in the state institutions, and the boys here are on uneasy seats at present. J. M.

ERIE, PA.

We are having nice spring weather and outdoor stock is budding. Business is brisk, with many parties and luncheons. Orchids, gardenias and violets are in great demand. Carnations and roses are at their best.

The preparations for the florists' employees' dance are steadily going on. This promises to be a delightful affair.

Ogden Gaul, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., was in the city on business April 24.

Miss Thekla Baur has returned from a visit in Toledo, O. B. P.

JACKSON, TENN.—The Metcalfe Floral Co. had probably the largest Easter trade in the history of the firm; almost everything salable was cleaned out by 8:30 Saturday evening, April 10. Mrs. J. A. Cunningham, of Institute street, also sold a large quantity of stock, consisting chiefly of carnations, valley and roses. Wilson's Greenhouses reported big sales, with the best demand for carnations.

Why We Are Opening A Chicago Office

It is like this: It has always been difficult for us to give our numerous western inquiries the personal attention we wanted to. We believe there is a special advantage in being in closer touch with you all.

Chicago is the business center of the West and Far West, and naturally enough we have located there. Of course, we want to be right in the business center, so we have selected an office in The Rookery Building, on the corner of La Salle and Adams Streets. You will find this office in charge of a member of our firm, Mr. George Sykes. He has been with us going on fifteen years, and thoroughly understands greenhouse building.

When you are in town, look in upon him. If not convenient to do this, drop him a line.

About Its Erection

Taken side by side, with conditions equal, the U-Bar house can be erected with less trouble and greatest speed. Look at a U-Bar house and it is plain enough why—rafter and roof bars combined in one—the entire frame reduced to a mere web—no complicated fittings to belt up—one-third less glazing to do because the glass is spaced one-third wider—simply straight away work from start to finish.
If yours is a case where time counts and where greatest endurance and highest productiveness are requirements, then send for a catalogue and get in immediate touch with us.

A Mighty Attractive Greenhouse

THIS range is at Central Park, Davenport, Iowa—Rather a long way to send for a greenhouse, when you come to think that our factory is in the east and only twenty miles from New York—but they wanted a light, enduring, ornamental range, and our Sectional Iron Frame Construction perfectly filled the bill, as no other did.

As far as distance is concerned, we ship houses to California every year, and only last month one good sized one went to Colorado. But better yet, is a cable order from China, sent by a man who had one of our Burnham Boilers. And so it goes.

When there is anything doing, drop us a line.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list.

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the fall and early winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE IVY CROSS.

The ivy cross with the garland of roses is a pleasing arrangement where an elaborate design is required. The stern simplicity of the ivy cross is relieved by a graceful garland, preferably of white roses, with the color idea continued by Easter lilies at the base. The lilies are especially adapted for use with growing plants. This is one of the designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. PHIL.

AUTOMOBILES FOR DELIVERY.

That the automobile will eventually become the standard means of delivery for retail florists is the prediction of William J. Smyth. He does a large business in Chicago, where deliveries are long and widely scattered, and he knows all about the time required and cost entailed in delivering. Mr. Smyth's first purchase in automobiles was for pleasure purposes, but he found the machine covered the ground so much faster than a horse could do it that his second investment in motor vehicles was one which could be used for delivery. "With the machine," said Mr. Smyth the other day, "we can do as much in a forenoon as a team would accomplish in a day and a half. That means that we can get along with just so many less delivery outfits, make quicker trips, and more of them, with better all-around satisfaction. With the machine it is only a matter of a few minutes to run down to the wholesale market from Thirty-first street, three miles and back, and get any stock that is needed, and I believe that in a short time the automobile will be the standard delivery conveyance for all up-to-date flower stores."

CHARGES FOR BOARDERS.

I wish some one who has had experience would give us information about what to charge for plant storage. I have some large plants, Agave Americana from four feet to six feet in diameter, that I have been storing this winter, and we always have more or less smaller plants, especially palms and ferns, that we store for customers. Usually these plants are from well-to-do customers who are able to pay, but I would like to know how other florists base their charges. J. K. P.

I doubt whether the business of boarding plants has ever been made a paying proposition. All things considered, it cannot help but be a most unsatisfactory undertaking.

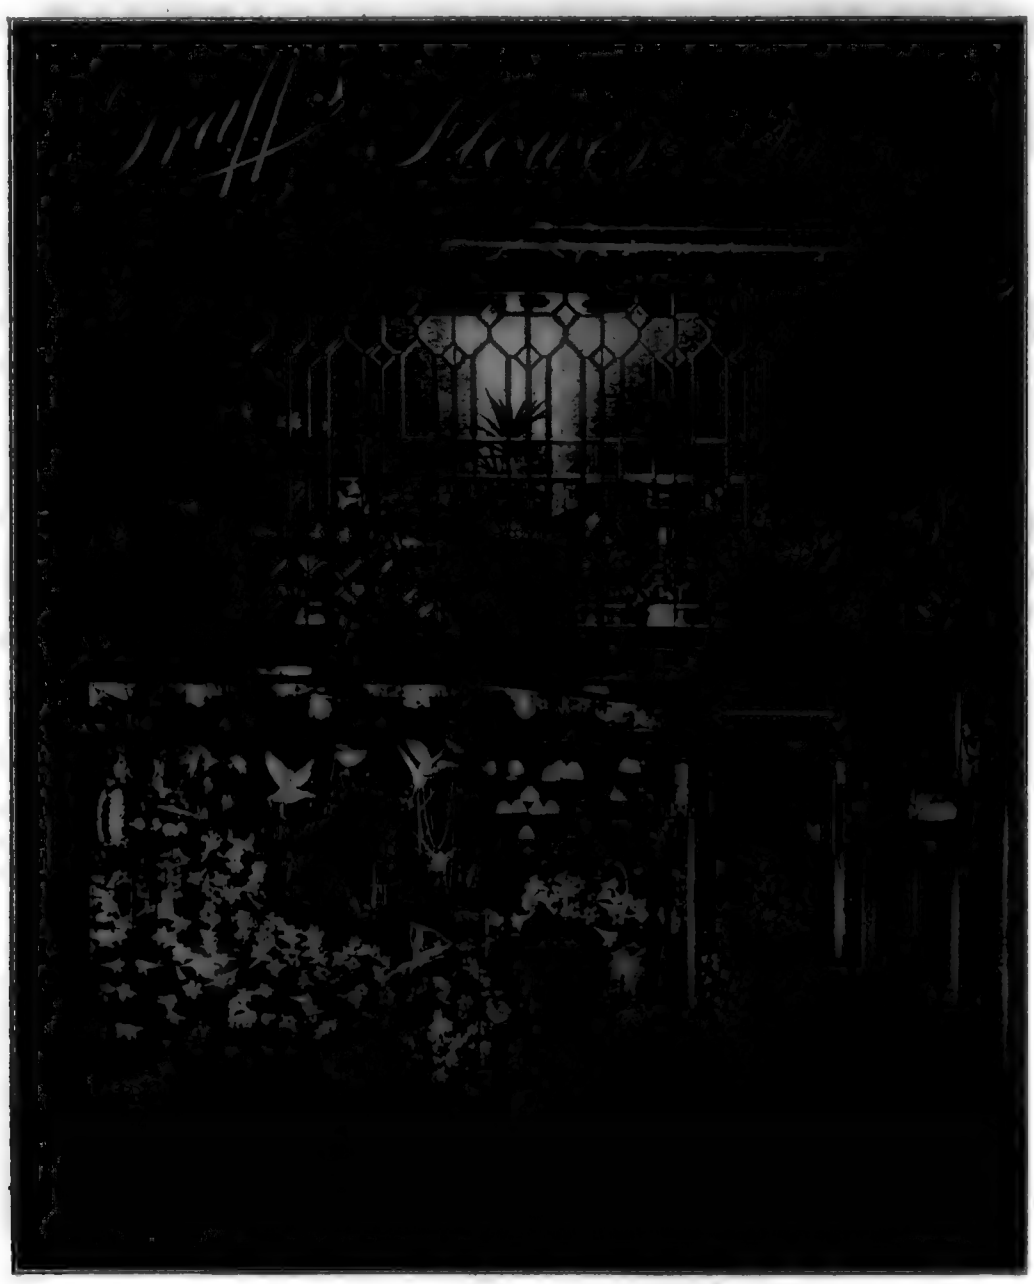
To the novice the one sure way of getting new customers would seem to be by taking care of and rejuvenating other people's plant pets, but my experience has been that the fewer boarders you have about the place, the less chance there is of making bad friends. Still, a retailer having greenhouses cannot well refuse to care for palms, ferns, bay trees, etc., when the request comes from a regular patron. It has been tried time and again, but it is not long before you are obliged to keep one plant, then another, and so on.

Having finally come to the conclusion that we must accept the care of a limited number of customers' plants, give your patrons to understand that it is just a matter of accommodation and the fee charged is merely to cover expenses.

Now as to a reasonable fee, $1 per square foot has always been accepted as the value of greenhouse space, but this may be a trifle high when it comes to boarders, especially large plants not requiring much heat or attention.

Palms, rubbers, etc., are often kept only for a short period, through the summer months. Then a good plan is to charge so much per month; for instance, a palm in about a 7-inch pot would cost to board 50 cents for the first month and 25 cents per month thereafter.

Boston ferns and like plants are hardly worth keeping. They take up more room than it seems fair to charge for and are usually half dead when you get them.



If you have a suitable cold house, bay trees and boxwood can be stored for somewhat less than other plants. They require little heat and care. Such plants as Agave Americana are also better kept in a cool house. The leaves should be tied up, but great care must be taken that they are not cut; to avoid this, place a piece of old carpet or some rags between the rope. After the leaves are tied into place, figure out about the number of square feet the plant will need at 75 cents per foot and you have what should be charged for winter storage.

There also should be a nominal charge for calling for and delivering plants, especially where a special trip is made. When it comes to plants like the century plant, often it takes two or more men to handle them, and this service must also be considered.

When plants belong to regular customers you often can afford to stretch a point, but those people not your customers should pay you well for your trouble, and they are usually quite willing to do so.

I presume each and every florist has a somewhat different way of keeping track of boarder plants, but perhaps many have no way at all. Each plant should be properly labeled, preferably with a copper or zinc label. This label should bear the name of the owner and number of plant. A record should be kept and the condition of the plant upon receival noted in the record, to avoid trouble when the plant is returned. When your wagon brings in some plants which are not apt to live over night, call up or write the customer right away; neglect is simply borrowing trouble.

A NEW SEATTLE STORE.

Sam Graff, formerly of Chicago and later of the firm of Graff Bros., Columbus, O., removed to Seattle, Wash., something over a year ago, and opened a flower store at 1515 Pike place. Seattle is a first-class flower town, and the business there is growing as rapidly as in any city in the United States. His venture proved so successful that he determined to open a second store, at 921 First avenue. This was ready for business at Easter, and is shown in the accompanying illustrations.

The store is 20x135, and is fitted up in the most modern style, with every facility for handling the best class of trade. It not only is one of the handsomest stores on the Pacific coast, but would be a credit to any of the large eastern cities. Thomas B. Pritchard is in charge.

PICTURE POST-CARDS.

One of the favorite means of advertising now adopted by retail florists is the souvenir post-card. With the development of the post-card craze has come a process of manufacturing colored cards, some of which are excellent reproductions from photographs of flower stores. The post-office department now permits a division of the front of the card, giving half for the address and half for an advertisement. It makes a first-class advertisement for a retail florist to print a colored illustration of his store occupying the entire back of the card, with an advertisement of seasonable character printed on the left half of the front. The Fred Haupt Co., Louisville, is sending out such a card.

STEAMER FLOWERS.

The outward tide of European travel, now really a matter of no special month or season, is at its heaviest in summer, because that is the vacation time. People have the money, nowadays, for travel, only more of them have leisure in summer, so it pays to keep an eye open for steamer trade all the year around, giving it a little special attention in the season when other lines of the flower business are dullest.

It is quite the fashion to send flowers to one's friends sailing from home. In New York it is a big item of the summer business with all the first-class stores, but especially with those represented in the Review's department of Leading Retail Florists, for they receive the mail and telegraph orders from other florists all over the country, both from those who have these orders frequently and from those in smaller cities, who forward such orders only once in a while.

Since so many people scattered all over the country have achieved sudden riches, the number of florists who make money out of these exchange orders has greatly increased. The local florist who lets it be known that he has facilities for delivering flowers at the ends of the earth on a few hours' notice will find himself frequently called on, not only to deliver bon voyage tokens on board outgoing steamers, but debutante bouquets, birthday bunches, lovers' favors and funeral flowers.

Really, all the facilities you need for handling this business and making twenty per cent is the latest copy of the Review and a little printer's ink. The copy of the Review is for your own private information; the printer's ink is for calling the attention of the public.

The accompanying illustration is a reproduction, reduced to one-fourth its original size, of the advertisement B. Rubel, president of the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, publishes every now and then in leading Chicago papers, where it costs from $25 to $50 per insertion, to keep the public in mind of the fact that he can send flowers farther than his delivery wagons go. He also uses attractive window signs for the same purpose.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

One of the visitors at the national flower show at Chicago last November was Jacob Schulz, of Louisville, Ky. Mr. Schulz is a gentleman who knows a good thing when he sees it, and the way he is using the "before and after" garden, shown for the first time at the national flower show by Vaughan's Seed Store, is illustrated on this page. This illustration is prepared from a photograph made in the deep show window of Mr. Schulz's store in Louisville. It is a display particularly good for this season of spring planting. Mr. Schulz had to work in only a fraction of the space used for the original display at the Coliseum, and has therefore not been able to make his arrangement so elaborate. Those with larger space could doubtless improve upon it. A much better effect would have been produced with the use of sand instead of large pebbles for the walk in the "after taking" side of the picture.

Mr. Schulz says: "The photograph does not do the display full justice, as there is a street in front of the yards that is not shown on the picture, owing to the window having a circle on one side that made the photographer stand too close to the window to catch the street. It is our idea to run this window until May 10 and change the plants every two or three days. At present we have Baby Rambler roses along the fences and the two plants next to the door are Beauty of Fairfield, the new monthly rambler."

PEONY JULES ELIE.

I have quite a patch of Peony M. Jules Elie that were on this place when I took it. I am growing these for consignment to wholesale commission florists, but some of them say this is not a good variety for the purpose; that it is not a good keeper and shipper. I wish you would tell me if the variety is good for cut flowers, a good keeper and shipper, and any advice as to how it should be grown, cut and handled will be especially welcome. H. O.

How an Inland Retailer Gets Steamer Orders.

Arthur Bryant & Son, Princeton, Ill., say: "While we grow this peony, M. Jules Elie, we have not had it in sufficient quantities so that we have used it for cut flowers, and do not know how it would act when handled for that purpose. We know it is an extra fine sort for other than cut flower purposes."

Wm. A. Peterson, of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, says: "My experience has been that this is not a good keeper and therefore not well adapted for shipping."

Good & Reese Co., Springfield, O., say: "Mons. Jules Elie we do not consider a good peony for cut flowers; that is, for shipping and keeping. There is probably not a more showy peony than this variety where it can be cut just before it opens and used at once. That has been our experience with this variety. We find the best method to grow peonies is to give them a good, strong sandy soil and give them no manure except what is used as a top mulching after the first hard freeze in the fall. Then to increase the size of the flower, you should water it once a week with manure water just before flowering. You will find this increases the size as well as deepens the color of the bloom. Besides this, we do not think the peony should have any manure."

The Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., says: "We have been growing this excellent peony for a great many years, but owing to the large demand for the roots, we have never had it in large enough quantities to justify us in shipping the blooms. We have, however, used them in large quantities for home decoration and have also shipped them long distances for exhibition purposes, and have always found that it carried as good as the majority of varieties."

Beverly Farms, Mass.—Alexander Carr, for a number of years foreman for Jas. B. Dow, at the Sunnyside Greenhouses, has now started business on his own account, as a gardener and florist.

MUMS FOR POT CULTURE.

Please publish a list of chrysanthemums best suited for pot culture, single flower to the stem. Mention three or four each of white, pink and yellow. Also please give a few cultural directions. I am located in Ohio.

W. Z.

I presume W. Z. is after the best kinds to grow in 6-inch pots, one flower to a plant, such as are popular in some eastern shows. The following kinds are all excellent for this purpose, being dwarf, having nice foliage and large flowers: White—Merza, Beatrice May, May Seddon and Nellie Pockett. Pink—Morton F. Plant, Lady Hopetoun, Grace Whitney and W. Duckham. Yellow—Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, Souv. Scalarandis and Mrs. J. C. Neill.

The cuttings for this class should be rooted in May or the first week in June, potted just as soon as rooted and never permitted to wilt or suffer any neglect. Give them room so they will not get drawn up, and move them from 2½-inch to 6-inch as soon as the plants are ready for it. Pot firmly, as one of the merits of 6-inch pot plants is to have the plant dwarf, say a foot high, and supporting a flower of exhibition size and finish. About the middle of August onward, catch the buds as they show, as one must use crowns for the big flowers.

I recommend inside culture for these plants all the time. It is almost impossible, at least in our section, to grow pot plants outside and keep the foliage in good shape. The thunder storms of July and August get the plants waterlogged, and rust and fungoid diseases find a fertile field among them.

No plant, to my mind, is prettier than a well grown plant in a 6-inch pot, but it represents much labor, and the grower who attempts to grow these for market should get a good return for his time and trouble. Charles H. Totty.

MUMS IN LETTUCE SOIL.

I have a solid, middle bed in my greenhouse now in lettuce, and am planning to plant it in chrysanthemums as soon as the lettuce is off. My mum plants are now in flats. I have on hand in the barn a nice lot of rotten cow manure. Do you think it will be all right to spade the manure in and plant the chrysanthemums as early as May 15, where they are to remain and bloom?

M. E. H.

Plant the mums by May 15 by all means, if you have the head room for them. Early planted stock, other things being equal, will give better flowers than later stock, particularly with the earlier varieties. Such kinds as Pacific, Polly Rose, Golden Glow, Monrovia and all that section should be planted by May 15, or, even if you do catch an early bud, the stem is so short that the flower is of little use.

M. E. H. should look over his varieties and plant the dwarf kinds where the head room is lowest. Beatrice May, Merza, Ivory and the kinds previously mentioned will finish easily enough with four feet from the soil, but Eaton, Chadwick, Gen. Hutton, Duckham, Mrs. Swinburne and such like will go up from six to eight feet if planted so early.

There is nothing much better to use than the rotted cow manure spoken of, and a little bone meal spaded in at the same time will furnish all the necessary elements for the plants for some time to come. Firm the soil well after planting, and if any of the plants are very long, it might be well to pinch them back so that they will not run up so quickly.

Charles H. Totty.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Regarding increasing the membership of the C. S. A., the notes of President Smith in the Review of April 29 are timely and to the point, and it is a fact that though many florists watch the reports of the different committees in the fall, still they are indifferent about joining the society and becoming actively interested in it. Some there are, I know, who believe that all the work now being done by the different societies, such as the Rose Society, the Carnation Society and the Chrysanthemum Society, should be done by sub-committees of the S. A. F., and I am not prepared to say but what that would be the ideal way. In the meantime, however, what should be done about it? Surely the Chrysanthemum Society is worth the annual dues of $2 (which is all the applicant is asked to contribute) to every florist in the country, not to mention the hundreds of private gardeners and amateur growers who can all find valuable information in its yearly reports.

President Smith and his committees are willing to work and make this the banner year for this society, so, brother growers, show your interest in the matter. In the current slang of the day, "It's up to you." C. H. Totty.

ROSE TAUSENDSCHON.

This beautiful new German rose has attracted great attention since its introduction, and it is undoubtedly one of the best varieties sent out during the last decade. As to its complete hardiness in our cold northern states, we cannot yet speak with absolute certainty, but it is claimed for it that 10 to 15 degrees below zero has left it unscathed. This being so, it can fairly be placed in the same class as the various ramblers. No more lovely climbing rose for pillars, arches and pergolas has ever been sent out. The flowers are larger than those of Clothilde Soupert, and similar in color, being pink when opening and a beautiful rosy carmine when fully expanded. The clusters are large, and the small number of thorns, as compared with other ramblers, is another point in its favor.

Both in 1908 and 1909 Tausendschon proved a great seller in pots at Easter, and the likelihood is that an enormous number will be sold for 1910. A prominent nursery firm, who had a big stock of this rose, stated a few days ago that they were entirely cleaned out, and could have easily sold double or treble the number they had.

Now is a good time to start plants for Easter of 1910. The holiday comes unusually early, and those who will go to the trouble of growing their plants in pots the season through will be well repaid for any extra labor entailed. Plants grown from cuttings of this and, in fact, any of the ramblers, are preferable to budded stock. They should be potted at once, stood in a light, sunny house and cut back to within a few inches of the pot. A number of shoots will soon start from the bottom. Select the strongest of these and keep them tied up as they grow. Rub off the weaker bottom shoots. By the end of July the shoots will be fairly well matured, and the plants can be plunged outdoors in a sunny spot to ripen up. A gradual lessening of the water supply after early October will help to firm up the wood. It will be necessary to start plants in a cool house at Christmas, as Easter comes three months later.

In summer free syringing is necessary to keep down red spider. When being forced, mildew, usually due to cold draughts, must be guarded against.

Many growers prefer to plant their ramblers outdoors, and pot them up about the last of October. The bulk of the plants seen at Easter are grown in this way, and are often of excellent quality. It is not possible, however, to get as fine trusses on these as on plants established in pots. Neither are such plants so well adapted for early forcing. With such an early Easter as we will have in 1910, the men with the pot-grown stock would seem to have a decided advantage.

PROBLEMS OF ROSE GROWERS.

[This paper was prepared by Prof. L. C. Corbett, of Washington, D. C., for the Buffalo meeting of the American Rose Society, in March, 1909, but was not read.]

Heat, light, water and soil are the big four with which the plant grower, be he farmer, gardener or florist, is concerned. In nature all of these factors are more or less in the class of variables. The farmer and gardener, working in the open and dependent upon natural sources for heat, light, moisture and soil, are playing at a game of chance. The two factors that it is within their power to modify are moisture and soil. By irrigation, the water content of the soil can be regulated. By the judicious use of fertilizers and manure, the food supply of the plant can be modified. Aside from these two alternatives, the farmers and gardeners are totally dependent upon nature's kind provisions.

The florist carries the cultivation of plants one step farther from the field of chance by safeguarding the temperature factor. The florist may or should be able to control three of the determining factors in plant growth, namely, heat, moisture and soil. His variable should be confined to the light factor alone.

A Natural Law Ignored.

Our modern greenhouses have been well planned so as to cut out as little light as possible, by the use of light framework and large glass. The great weakness in our present scheme of greenhouse construction lies in the total disregard of the laws of reflection and refraction. The fact that a glass roof can be so constructed that it will allow a large percentage of light and heat rays of the sun to penetrate the house at certain hours of the day, and will reflect or throw off a large percentage of the same rays at other hours of the day, has, it would appear, been given altogether too little consideration, both by florists, physiologists and physicists. This is one of the respects in which practice is far behind. The available knowledge on this phase of construction seems to have been almost entirely ignored by the practical florist and greenhouse builder. Much thought is spent in designing gutters, sashbars and ventilating apparatus, while the pitch of the roof and the direction of the ridge, factors which directly measure the value of the houses, are entirely ignored.

Controlling the Light.

It is therefore evident that the florist may, in a measure, at least, influence the light factor. While he cannot increase or decrease the actual hours of sunshine, he can, by properly planning his houses, afford his plants the maximum benefit of the light provided in nature. Researches which have been conducted along this line clearly indicate the value of light as a factor in plant growth. Prolonging the light period by artificial means, as has been demonstrated by Bailey, Rane, the writer and others, decidedly hastens growth. Should we not, then, give this factor the full attention its importance deserves?

Rose Tausendschon as an Easter Plant.

The temperature and moisture requirements of plants are given far more consideration than light by florists, but it is surprising to note the great lack of available general information upon so simple a matter as properly providing for the requisite amount of radiation in a greenhouse for a particular purpose in a definite locality. Too often this important matter is left to the local plumber, who has no idea of the problem involved, or how to solve it. Yet heat is the greatest charge against the growing account.

The Water Supply.

Moisture is the coin of the realm with the gardener and the florist; both deal in products the chief constituent of which is water. A pure and adequate water supply, intelligently used, is a determining factor in garden and floral undertakings.

Now we come to the soil, an absolute essential to the success of every commercial agricultural enterprise, and the source of the livelihood and wealth of the major portion of the earth's inhabitants; yet what shall we say of it, since it is so complex? If we consider its derivation, we find the rocks yielding to the action of frost, water and air to supply the mineral matter. Vegetation springs up to ripen and decay, and thus contributes humus, another factor as important as the mineral. The decomposition of organic matter in the soil sets to work other forces which are no less important than the primary constituents themselves. The combination of the organic and the mineral substances creates a condition which makes it possible for many low forms of animal and plant life to exist in this medium we call soil. These low forms are some of them helpful and some of them hindrances to the plant grower.

A Bacteriological Puzzle.

The introduction of this host of tenants complicates things and renders what was formerly thought to be simply a chemical problem, a very intricate combined chemical and bacteriological puzzle. Some aspects of this puzzle are yet so new and difficult that no prediction dare be made at this time regarding their importance to agriculture.

Enough has been determined, however, to prove that an important lead has been struck. The value of nitrogen-gathering bacteria is sufficient evidence of the richness of this new field. Knowledge of the way in which nitrogen-gathering bacteria work gives us a clue to the solution of one of the most difficult problems in the maintenance of soil fertility. It explains the division of labor in nature, and gives a reason for crop rotation. The same laws that govern the rotation of crops in field operations come into play to our advantage in the soil heap. The compost heap should consist of organic material in the form of sods and manure, so combined with mineral matter in the form of loam and clay as to enable decomposition and nitrification to take place rapidly.

The Problem of the Compost Heap.

The florist's business is not merely to place available food in a natural soil, but to combine the several constituents for fertile soil in such manner as to secure that mechanical condition and food supply calculated to best meet the requirements of the particular crop under consideration. In this respect the florist has an advantage again over the gardener and the farmer. But can anyone describe the ideal soil for any particular crop? Can anyone say that a soil consisting of ten per cent organic matter, thirty per cent clay, forty per cent loam and twenty per cent sand is an ideal soil for roses, for carnations, for lettuce, or for any other crop? I think not. Our knowledge upon these important points is of the empirical kind. An experienced gardener makes up a potting soil; he mixes it with his hands and, if it appears too heavy, he adds sand; if not sufficiently fibrous, he adds leaf-mold or peat. Just why he adds these substances he cannot tell, neither can he describe to you the exact consistency and character of his ideal rose soil; yet his knowledge of the requirements of a particular crop leads him to make the changes above noted to bring the soil to his ideal of the requirements for the particular crop.

Can this empirical knowledge or idea be reduced to exact terms? Are the exact amount of available plant food and the proportion of sand, clay and humus in this ideal soil measurable? If it is, we can obtain a basis for exact experiments to determine whether or not the gardener's judgment of an ideal soil for a particular crop is correct. If these factors are not measurable, we are as much at sea in our experimental work as is the gardener. It is all simply a matter of judgment.

Not Yet an Exact Science

Up to the present, I am sorry to say that the whole matter is largely dependent upon experiences and judgment. Soils differ so much in composition and physical properties, even when so-called like materials are used in their make-up, and we know so little regarding the influence of bacterial action, which is consistently working in the soil, that it is practically impossible in the present state of our knowledge to reduce the soil factor to exact measurement.

A much more accurate idea of the relative influence of heat, light, water and soil can be secured under greenhouse conditions than in the open, but even here, while we know infinitely more than did the early gardeners, our knowledge is far from exact. It may be that exact data will never be possible, but certain it is that the knowledge that is so rapidly accumulating will clear up many dark places, and we hope it will soon put us in possession of facts to replace empiricism. Until more knowledge is available, we must continue each to determine for himself, under his own environment, the most profitable combination for the compost, and the varieties best suited to this soil and his market. "There is no royal road to knowledge," and the intelligent, painstaking care is the only way to spell success.

OUTDOOR VALLEY.

Are outdoor lily of the valley blooms salable in the wholesale market, and how should they be bunched and handled for this purpose? Will it pay a grower of outdoor flowers to plant these in the field and cultivate, or how should they be cared for? I have enough pips grown outdoors, which are strong and hardy, to plant on one-fourth of an acre. They gave me last year stems from twelve to fifteen inches long, with from ten to fourteen bells on a stem. L. J. B.

There is a fair sale for outdoor grown valley in all the large wholesale markets. If your stems are twelve to fifteen inches long and average ten to fourteen flowers each, you should have no trouble in disposing of them. At Memorial day they are in special demand. Unfortunately, on many occasions they are on the wane before the end of May. Perhaps, however, this present cool season may prove one of the exceptions.

Valley is customarily sold in bunches of twenty-five sprays each, with a circle of foliage around the bunches. For field culture you should have the ground deeply plowed and heavily manured, to secure best results. It certainly pays as well as any hardy flower. It succeeds the best where it can have some shade. Valley in its wild state is always found in woodlands. I have pleasant memories of tramping through acres of it on many occasions in boyhood days. Some growers prefer beds four feet wide to single rows, and many of the finest sprays we have ever seen were grown in this way. Fall is the time to plant and the variety known as Fortin's is of exceptional excellence. C. W.

BARNES' BOX.

E. T. Barnes, at Spencer, Ind., is a large shipper of summer flowers, sweet peas, gladioli, asters and dahlias, being a particularly large grower of the two latter. He has shipped as many as 14,000 cut dahlias in one day. In his shipping business he found the need of a light, strong, quickly fastened and quickly opened box, and the accompanying illustration shows one which he devised for his own use and which he now has patented. The box is made of ¼-inch stuff, except the ends and overlaps, which are ½-inch boards. He uses these boxes in sizes up to 8x24x60 inches, and says he has found it much the best shipping box he ever has tried. The cover is quickly attached by wire or rope, as shown on the ends in the accompanying illustration, and simply clipping the wire or cord at one end releases the lid when it is to come off. After the flowers have been removed, the scrap wire easily holds the lid down for returning the empty. With the thin boards, the box has proved easily strong enough to stand long express shipments and its light weight saves express charges. In the halftone illustration two of these boxes are shown packed with dahlias ready for shipment.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Asters.

Asters are undoubtedly the most important of all outdoor grown annuals. Sweet peas are probably more popular, but they do not fill the place in the flower markets that asters do during the late summer months. Without the latter our markets would be bare of flowers in August and September, and retailers would be at their wits' end to know how to fill up their designs. An early batch is now getting well established in a bench where a carnation temperature is maintained. These will flower in early July, when they are very useful. The surface soil is kept frequently stirred and everything is done to encourage their growth.

It is too risky yet to plant out asters in our northern states. Quite frequently we get killing frosts late in May and it is unwise to put the plants in the field with the first spell of summer-like weather. We feel a natural impulse to push the bedding out ahead, but remember that asters are more tender than carnations and violets, and they will be better under sashes a week or two yet. A further sowing has just been pricked off and a still later batch is just through the soil. Grow all the asters fairly cool. In a moist, close atmosphere they will speedily become drawn and easily damp off.

The ground where your asters are to be planted should have been plowed and harrowed over by this time. If you are troubled with cutworms, give the land a dressing of lime and soot and run the smoothing harrow over the ground every few days. Constant stirring of the ground is decidedly distasteful to cutworms.

Fuchsias.

Fuchsias are useful in boxes or vases where they can have a little shade, but should never be planted in full sunshine. We cannot flower them the whole summer, as it is possible to do in Europe. Around Memorial day nicely bloomed pots of fuchsias will be found to be good sellers. Do not, however, deceive your customers about their blooming qualities any more than with the attractive show pelargoniums. Neither make suitable bedding plants and should never be recommended as such.

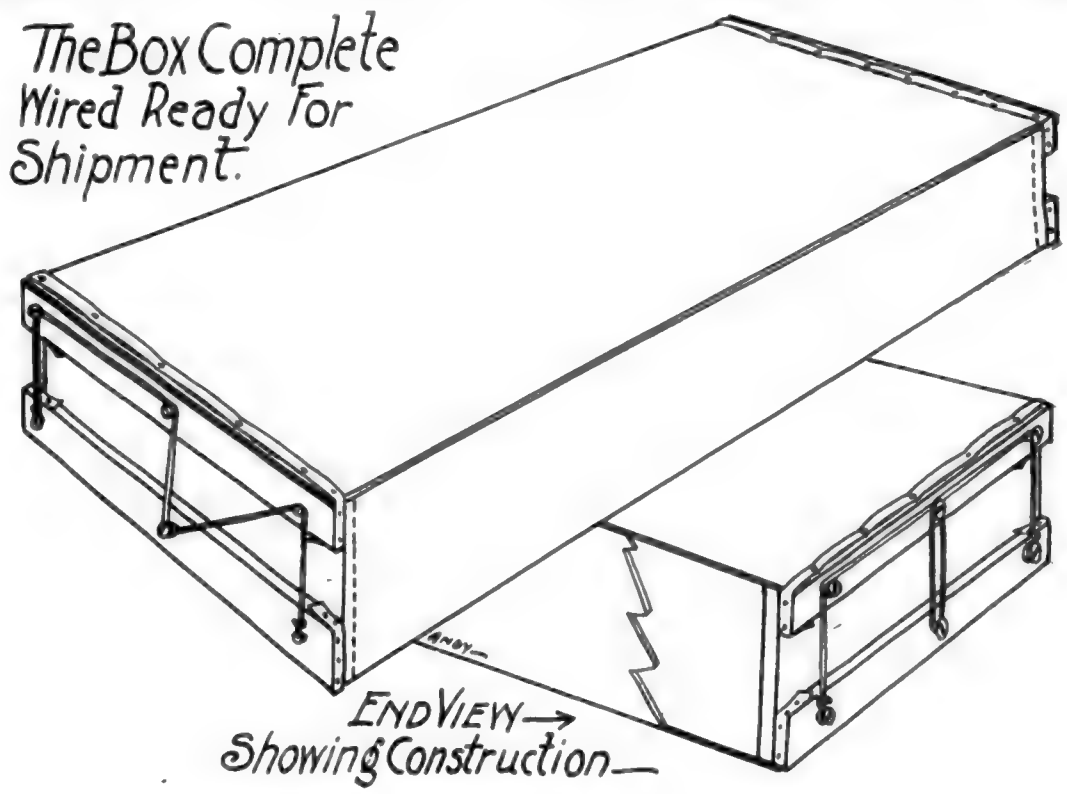
Fuchsias in pots make a useful addition to the rather limited number of summer flowering plants under glass. Any florists having window boxes to keep supplied will find them good standbys. Such plants must be kept pinched regularly and not be allowed to throw any buds until three or four weeks before they are wanted in bloom. Do not allow them to become potbound before shifting them on, and when in their flowering pots and well established, remember that they can be fed as liberally as chrysanthemums.

Bays and Boxes.

It is not usually safe to place sweet bays and tree boxes outdoors before the first week in May. After their several months' winter storage, they will in many cases take on a brownish tinge after a few days' exposure to the outdoor elements. A little light trimming of the worst looking plants may be necessary, but they will soon be making new growths and will hide any present imperfections. Irish yews, cupressus, bay and Portugal laurels, golden hollies and other evergreens wintered in storehouses should be placed outdoors at once. The longer they are kept under cover, the more they will suffer when exposed to strong sunlight. Last year a neighbor kept a number of these plants in a shed until the end of May. The day after they were stood outdoors a hot wave came along and the plants were badly burned, in spite of hosings overhead to counteract the heat.

Poinsettias.



The present is a suitable time to shake out and repot the poinsettias which have been resting in the potting-shed or under one of the greenhouse benches for the last four months. There is no advantage in starting the plants any earlier than the beginning of May, as the first cuttings even then will give rather leggy plants. Shake away all the soil from the roots. Prune back the tops and place in as small pots as they can be conveniently squeezed into. As a rule, 4-inch and 5-inch pots are large enough. Place in a warm house. Give a soaking of water and then keep a little dry until they break. They will do well in a house kept at 50 degrees at night, when once they start to grow. Rub the young shoots off with a heel when three inches long. These root more quickly than when the shoots are cut through with a knife.

Begonia Incarnata.

There is a much improved form of Begonia incarnata, well worthy the increased attention of florists who handle pot plants. It is a taller and stockier growing begonia than Gloire de Lorraine and the flowers are larger and a little paler in color. The plants are at their best from Christmas until February and bloom profusely. Now is the time to get cuttings. Plenty of thick, fleshy shoots are now procurable on plants pruned back a little after flowering. These cuttings will root quickly and, if kept on the move, will make nice stock in 6-inch pots for Christmas or New Year sales. This begonia roots like a weed and needs no fussing over. Anyone who is able to grow a geranium or hydrangea can manage it.

Pentstemons.

Pentstemons are usually treated as annuals, or propagated in the fall of each year, the cuttings being carried over in a frost-proof frame or cold greenhouse. As pentstemons are not at all tender, they can be planted out in advance of the regular bedding plants. They enjoy cool, moist weather and will do much better if bedded out now, rather than at the end of the month. There are now some remarkably fine strains of these procurable and they are worthy of increased culture. There are possibilities in their culture under glass for spring flowering, which some wideawake florist might try to develop. Treated like antirrhinums in benches, they should make a hit and at Memorial day would be specially useful.

Hydrangeas.

Mentioning hydrangeas reminds us that there are many who carry over specimens of these plants in tubs or large pots. These will be growing quite a little now, no matter how cool a shed or cellar they may be in. The impulse to stand them outside may be strong, but these hydrangea shoots are tender now and a mere breath of frost would ruin them. Be sure that if you do place your plants outdoors you have some facilities for covering them on cold nights. April proved an unusually cold month and, to make up for the excess of temperature during the winter, May is not unlikely to be cool also.

HYDRANGEAS FOR EASTER.

I wish to grow several hundred hydrangeas, pink and purple, in 4-inch pots for Easter, 1910, to produce one stem and one bloom. When should the cuttings be planted, and after being rooted what cultural methods must be followed to produce nice, low plants and large heads of bloom? Where can these cuttings be secured? H. C. H.

Four-inch is a rather small size of pot in which to grow sizable heads of hydrangeas, and we would advise you to give them 5-inch pots. The latter size you will find none too large. Of course, you can grow plants with a single head of bloom in 4-inch, but it entails great care in watering and more feeding to secure presentable stock. Cuttings should be rooted during May in an ordinary cutting bench, potted off into 2½-inch pots and later shifted into the 4-inch, in which you propose flowering them. Keep them under glass in either the greenhouse or coldframes, until they are well rooted in the 4-inch pots. Early in October gradually reduce the water supply; not too suddenly, or you may lose the plants. Your aim should be to gradually dry them until the leaves fall and the shoots are firm and of a nutty brown color. At this season keep them under glass to protect them from heavy rains, but give them all possible sunshine.

Easter, 1910, comes early, and to have your plants in bloom by March 27 they must have been thoroughly ripened and rested, for they must be started again by Christmas, and the middle of December will be safer. A temperature of 45 degrees is ample for a start; 60 to 65 degrees can be given later to hurry them, but hard forcing will mean leggy plants. An abundant water supply and feeding once in four or five days will be needed to keep the plants toned up. You can get suitable cuttings from any plants which are not flowering. If you have none, you can probably secure rooted cuttings from one of the firms who advertise this class of stock in the Review.

CAUSE OF SPLIT CALYXES.

Is the Common Theory Correct?

We have been bothered more or less with the splitting of the carnation calyx, and we believe there must be a reason for it. Though we have talked with a number of florists and have read nearly every article obtainable, concerning this subject, we have been unable to obtain any satisfactory explanation. We notice that the general opinion is that the cause is sudden changes in temperature. That may be the cause, but has any one ever proven it to be so? We are looking for information and are not merely skeptical. If anyone can give us any light on the subject, we would receive it gladly.

Everyone may have a theory, but to prove it is another matter. Our theory has not been proven, so it is open for criticism and we wish the weak points brought to light. Our carnation houses are not partitioned from each other, so we do not wish to experiment, as it might be rather expensive for a commercial grower, if the theory were proven false.

A Cue From the Botanists.

The theory is as follows: Botanists claim that flowers and fruits of ordinary plants develop as well in darkness as in the light, the reason being that the starch formed in the daylight, and stored in the chlorophyl bodies or green parts of the plant, is made soluble in darkness, thus allowing it to be imbibed by the protoplasm, furnishing food to the non-chlorophyl-bearing parts. On the other hand, botanists claim that the green parts of plants grow only in the light. Now then, if these statements are true and if we understand them correctly, the flower of the carnation develops at night, while the calyx grows only during the day.

To anyone who examines a split carnation, it appears as if the flower part had grown too rapidly for the calyx, since carnations may be found to be split even in the bud. What truth may be in the supposition is not for us to say.

Taking the botanists' theory concerning daylight and darkness, and our own observation of the split calyx, we would say that for some reason or other the flower part grows too rapidly at night or the calyx does not grow rapidly enough in the daytime.

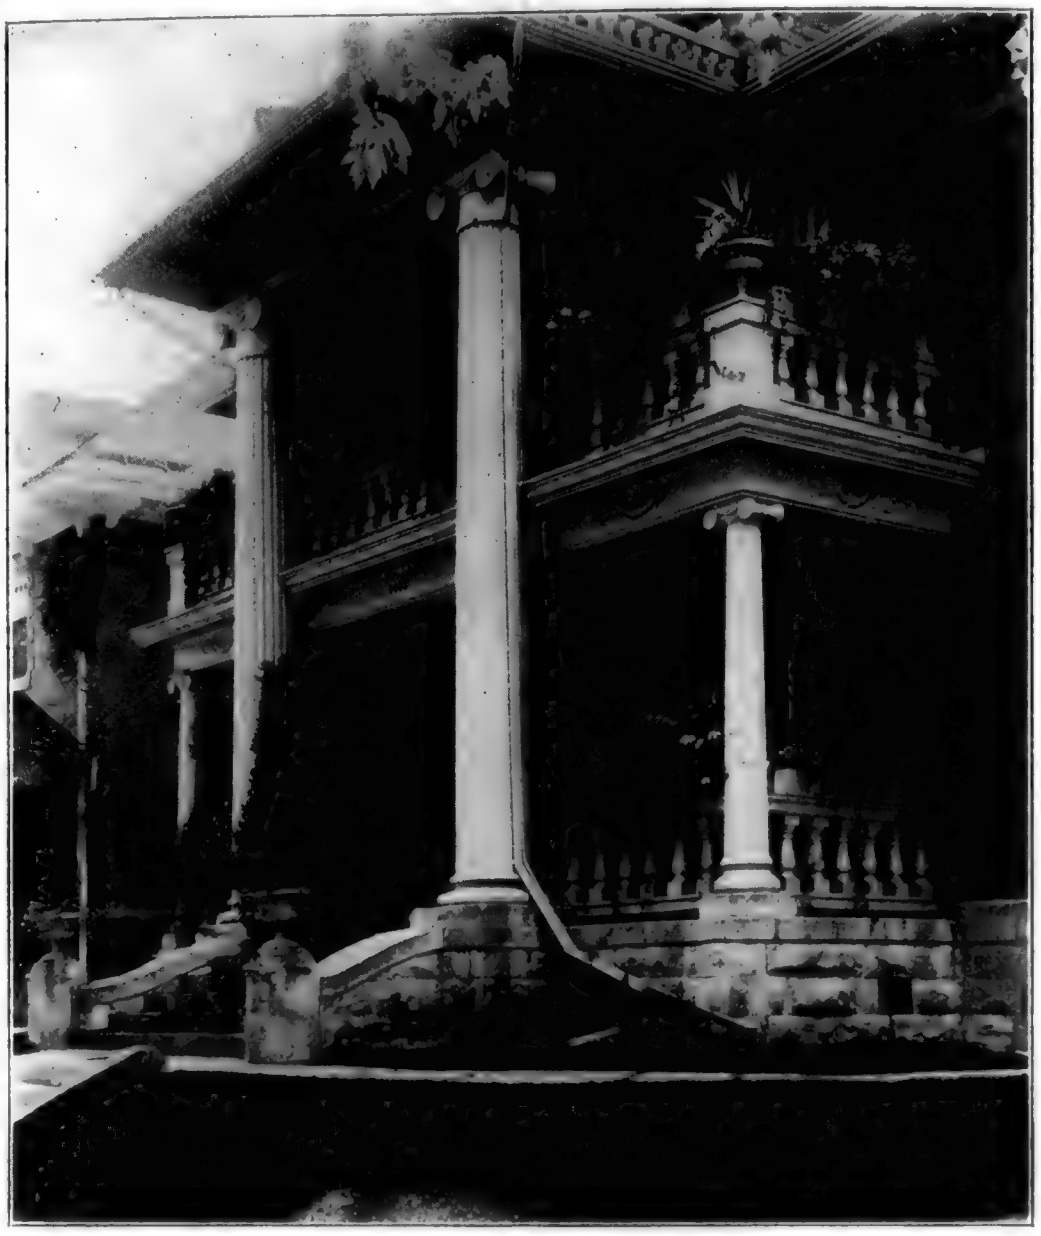
A Working Hypothesis.

For the growth of plants we naturally look to heat. It may be, then, that we have too much heat at night or not enough in the day, or both. Taking this as a working hypothesis, it only remains to be proven.

At present we keep our night temperature as near 48 degrees as possible, but to test the theory we believe the temperature should go down to 45 degrees about 1 o'clock. We believe the most natural way is to gradually lower the temperature from 1 o'clock in the afternoon till 1 o'clock in the morning, and then gradually raise it again until it reaches its maximum at 1 p. m.

In all probability this would be almost impossible to follow exactly; nevertheless, it gives us a mark to aim at. The day temperature could not be kept as regular as at night, but at 1 o'clock, if the sun were shining, it would reach its highest point anyway, that point depending on the strength of the sun. Even on cloudy days we believe the thermometer should reach at least 62 degrees.

These are merely suggestions and the theory is given for discussion. It may be entirely wrong, but it is given in the hope that it may start someone to thinking who will finally solve the problem of the split carnation, which is a puzzle to all florists. H. M. Harvey.



POLLAND'S CARNATIONS.

His Methods of Culture.

J. S. Polland, of Eldora, Ia., has some clearly defined ideas with reference to carnation culture, which he has expressed as follows:

"I find early spring cuttings are best, as they seem to grow more rapidly as the days grow longer. Choose strong, healthy cuttings of medium size from the most vigorous, healthiest and best blooming plants. Take a batch of these and trim them, and have a tub with strong lime water, in which immerse the cuttings for a half hour or so. Then wash them with soap suds thoroughly, and after they are clean rinse with clear water. This process cleanses them of thrips' eggs, or any disease that might afterwards give much trouble; it insures clean plants.

"The bench is washed and limed. The bottom is pretty close, so the cuttings will not dry out. Only one good watering, with a light overhead spraying on bright days, is needed until the cuttings are thoroughly rooted. Then pot or box them, using a good, fibrous meadow soil, without any mulch or sand. Do not pinch the young plants until about March 15, as plants are healthier if not pinched. Place the young plants in 3½-inch pots by April 15, if possible.

Planting Out.

"As soon as the weather is favorable, plant out in the field on spring-plowed ground, planting when the ground is freshly plowed, while it is fresh and moist. Plant twelve inches each way, using a wire line with marks every twelve inches. A hand plow can be used each way, just as a farmer plows his corn, only on a miniature scale.

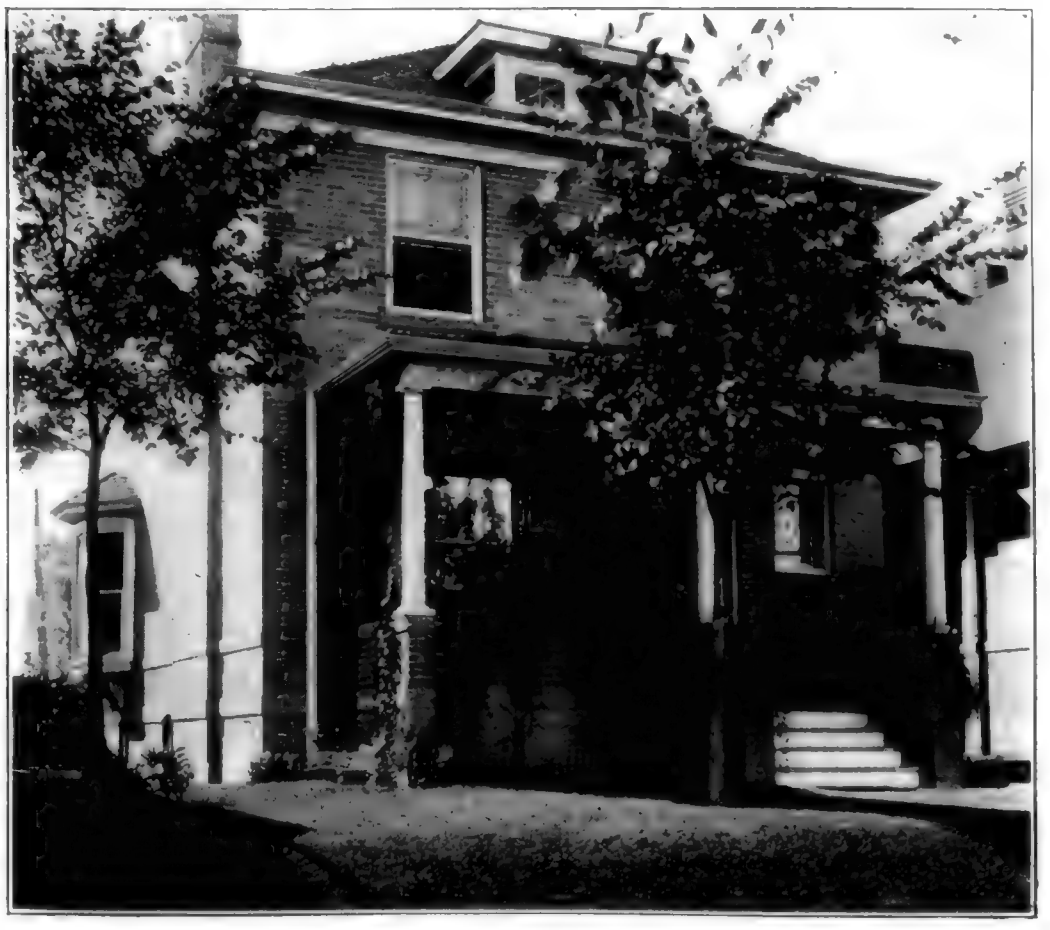
"Go through them after each rain and sometimes between rains, always pinching them back to shape the plants.

"The next process is to prepare the benches. It is generally best to commence this work early in July, so that all the plants may be benched during July. Mend and lime the benches, and cover the beds with thin blue-grass sod. On this fill up to level with a suitable carnation soil, which is prepared as follows:

Preparation of Soil.

"In early spring find, if possible, rich, fibrous, meadow blue-grass soil, brown in color, if possible. This idea was first procured from an old gardener whom I served under as a boy, afterward from the Dickson Bros., of Newtownards and Belfast, Ireland. Do not select this soil

[Concluded on page 25.]



GARDENING CONTESTS.

One of the best means of stimulating the window-box demand is the prize contest.

In recent years these contests have been extremely successful, whether conducted by a local newspaper, as frequently has been done, or conducted by any one of the numerous uplift associations. The biggest newspapers in the country have felt they were doing a public service by encouraging the use of window-boxes, etc., and have given liberally of their space and money. The Chicago Tribune for the last two years has conducted such a prize contest for its own account, offering several hundreds of dollars in prizes and stimulating the interest in porch and window embellishment and backyard planting throughout the entire city. The accompanying illustrations are from photographs showing the winners in two classes in a prize contest conducted last season by the Denver Post.

Wherever these contests are held they are of much benefit to florists. Not only do the people who enter contests buy stock for their boxes, vases and lawns, but the manifest improvement made in these properties stimulates entire neighborhoods. There is nothing more infectious than the gardening spirit. Let one householder in a neighborhood contract the gardening habit, especially the window-gardening habit, and soon the whole locality will be spading, and raking, and planting.

In numberless cities there now are civic improvement associations, most of which give more or less attention to floricultural matters. It would be a legitimate and profitable undertaking for florists' clubs to interest these improvement associations in backyard gardening, window-gardening and other contests of this kind, the florists to provide the necessary premiums in case the improvement associations are unable to do so. In case the improvement society will not take up the matter, it would be legitimate for the florists' clubs to organize such contests on their own account, but if the backing of some recognized public-spirited organization can be secured, the newspapers will give much more assistance; they are shy of booming business interests.

Porch Boxes at a Denver Residence.

BERLIN INTERNATIONAL SHOW.

It Was Really International.

It is not my intention to pen a full report of the grand spectacular effect of the great International Exhibition recently held in Berlin, as in its general aspect it was on similar lines to the majority of European exhibitions, but I shall only touch upon a few of its leading features and especially the novelties which it brought out.

Right here, however, it is worth noting that, unlike many so-called international exhibitions in Europe, it was international in character as well as in name. Contrary to the expectations of many of us who know the ropes pretty well as regards exhibits and exhibitors, there were splendid representations of the horticultural products of Belgium, France, Holland and England. Indeed, on no occasion have I seen such a varied muster of exhibits from so many countries, and I have visited nearly every international horticultural exhibition in Europe during the last ten years.

Exhibits From Holland and Belgium.

Holland came out particularly strong, with a flower garden of bulbs. This was promoted by the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association. About 20,000 hyacinths were arranged in beds by F. G. Goemans, and the display was quite a unique feature of the show. Rhododendrons from Boskoop, Holland, eclipsed all others shown, C. B. Van Nes & Sons taking the lead, with Pink Pearl and White Pearl.

Belgian exhibitors, notably Louis Van Houtte, Pere, Ghent; Flandria, Bruges, and E. Vercauteren, Ghent, well maintained the credit of their country, with azaleas, palms, dracænas, aspidistras, begonias, etc., Phœnix Rœbelenii standing out preëminently.

France, England and America.

France was represented by Vilmorin, Paris, with a magnificent strain of cinerarias, and a collection of gerberas from R. Adnet, Cap d'Antibes, were a perennial source of interest, surpassing anything ever seen in this line for extent of varieties and range of colors.

England's principal exhibits were orchids from Charlesworth & Co., carnations from C. Engelmann and G. Lange, and zonal pelargoniums from Cannell & Sons.

America was also in the running. Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, kept the flag flying by showing Nephrolepis exaltata Scholzeli.

German Exhibits Predominated.

Naturally, German exhibits predominated. I will only give a few of the leading lines before passing on to the novelties. The best roses were shown by Adolf Koschel, Charlottenburg. Azaleas are cultivated extensively around Dresden, and T. J. Seidel, of that city, created a magnificent effect with robust, well flowered specimens. F. Henkel, of Darmstadt, who has the finest collection of aquatics I have yet seen, greatly interested the public with a remarkable exhibit, and the veteran, W. Pfitzer, of Stuttgart, showed new and rare begonias, pelargoniums and Myosotis Ruth Fischer.

German firms have given us some remarkably fine forms of Primula obconica, both as regards size of flowers and richness and diversity of colors. Notable among these firms is G. Arends, of Ronsdorf, and he and others contributed in their richest style.

I could go on and name many other good things, but have selected only a few points which, in my opinion, will be of most interest to readers of the Review. Two more well-known firms and their exhibits, however, should be included: Otto Beyrodt, of Berlin, who contributed a Japanese garden, and L. Spath, Berlin, who brought conifers, rhododendrons, etc., in profusion from his extensive nurseries, and arranged them in a really picturesque fashion.

German Novelties.

Viewed from a commercial standpoint, novelties were few and far between. Many things comparatively new came before the notice of the general public of Berlin for the first time, but live and up-to-date traders were disappointed in their quest for real novelties.

However, there were a few exceptions. Rose Natalie Boettner, a cross between Frau Karl Druschki and Goldelse, of a creamy white shade, seemed quite promising, as did Hydrangea hortensis Frau Gertrude Linz, from E. Braunnemann, very dwarf and remarkably free; has the look of a good selling market plant. Arends' strains of Primula obconica created a most favorable impression, as also did the rococo strain of cyclamen from J. C. Schmidt, Erfurt. Impatiens Holstii nana Liegnitzia, from O. Otto, Liegnitz, a very floriferous, dwarf growing type, should prove as useful as it is beautiful.

To conclude the best of the German novelties, I will mention an azalea from T. J. Seidel, named Herme, with semi-double, clear pink flowers, the petals margined white. It was current talk in the exhibition that it had been purchased by an American firm.

Other Novelties.

Belgian novelties included Dracæna Bruanti variegata, from E. Vercauteren, Ghent. This I had previously noted in the nurseries. The greenish-golden foliage is effective and gives variety to decorative schemes. It should become fairly popular and is, at all events, worth a trial. Vriesias are extensively used as commercial decorative plants in Germany and France, and De Smet, of Vinderhoute, Ghent, exhibited two or three new things in this line.

Holland's best novelty was a rhododendron of the Aucklandii type, and flowers in the way of Pink Pearl, the petals beautifully waved on the margins. Mr. Watson, of the Kew Botanic Gardens, who was one of the judges, promptly secured this for the Kew collection. It was exhibited in a collection of hybrids by the enterprising Boskoop firm, C. B. Van Nes & Sons.

Among novelties I must also include the gerberas from R. Adnet, France, and nephrolepis from Henry A. Dreer, both referred to above. Bee.

INSUFFICIENT WATER SUPPLY.

I am sending you with this letter a box containing a leaf of a plant called Bird of Paradise by the lady who owns it. I wish to know if the name is correct, also what is the trouble with it. You will see by the leaf that the little green leaflets are dropping off. They do not discolor much before they drop, but keep dropping until the whole plant is a skeleton, when it dies. This is the fourth plant this lady has had, and while this one has lived longest, it is now going the same way. This plant has blossomed and at present it has five seed pods on it. There is no gas in the house. It has always been kept in the parlor window, away from the strong sun. It has been watered by having the pot set in a dish of water and is never watered until the earth is dry and crumbly on top, which is this lady's method of caring for her plants. She has beautiful ferns in the same room and no trouble with them. Her soil is always good, as her husband is a market gardener and usually prepares her soil. B. M. R.

The leaves, as near as I can tell from the specimens received, are of one of the acacias, either A. lophantha or A. Arabica, gum Arabic. Acacias want cool treatment and must never be allowed to get at all dry at the root. The cause of the leaves turning yellow was undoubtedly an insufficient water supply. These plants succeed best plunged in a sunny spot outdoors from the end of May until early October. Let the plants have a room, if possible, with a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees, rather than 60 to 65 degrees, and water abundantly in the future. C. W.

OBITUARY.

John A. Shellem.

John A. Shellem, one of the veteran growers at Philadelphia, died May 3, after a long illness. Mr. Shellem had a range of upwards of 60,000 feet of glass, growing both cut flowers and pot plants, and became widely known in the trade a few years ago through the work he did with seedling roses. The variety, William R. Smith, originated under his hands, being a cross of Kaiserin and Maman Cochet.

The funeral will be held Thursday, May 6, and will be largely attended, as Mr. Shellem had a large circle of friends outside the trade as well as in it.

Adolph Frost.

Adolph Frost, the oldest florist of Cortland, N. Y., died in that city April 29.

Mr. Frost was born January 4, 1831, at Bischofswerder, west of Prussia, Germany. His father was superintendent of the king's woods. Mr. Frost entered the German army and became a corporal of heavy artillery. He served through the Crimean war and was also in the army that marched through Paris. Later he was discharged as totally disabled, but recovered.

December, 1857, Mr. Frost landed in New York city, having made the journey on a sailing ship in seven weeks and three days. He started out on a New Jersey road toward a German settlement, on foot, and with 25 cents in his pocket. He eventually became superintendent of the farm and country home of Thomas B. Stilman, at Plainfield, N. J. It was then that he learned to be a florist. There he met Fannie Elizabeth Maxson, of Scott, N. Y., a cousin of his employer. They were married December 5, 1864. The next spring he took the position of gardener at the Schermerhorn place in Homer. It was there that Adolph Frost, Jr., his only son, was born. Later he located at Cortland and became the superintendent of the Rural cemetery and had a greenhouse near where the receiving vault now stands. Later he located on the south side of Tompkins street and built up the present business, which for the last few years has been conducted by his son.

Mr. Frost suffered a great deal from asthma last summer, but got better in the fall. Then in October he was stricken with typhoid fever. His son and daughter also had the fever at the same time. The son recovered fully, but father and daughter remained feeble all winter. A short time ago he was taken with Bright's disease and heart trouble, and he died very suddenly, of heart trouble.

The funeral was held May 2, from the family residence, and was largely attended, for Mr. Frost was not only one of the oldest but most highly respected business men of the town.

Jacob Schneider.

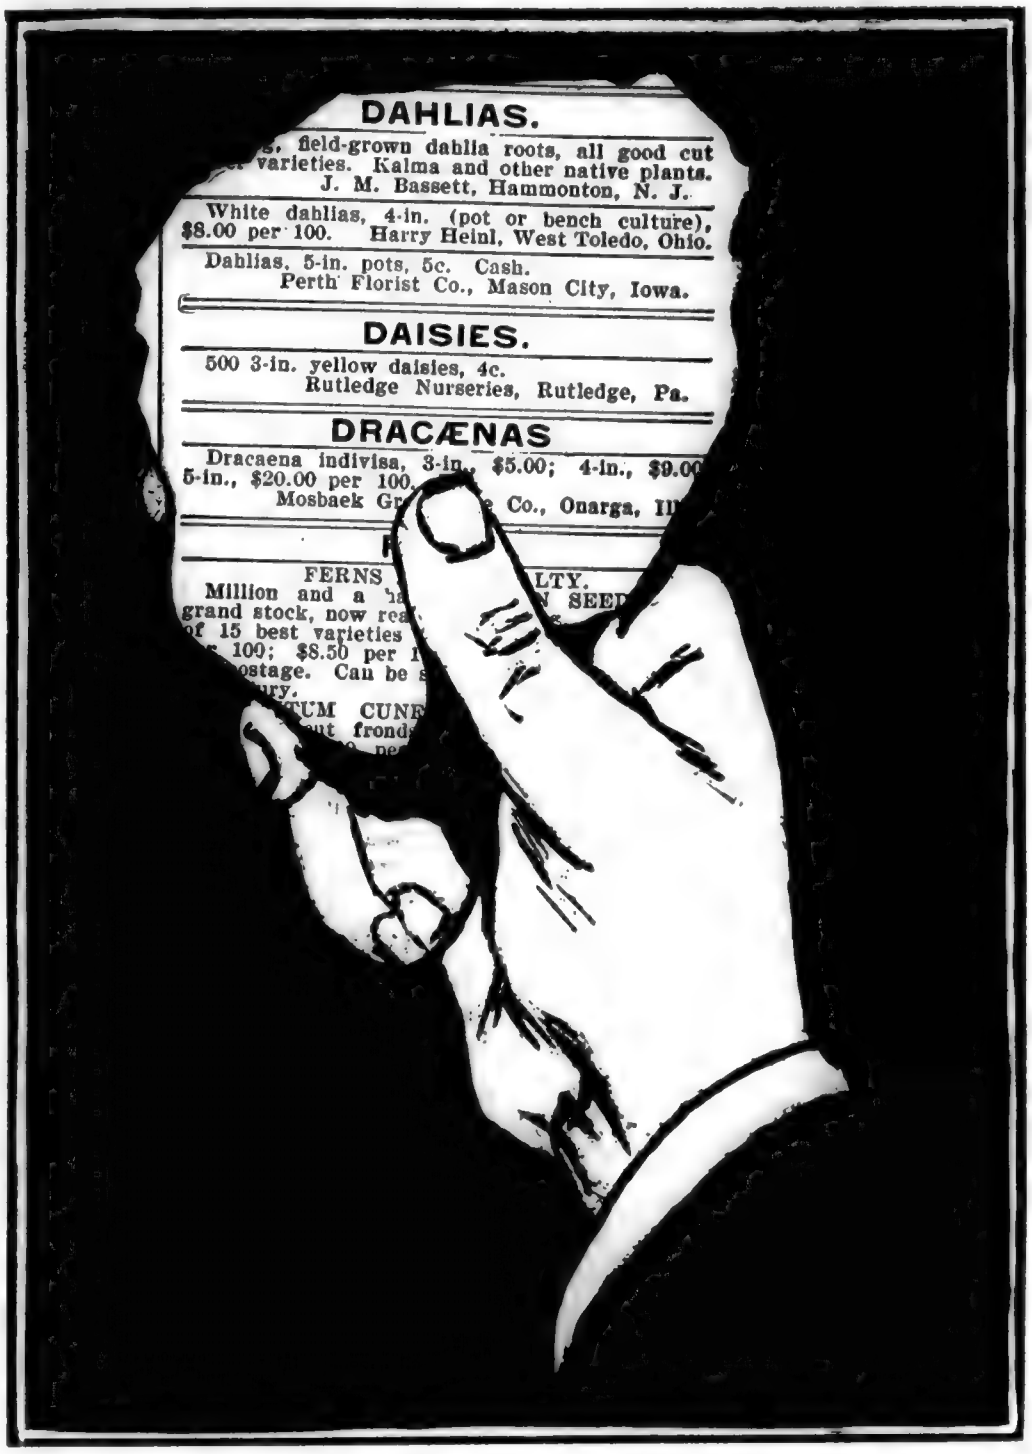
Jacob Schneider, a grower of carnations for the Chicago market, died May 5, after a brief illness with pneumonia. He was a young man in robust health a few days ago. His establishment, containing about 30,000 feet of glass, is located on Ridge avenue in Rogers Park, and is devoted entirely to carnations, the product being sold by E. H. Hunt. The place was entirely rebuilt last year. Mr. Schneider leaves a wife and two children.

A. C. Schroeter.

A. C. Schroeter, of Bayonne, N. J., of the firm of Schroeter & Son, died Sunday, May 2, from a paralytic stroke, at the age of 70 years. He was one of the old-time florists and grew for the New York market during the last thirty years. He was highly respected.

John M. Handte.

John M. Handte, of Lisbon, O., died recently, at the age of 72 years. Before entering the florists' business he had been engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was prominent in Masonic circles throughout eastern Ohio.



Herman Dreyer.

Again we are called upon to chronicle the sudden death of one of the best known plant growers of Long Island. Herman Dreyer was able to visit his greenhouses and attend to business up to noon Wednesday, April 28, and within two hours pneumonia had claimed its victim, even before medical aid, quickly summoned, could reach him. He took a severe cold at the obsequies of John Scott, less than a week before, but serious illness was not anticipated, and Mr. Dreyer evidently did not realize his condition and thought no special care was needed. His sudden taking away was a great shock to his family and his host of friends. Seldom has a larger demonstration of sympathy been seen by the florists' trade, as many being at the funeral services Saturday, May 1, as were at Mr. Scott's obsequies a week before, and the floral offerings were equally numerous and beautiful. A beautiful broken column of valley and roses from the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, made by David Clarke's Sons, and the handsome design by Myer, of sago leaves, valley and violets, from the New York Florists' Club, were especially beautiful. Of both of these societies he was an honored member. He was buried with Masonic honors, and a great concourse accompanied his remains to the cemetery from the residence on Jackson avenue, Corona, L. I.

Mr. Dreyer leaves a wife, daughter and two sons. His mother survives him, and several brothers and sisters. He was born in New York city, September 21, 1859, and early adopted the profession of a market gardener, after some years' experience with his father. He commenced his present business in 1889, and had only last year completed his handsome new residence and the splendid range of houses on his new property at Corona. No more perfect stock was seen anywhere than Mr. Dreyer distributed last Easter. Weeks before delivery every plant was sold. The sympathy of all is extended his bereaved wife and children. He was good-hearted, generous, kind, devoted to his family and everybody's friend. Mr. Dreyer is the third prominent member of the New York Florists' Club who has passed away in the last few weeks. Messrs. Hallock, Scott and Dreyer were men of great value to horticulture, and each has left an impress upon the history of floriculture in the east that will never be forgotten. Death loves a shining mark, it is said, and the club and the Growers' Asociation have been sadly bereft since the year began.

J. Austin Shaw.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

Mount Clemens, Mich.—A. Von Boeselager is building an addition to his greenhouses.

Basking Ridge, N. J.—Charles Roberts is having a large greenhouse built on his property at Madisonville.

Ridgway, Pa.—H. W. Girton, of the Mountain Park Greenhouses, will build another greenhouse this spring.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

OUR visiting friends, the Holland nurserymen, these days wear "the smile that won't come off." Long live the queen and the princess!

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE English horticultural chemists have devised a number of insecticides, which, spread upon and watered or spaded into the soil, are said to be deadly so far as all pests in the soil are concerned.

MOTHERS' DAY.

Miss Anna Jarvis, the mother of Mothers' day, writes the REVIEW: "I trust this Mothers' day, when flowers are needed for Shut-ins to almost the full extent of the supply, that prices will not be raised so that for future celebrations some other badge will be necessary for this day."

The REVIEW does not believe in putting prices, of anything, at any time, above the point where people will buy, and buy freely. Don't kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

MORE THAN WERE NEEDED.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

The advertisement did the work—more orders than we could fill.—H. O. Hannah & Son, Sherman, Tex., April 30, 1909.

The tritomas advertised are all sold and many orders had to be turned down. They came all the way from Massachusetts to Salt Lake City and Texas.—C. S. Ridgway, Lumberton, N. J., May 3, 1909.

SALES IN DEPARTMENT STORES.

A department store here has been having sales of plants at various times, offering two-year-old nursery-grown (?) roses at 10 cents, and plumosus and Bostons out of 3-inch pots at 10 cents each. What is it advisable to do under such circumstances? The plants look to me like bench rose plants, and although we do not sell many of these, still I do not like to see them selling asparagus, etc.

Someone who has had this experience will confer a favor by suggesting what to do in a case of this kind. It seems to me that the wholesalers who sell to department stores are not doing the square thing by the retailers, who are their main support.

J. H. CAIN.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

In the weekly reports of the mercantile agencies for the last seven days of April there again was to be found evidence of the widespread revival in general trade, this being reflected most clearly in the increase of about thirty-two per cent in bank clearings in all leading cities during the week. For April the clearings exceeded those of last year by nearly forty per cent.

An increased wave of prosperity is sweeping over the United States, according to that usually accurate barometer of prosperous conditions—the gross postal receipts. The receipts at fifty of the largest cities for the month of March show an increase over the same month last year of $1,178,921, or 14.50 per cent, the normal rate of increase being about five per cent. Similar statements show increases for January last of 6.09 per cent and for February of 4.73 per cent over the same months of last year.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, Ind., register Carnation Shasta. Parentage, pink seedling crossed Enchantress; color, pure glistening white at all times; bloom well formed and three to three and a half inches in size; extra free and early in blooming and does not crop; does not split its calyx. A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

A FLORIDA FERNERY.

On the Atlantic coast line, 140 miles south of Jacksonville, situated on Lake Griffin, is Lake Shore Fernery, owned and operated by Col. Thomas Windram and C. E. Hawkins, who have dug and chopped out of the virgin forest a five-acre tract and planted it in plumosus and Sprengeri. The farm consists of fifteen acres bordering on Lake Griffin, and the soil is white sand underlaid with clay. It is two feet above the lake and makes an ideal spot for the growing of this stock.

Cypress posts, eight feet high, are set 8x16 feet apart and covered over with 1x3 cypress slats for shading. The Skinner system of irrigation is used. A large gasoline engine and pump force the water from the lake. Commercial fertilizer is spread between the rows and raked in. Leaf-mold is used for mulch. The market for the product is found as far north as Detroit, Mich., east to New York and west to St. Louis.

The writer spent two days with the manager, Mr. Hawkins, at his home on the farm, and feels impelled to express his admiration for the grit and staying qualities of the man who has dug and chopped his way in this dense hummock land, risking his life, which may be snapped out any minute by the poisonous rattler or the deadly moccasin, both of which infest these lands. The gnats and red bugs by day and mosquitoes by night also help to make life miserable, especially to a northerner.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week was one of the most peculiar this market ever has experienced. Stock accumulated heavily the first part of the week, so that by Wednesday, April 28, a condition of serious glut obtained. But the week was one of unseasonable cold, dark skies, heavy storms and snow, with the result that the latter part of the week receipts were curtailed to a remarkable extent. The weather, however, shut off demand in almost the same proportion it did the supply of stock, with the result that prices for days did not advance, although the market was in a condition which would have produced a decided jump with a normal demand.

After stagnating for three days, business began late on Saturday and prices started up. All values advanced, but carnations more than any other flowers. This week opened with supplies still light and prices decidedly better than they were a week ago. Demand is only fair, and it is extremely doubtful what the immediate future of the market will be.

still are plenty of all varieties. Quality generally is good, in spite of the dark weather, and crops are on so heavily that even an all-day blizzard May 1 produced little apparent effect. Beauties are in good demand, and as the spring crop from winter rested plants is being cut, the quality is especially good, particularly in the medium-length stems. Killarney is in heavier crop than any other variety.

Some growers say the reduction in the supply of carnations was as much due to the passing of a crop as to the unseasonable weather, and these think it will be some little time before there is again an oversupply of this flower. But others say a few days of sun will bring on another heavy cut. The bad weather resulted in an unusual proportion of splits, and the prices at which these must be sold pulled down growers' averages.

Sweet peas continue one of the best selling items on the list. The supply is not so large as recently, and the best flowers are making fine prices. A few fair Rhinebeck violets still are coming in, but the season for them is about over. Pansies are in request. Iris in yellow and blue sells well. The supply of Harrisii and calla lilies is not as great as it was, and better prices are obtained. Valley has had a few days of brisk sale. There still are good jonquils.

The early peonies have met with no special demand; Old Red seldom does. The fact is that peonies are not specially wanted until Decoration day, when they are the popular flower and their season fairly opens. The belated season will cut a good many growers out of Decoration day, but there will probably be peonies for everyone, because of the large numbers which will be cut by the southern growers.

It sometimes is impossible to fill orders for smilax, and as high as 25 cents a string is asked. Fancy cut ferns are now quoted at $4 and up.

Damage by Storm.

The heaviest storm the Chicago greenhouse community ever has suffered swept over the city at a little after six o'clock April 29. The storm appeared to be in two sections, one south of the city and one northwest. The Rose Hill district escaped. There was only a little scattered hail; wind did most of the damage.

The greatest loss was at the Wilmette plant of H. P. Gerhardt, where seven houses and a stable were practically demolished.

The brick stack of N. C. Moore & Co., at Morton Grove, was struck by lightning and fell on the pump room, demolishing the building and contents, including a new gasoline engine that had never been started. The sleeping quarters of the men were also destroyed, with a part of one greenhouse, and of course flying bricks broke a lot of glass. Heat and water were shut off several days.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, lost about 300 boxes of glass, the west ends of both ranges suffering from the wind. It broke in for as many as five or six bars on some houses that afterward had to be boarded up. One new unglazed house was blown out of plumb.

At the new plant of Hoerber Bros., which Nick Miller is building under contract at Des Plaines, the sashbars for five 300-foot houses were up. Glazing was to have begun May 3. Four of the five were blown down, and the fifth required a good deal of strengthening. The material was not much broken, so the loss is labor and time.

Heim Bros., of Blue Island, were hit by hail. Their loss was heavy.

At Park Ridge Fred Schramm lost about ten boxes of glass. August Priebs lost a few panes in the gables of two houses. A report that Ben Gruppe had sustained a serious loss proved unfounded.

At Hinsdale, Bassett & Washburn were hit by the tail of a hail storm and lost forty to fifty boxes of glass in their south houses.

At W. L. Palinsky's, a row of hotbed sashes were blown over onto another row, breaking considerable glass and spoiling some stock.

At Des Plaines the river flooded H. C. Blewitt's place so he had a foot of water in the greenhouses for three days. Charles Wiffin also was flooded, but not so badly.

At Frank Oechslin's some glass was broken in the south end of the houses, but more damage was done to the sashes that were blown about by the gale.

At Garfield park the wind broke 600 panes of glass 24x24. The circumstances seem to indicate that most of the missing glass was not driven inward, as some might suppose, but was forced outward by the violent currents or pressure of air which the storm created inside the building. One evidence of this is the fact that, though the wind blew from the northwest, the west side of the big, high palm house was but slightly injured, as compared with the rest of the building. Besides damaging the conservatories, the storm broke a lot of hotbed glass, by sweeping the sashes from their places and scattering them about the grounds.

April Weather.

Weatherwise, April was a remarkable month. There were only three clear days, fourteen partly cloudy and thirteen cloudy. The rainfall was 7.73 inches, which is nearly three times as much as normal. April 29 two and three-quarters inches of rain fell, practically a whole month's precipitation in one day. The temperature was not as much below normal as most people think. The official weather man says the mean temperature was 45 degrees, against an average of 46.3 degrees as the mean for the thirty-nine years the weather office has now been keeping records. But the fact is, the month started warmer than usual, but got colder and colder instead of warmer, as it ought to do.

Various Notes.

Julius W. Niesen, who for four or five years has run a retail store at the old Holden stand, 753 Forty-seventh street, filed a petition in bankruptcy May 4. He scheduled liabilities of $3,055 and assets of $326.

The George M. Garland Co. says Poehlmann Bros. Co. advises that its truss-roof houses withstood the recent high winds better than did the houses erected with purlin posts.

Peter Reinberg planted out quite a number of carnations last week, but they are on light soil and neither the deluge, the snow nor the frost appears to have done them any harm. Most growers are still waiting for spring before putting their plants in the field.

E. C. Amling says last week was a specially bad one for the growers. Not only did many of them suffer breakage by the storm, but cuts were extremely light and the weather so bad business was decidedly dull, while the growers had to use coal at the winter rate.

The Eaton Flower Shop moved to 273 Dearborn street May 1. The new store on Jackson boulevard is in course of remodeling.

The Atlas Floral Co. gave up its store at 37 Randolph street April 30. They had been in the store at 35 Randolph street for over a month.

L. Coatsworth was able to sit up Sunday, May 2, for the first time since his illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Kill had Robert Rahaley and his bride from Detroit as their guests last week.

C. W. McKellar is receiving large shipments of the Cattleya Mossiæ from the east. He has had red gladioli for some weeks, but not until this week enough to go around.

Jacob Schneider, of Rogers Park, died May 5, after a short illness with pneumonia.

Gus Alles, right-hand man in the store of Wietor Bros., has been on the sick list.

Mrs. C. Frauenfelder underwent a serious surgical operation at Garfield Park Sanitarium April 29.

A. L. Randall returned May 4 from a ten days' stay on his farm in Michigan. He says the season is farther advanced on the other side of the lake than it is here, but is still backward.

Beginning May 1, the Wells-Fargo Express operates on the St. Paul railroad instead of the U. S. Morton Grove, Forest Glen and other towns supply a large volume of cut flower shipments on this line.

Lord & Burnham Co., the New York greenhouse construction firm, opened an office in the Rookery building May 1, in charge of George Sykes, as was announced in this column of the REVIEW February 18.

Vaughan & Sperry were not able to get into their new store May 1, remodeling having been delayed by the glaziers' strike. They had planned to continue their stand in the Growers' Market for a time, in any event, having a lease there with some months yet to run.

Miss Furlong, formerly with Weiland & Risch, is now stenographer and assistant bookkeeper for the E. F. Winterson Co.

John Mangel was 45 years of age Sunday, May 2. The son of a Spartan mother, he has become liberal in all things.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he now feels safe on the peony crop for Decoration day, it being now so late there is little chance of injury to their stock in the southern end of the state.

The Foley Mfg. Co. says that its business in greenhouse material to May 1 in 1909 has been practically double what it was in 1908, due to better business conditions and the lower prices of glass and pipe.

Ernest Oechslin, who was accidentally shot a few months ago, has not yet fully recovered, but is getting along nicely.

The Warwick Flower Shop, on Forty-seventh street, has a neat hanging receptacle for air plant in the form of colored china money bags. Julius Schnapp imported them direct from Germany.

Club meeting tonight, May 6, at the Union restaurant. The attendance is steadily increasing. Better find out why.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is doing a big business in bay trees, both shipping and locally.

Henry Stuttle, of Batavia, the inventor of a patent clamp for joining boiler tubes for greenhouse heating, was a visitor last week.

Bowling.

Friday evening, May 7, the bowlers will have a handicap contest for prizes. The scores made April 30 were:

OMAHA.

Heavy Loss by Hail.

Omaha was visited by heavy hail April 28, the worst we ever had. All the north side florists suffered badly, and April 30, to make it historic, a cold wave set in and the temperature dropped to 25 degrees above zero. Charles Ederer bought $180 worth of muslin to cover his houses, and others used this and other materials, but little did it help on account of the high wind. Thousands of dollars' worth of stock was damaged, on top of the great loss of glass.

Hess & Swoboda lost between 40,000 and 50,000 feet of glass.

A. Donaghue puts his loss between 25,000 and 30,000 feet of glass.

Charles Ederer suffered a breakage of 18,000 to 20,000 feet.

Paul B. Floth reports his loss as between 8,000 and 10,000 square feet.

Paul Paulson found 8,000 out of 10,000 feet broken.

Geo. Zimmer lost about eighty boxes.

S. B. Faulkner counted up a breakage of 2,000 square feet, and Krug's park also lost about forty boxes of glass.

The Sprague Street Greenhouses lost 1,000 feet of glass.

J. W. & E. S. Arnold lost from 8,000 to 10,000 square feet of glass.

F. Blondirs reports 2,000 feet of breakage.

Geo. Joslyn found it took forty boxes of glass to reglaze.

It is a sad sight to visit these greenhouses. It will take months of work to replace the glass and the money loss is thousands of dollars.

Nebraska has not seen such a cold spring for the last thirty-eight years. Warm weather will bring out a good many roses and carnations, but perhaps too late to do much good.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

May day seems to have asserted its right to sunshine and decent weather, after the most disagreeable April ever known in this vicinity. Notwithstanding snow, rain, sleet, hail and frost last week, we fortunately escaped the widespread destruction which the west and south have suffered, and we hear of no serious damage here from the winds and storms, except the general demoralization in every branch of the business and especially in the retail and wholesale cut flower sections. All prices tumbled, and the average return to the growers was unseasonably low. It now seems that present prices will be likely to prevail until Decoration day, with the clean-ups of the surplus that must come with the better weather, at even lower rates, as is usual at this season of the year. Since a week ago there has been no change worth noting. Violets may be eliminated from the list, for there are few arriving, and quality is not deserving of honorable mention. You may write "Ichabod" over against them, for their glory has departed. All the lilies are abundant and the prices lower. Lilac from the south is delayed because of the freezing weather. Arbutus now comes from local sources. In a few days the lilac and dogwood and apple and cherry branches from Jersey will make summer-like the retailers' windows, and winter will be forgotten.

Roses just now are exceptionally good, the best to date the spring has afforded. The promise for the continuance of quality is sure, but that the market will be flooded is none the less a certainty, and before the week is over thousand lots probably will be at the buyers' option. Beauties have held fairly well, owing to the many weddings and dinners, the auto carnival and many important funerals where they were used profusely; 20 cents would buy the best of them, and few Brides and Maids, even in small quantities, went above 6 cents, while the average of each was near 15 cents and 4 cents. All the novelties in roses, as well as Richmond and Killarney, felt the strain.

Carnations sell at 2 cents and under. Few can be sold at 3 cents. Quality was never better. Cattleyas are still in wide demand, and prices are firm. Gardenias also hold well, and are as popular apparently as ever. Sweet peas, when perfect and long-stemmed, command good prices. The common stock goes at any price offered, and there is always too much of it.

Various Notes.

The Bowling Club, finding Monday evenings unpopular, has about decided to change to Friday evenings and the next session will likely be May 14, and the usual Monday afternoon bowling on club nights will be omitted after May 10. The club is suffering from innocuous desuetude. R. J. Irwin, of the Skidelsky & Irwin Co., Philadelphia, was present and bowled as well as usual. Messrs. Berry and Faulkner also ran strong. The rest are evidently resting or moulting, or else are already sure of having a winning team at Cincinnati. Wonderful harmony and enthusiasm these New York bowlers demonstrate! No wonder we are proud of them.

tive business Saturday, May 8. R. M. Schultz, of Madison, N. J., will be associated with the management. The store is one of the finest in the locality.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Irwin, of Philadelphia, are visiting New York.

A fire at W. H. Siebrecht's place in Astoria, Sunday night, May 2, which started near the boiler, destroyed the entire cut of valley and other bulbous stock ready for the early Monday market, and burned the floors above the cellar in the greenhouses, doing considerable damage.

Harry Hoffmeir has just returned from Atlantic City, where his greenhouses are filled with fine bedding stock and where he will give his personal attention to the summer trade.

The funeral of Herman Dreyer and the death of A. C. Schroeter will be found reported in the obituary column on another page.

The plantsmen are looking forward hopefully to Decoration day and, if anything is left, the auctions will make short and profitable work of the surplus. With a daily sale by the Fruit Auction Co., and the usual Tuesday and Friday auctions at Elliott's and Cleary's, an enormous amount of stock is being distributed, and at better average prices than ever before realized. Ambrose Cleary's big store was completely filled with bay trees last week, and this week the Fruit Auction Co. is offering a big consignment of the same. The Julius Roehrs Co. and Bobbink & Atkins are receiving their shipments, reaching up into the thousands, and many other prominent growers, including Anton Schultheis, of College Point, are importing bay trees in quantity, so that it seems everyone who wishes will be able to enjoy the summer under his own vine and bay tree, while all the large hotels evidently consider their outside decorations incomplete without them.

Monday evening, May 10, the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club takes place at the rooms in the Grand Opera House building. Any plants sent in care of Secretary Young will be properly staged for exhibition. An interesting address prepared by Charles Allen, of Floral Park, because of his continued feebleness will be read by Patrick O'Mara. The subject is "Plant Development."

The auto carnival was postponed until Monday, May 3, because of the abominable weather. A better day could not have been chosen. The parade started at 2 o'clock. One division was entirely devoted to decorated cars. Many of the leading florists had been engaged, and the artistic effects exceeded all expectations. The prize winners will not be determined until later. Last week Herman Warendorff won first prize for the best decorated building, using smilax and roses, for the White Steamer Auto Co. Mr. Warendorff had the decoration of three autos for the parade.

Sunday, May 2, the Prospect park greenhouses in Brooklyn were opened to the public for the annual spring display, the finest the park officials have ever made. Many thousands of visitors enjoyed the sight.

Long Island is to have an "Old Home Week" festival, beginning June 12 and lasting until June 17, the day of the opening of the great Queensboro bridge. This bridge opens up a section of the big city where dozens of florists reside, and adds enormously to land values.

for the added white man's burden, but he will have to grin and bear it. To get even with the trust some of the wholesale florists have been buying ice shares at low rates, and will unload at a profit sufficient to pay the extra charges and leave considerable velvet over. It is a good rule that works both ways.

John F. Marsden, of Far Rockaway, is building a greenhouse 33x253, to be devoted to carnations. His stock is handled by M. Goldfarb at the old Thirty-fourth street cut flower market.

George Sinns, with John King Duer, had some novel designs in the new styles of hats in the firm's display window last week, trimmed with natural fruit and flowers.

The first box of cherries received in New York this season from California was sold last Thursday by the Fruit Auction Co. and brought $21. The persuasive voice of John P. Cleary was at the psychopathic end of the transaction.

Fred Keller, son of J. B. Keller, of Bay Ridge, and for the last three years with the Julius Roehrs Co., has purchased the Zobel greenhouse plant at Albany, N. Y.

Samuel Burnett, the seedsman, has been ill at his brother's residence in Jersey City Heights for two weeks. The doctor said appendicitis, but fortunately an operation has not been necessary, and at last accounts he was improving. Jack Hunter, with this house, has also been ill, and the heavy labor and responsibility of the spring business has been carried by George Burnett.

There is a rumor that one of the uptown seed houses contemplates removal to Barclay street, already famous for the number of its great horticultural houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoffmire, of Newark, met with a painful accident last week by collision with a trolley while driving, but were not seriously injured. Mr. Hoffmire is on the office staff of McHutchison & Co.

George Baker, bookkeeper for Ford Bros., has been seriously ill at his home during the last two weeks.

Gunther Bros. moved to their new store at 110 West Twenty-eighth street May 1, and are much pleased with their added room and conveniences. They are decorating lavishly and adding many electric lights, with a view to permanency of location.

There were many prizes, the Lorenz family annexing both the firsts, Mr. Lorenz with a score of 187 and Mrs. Lorenz with 130. Other high scores, not in the prize contest, were: Donaldson, 200; Meisem, 191; W. S. Siebert, Sr., 183. Astoria will surely be represented by a team at the S. A. LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Trade for the last half of April was fairly good, but stock of all kinds is so plentiful that quite a lot finds its way to the trash box. Roses, carnations and valley are in fairly good demand, with few calls for violets. Stocks and other early spring cut flowers are moving fairly well, but the supply is too large to handle.

The florists near the cemeteries are busy planting ivy and roses. Pot roses are not moving so well as formerly, but ivy is selling better than ever.

Most of the carnation growers have all of their carnations planted in the field, although a good many will be grown inside all summer.

Various Notes.

Fred L. Schulz has opened his handsome new store in the Weissinger-Gaulbert building at Third avenue and Broadway. Several of the local florists sent bouquets of their best stock, with best wishes for a prosperous future.

Jacob Schulz has his greenhouses well stocked with spring plants and is ready for the planting season to open. He is also cutting quantities of ten weeks' stocks that are fine.

Adam Heitz is quite busy these days planting ivy in St. Louis cemetery.

Wm. Walker is cutting a good many roses and carnations and other spring flowers, which he disposes of at his retail store.

Robert Miller has planted out 12,000 carnation plants, which are looking fine.

CARNATIONS.

from a swampy place, as that would be sour. Neither must it be taken from a hill, but try to find a level space where the grass is green and the soil is fibrous. This, in my opinion, is one of the principal points of our success with both carnations and roses. Put this soil in a stack, grassy side downward, with one-third old rotten cow manure. Mix as early as possible and do not turn until ready to use; then mix as put on the bench.

"The above described soil has been used for all carnations that I have as yet grown, with the exception of Harlowarden. For Harlowarden I use a much firmer soil; that is, I take out all the rough sod and use only one-fourth rotten manure, well mixed. The proper heat for this carnation, I find, is from 38 to 40 degrees. Try this once, and if you don't have a surprise, then I will be much mistaken. You will have blossoms as large as the largest Lawson, with 36-inch stems, as straight as a willow. I have as yet not been able to supply the demand for this carnation at $1 per dozen all winter.

"I plant eight inches apart, and water to keep my plants on the damp side. In clear weather I keep a little air on nearly all the time, even if I have to turn on another line of steam. This is essential to keep the plants in proper health.

Exterminating Thrips.

"Now, just a few words concerning insects, as it is to every florist's benefit to use his utmost endeavors to keep these down. I find that thrips are a nuisance, and any one who has them need not keep them. I had them once, and made short work of them. I picked all the infested blooms and threw them in the furnace, then picked all the salable blooms and put them away. I then slaked some lime lumps, and when slaked scattered a thin, even coat over my benches, then applied the hose with a strong spray, using my fingers as a sprayer, going up the bench in such a way as to wash every plant, and as the little pests fell the lime did the rest. This I repeated two days afterward, and that was all. The lime water on the benches burnt them as they fell."

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market in this city has taken a wholly unexpected turn for the better, the closing days of April and the opening days of May being in delightful contrast to the preceding week. This was due partly to the cool, cloudy weather of last week and the no less cool but bright weather early this week, and partly to the fact that the crops are going off, the excessive production immediately following Easter having passed its height. There has also been an excellent demand, stimulated, no doubt, by the low prices at which flowers have been offered.

Cattleyas, gardenias, lily of the valley and sweet peas have been in most active demand. The supply of the best grade of these flowers was at times insufficient. Cattleyas, about equally divided between Schroederiana and Mossiæ, were decidedly scarce, prices being well maintained; indications point to an increased supply before these notes appear. The same is true of gardenias to a less marked degree. Valley was in excellent demand, but really high grade sweet peas sold astonishingly; one wholesaler received 10,000 May 3 at 8 a. m. and within a half hour all were sold.

Carnations took an upward turn, the supply decreasing as the demand improved. Prices did not advance, but the average price returned to the growers will be much better. Curiously enough, what might be termed the anticipatory demand for carnations May 5 is due to the placing of heavy advance orders for Mothers' day, May 9. REVIEW readers will recall that Mothers' day was first introduced in this city last year, everyone wearing a white carnation in honor of mother, "your mother, my mother, the best mother in the world." The success of this innovation was remarkable, the idea taking instant hold of the public at large. Great as was this success last season, it promises to be eclipsed this year, several advance orders for large numbers of carnations having been placed at prices that remind the wholesalers of Christmas or Decoration day. It is probable that the supply of white carnations will be unequal to the demand, so that the colored varieties will share in the popularity.

Roses have not felt the upward tendency in the market, Beauties being especially depressed; the supply is too large for the demand. The better grades of Richmond, Killarney and Mrs. Jardine have sold well at moderate prices, but the poorer grades have been neglected. Daisies have been in fair demand. The last shipment of violets, the wholesalers say, came in early this week.

Asparagus plumosus is selling, but not as well as in April. The demand for smilax has fallen off.

Jersey lilac has made its appearance in quantity. Outdoor stock is a factor in nice decorations and occasionally in boxes of loose cut flowers, but they are hardly a promising factor.

Various Notes.

Charles M. Keegan made an offer to settle with his creditors at 25 cents on the dollar. Meetings of the creditors were held April 28 and 30, with the result that the offer was increased to 50 cents. Mr. Keegan less than a year ago bought the lease, good will and fixtures of the William Graham Co. store at 104 South Thirteenth street, from the receiver, David Rust.

H. Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer will sail on the Prinz Friedo Wilhelm May 6 for a business trip to Europe.

Mr. Kennedy, of Foster & Foster, Palm Beach, Fla., has been spending several days here looking over ground at Atlantic City in regard to opening a branch store.

Miss Messinger, with Daniel E. Gorman, Williamsport, Pa., was here for several days.

Henry F. Michell reports the heaviest demand for seed potatoes, beans and peas in the history of his company.

George E. Campbell, of Flourtown, will build two houses about 21x150 each this season. It is understood that Mr. Campbell will try My Maryland and add to his present varieties Richmond and Killarney.

The roses sent by Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J., to Berger Bros. are a model in neatness of packing. This is a point that should receive more attention from our growers at large; much of the condition of perishable cut flowers when received depends on the packing.

H. M. Weiss & Son, Hatboro, Pa., have completed the second half of their 300-foot house, giving them fifty per cent more space in their model carnation range.

Lilley & Upton are receiving freesia of good quality, a rarity for May.

Myers & Samtman expect to plant 10,000 My Maryland this season.

H. H. Battles says that the apple blossoms are finer this season than he has ever seen them, due to the cool, damp weather at a critical stage in development.

Harry Yomer has opened a flower store in Manayunk.

Segers Bros., Lisse, Holland, have sent out their annual booklet with suggestions for avoiding failure in bulb forcing.

Henry A. Dreer, Riverton, N. J., is experiencing a heavy demand for pot grown perennials.

The Joseph Heacock Co. is growing an increasing number of specimen kentias in tubs, believing that the decorators want them.

M. Rice & Co. have been extremely busy, with many orders for staple as well as Memorial day supplies.

The Collingdale Greenhouses have prepared a large stock of chrysanthemums for this season's business.

The city retailers have begun work on what Robert Kift calls "The City Beautiful"; geraniums, Vinca variegata and birch bark window-boxes are the principal factors.

Walter P. Stokes has made a hit with his lilies at the Floracroft Greenhouses; the method of growing bulbs in benches as carnations are grown has come to stay.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are filling many original designs from their factory. A beautiful horseshoe with metallic foliage and flowers with the words "Good luck" went out this week. PHIL.

SOME POPULAR PERENNIALS.

Many Sorts Claimed as Best.

There is no class of ornamental plants that can equal the hardy herbaceous perennials in popular favor or in merit. Some of them continue in bloom for several weeks or months; others are only on display for a short time, but make up for it by the grandeur or delicacy of the flowers which they produce. They can be secured in every gradation of color and height, and a little care in selection of varieties will result in a constant succession of flowers from April to November. People are beginning to realize the fact that it is a waste of time, energy and money to plant their flower beds over each year, when it is possible to have permanent beds which will improve each season.

If an attempt were made to say which perennial is the best, there would probably be a dozen named by various people as their favorites—and there would be reasonableness in the arguments in favor of each. For instance, there are the beautiful columbines, whose champions have organized a columbine society. Some one would plead for the goldenrod, common but beautiful, our national flower. We would also hear from the funkia, hemerocallis, coreopsis, lobelia, delphinium and others. But there are a few that are indispensable—which, in fact, have a popularity that puts them in a class by themselves. These are the perennial phlox, the German iris and the herbaceous peonies.

The Phlox and the Iris.

The value of the phlox lies in its fragrance, its showy colors and its long blooming period. Most of the varieties now obtained from an up-to-date nurseryman are of what is known as the "silver dollar strains." The individual flowers are each actually larger than a silver dollar, and grow in immense, compact heads. Some are the purest white, both tall and dwarf growing varieties. There is a very choice one named Miss Lingard, white with a clearly defined center. One is like the mountain laurel; another is deep flesh pink. One of the most popular is a very brilliant geranium red, named Coquelicot. We have also several other shades of red, and purple and lavender as well. The earlier sorts are in bloom by the Fourth of July, and they all continue in their glory till they have had several hard frosts, along in the latter part of October.

The iris, whose very name signifies "rainbow," has the most wonderfully delicate range and combination of colors of all our favorite flowering plants. Many people prefer them to the orchids, which cost several times as much and need so much care. The Japanese, Spanish and Siberian iris all have their charms, but in this region are not nearly so satisfactory as the so-called German iris. Some are taller than others; some have a delightful orange blossom odor; they all have from half a dozen to fifteen or twenty flowers on each stalk.

The Rainbow Colors of the Iris.

The two most common colors among flowers are white and yellow; the rarest are brown, orange and violet. All these shades are obtained in the iris, together with some of the richest lavenders and purples. Some have two distinct colors, such as blue and white, yellow and plum purple, or yellow and brown, while others are all one uniform shade of violet, yellow, lilac, pink, lavender or white; but there is always an indescribable delicacy about them, which is rarely found in other plants.

The irises will stand any amount of heat or cold, and are not particular as to the kind of soil they are in. It is a singular fact that, though originally water plants, they do not require a wet location, but do equally well in a light, dry, sandy loam. They make desirable flowers for cutting, and as the lateral buds will all develop in water, they will last for a week or more in a vase. If they were not so fragile, they would be very popular among the florists as a cut flower, and even as it is they are sold in large quantities by those who can secure them without having them shipped, many florists now having their own iris bed near their retail stores. The blooming season covers the month of May and runs over into June. As with most perennials, it is better to plant them in fall than in the spring, because they begin to grow so early that spring planting checks them more or less.

The Peony, the Rival of the Rose.

The last and best of the three indispensables is the peony. The peony is often spoken of as the "rival of the rose," and it is true in more ways than one. It rivals it in delicacy of color, in fragrance, in form of flower and in popularity. In hardiness, in freedom from pests and diseases, and in ease of cultivation it far surpasses the rose. As evidence of its popularity, note—

1. The great attention given to it by growers and propagators in Europe and America; scores of dealers, hundreds of acres, nearly 2,000 varieties known by name, the result of years of labor in propagating.

2. The great prices that are paid for roots of new and choice sorts by both amateurs and commercial raisers.

3. The formation of a national society. The only other flowers to have such attention are the chrysanthemum, carnation and rose.

4. Several peony shows held lately have attracted much attention from the papers and public.

Peony nomenclature is in a muddle, several different sorts being on the market under the same name. The American Peony Society is conducting, at Cornell University, a test of many hundreds of plants contributed by different growers in this country and Europe, to straighten out this confusion of names.

Good Varieties of Peonies.

Some of the best varieties are:

Festiva maxima, very large, pure white, with the fragrance of a rose; has a few carmine marks in the center. This variety has been on the market for over fifty years and is still considered the best.

M. Jules Elie, pink, is a fitting companion for the above and is just now in great demand.

Golden Harvest, for planting on a private lawn, is without a peer, as it is the freest bloomer. Outside row of guard petals light pink, balance yellowish, with red markings on a few of the petals near the center. Very showy.

Queen Victoria is considered very fine by florists, because it ships and stores better than most of them. It is a full white.

Modele de Perfection, an immense, massive flower, like a big chrysanthemum, set on a wide base of guard petals. Color, clear, deep pink.

Edulis Superba, deep pink, very early and one of the most fragrant.

Mons. Barral, a fragrant, dark rose pink; massive.

Delicatissima, one of the most in demand of the pink, especially among florists. Delicate, light shade, of fine form and fragrance.

Felix Crousse, one of the so-called bomb shaped varieties; a rich, deep red.

Purpurea Delachei, one of the darker reds, with a metallic luster, like some of the very dark roses. The richness of the shade is emphasized by a few yellow stamens.

Richardson's Rubra Superba, still a different shade of dark red, but without stamens; a late bloomer.

This short list, taken from hundreds of choice varieties, is at best only a suggestion, and will serve to illustrate the range of color and habit it is possible to secure. After carefully comparing the different sorts and discarding as many as possible, a commercial peony grower cannot get along with less than 100 or 200 varieties; some growers have even 400 to 500.

Culture of the Peony.

As for the culture of the peony, refer to the monograph on peonies written by

Wm. A. Peterson, of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, Ill. On the cultivation of the peony he says:

The Chinese herbaceous peony originated in Siberia. Its tuberous roots were used by the Tartars as an article of food.

Peonies grow in all kinds of soil, but do best in a deep, rich, rather moist loam.

A clay subsoil, if well drained, is very beneficial when blooms are desired, but the tubers ramify more in lighter soil if grown for propagating purposes.

In preparing the bed it should be thoroughly trenched two or more feet deep, working in a great quantity of good, rich cow manure, as peonies are gross feeders.

The ground should be kept well cultivated and an annual top-dressing put above the plants in November, which should be forked into the soil the next spring.

Peonies should have a liberal supply of water at all times, and especially while in bloom.

Liquid manure, when applied during the growing season and at a time when the ground is dry, gives good return, both in the growth of the plant and size of the bloom.

In planting, the crowns should be set two inches below the surface.

In transplanting, it is a good plan to remove all the old earth, so as to start with fresh, unimpoverished soil next to the roots.

The flowers produced on small divided plants are apt to be imperfect, but, when thoroughly established, a plant will continue to bloom, if undisturbed, for twenty years.

During the period of blooming an inconspicuous wire support is desirable, as a heavy rain often beats down the flowers.

The Peony's Usefulness.

The period of blooming for herbaceous peonies ranges from the middle of May through the month of June.

They grow from one to three feet high and are therefore suitable for planting in front of shrubbery, along driveways, and are especially pleasing when entering into a distant vista.

When planted in a border with fall-blooming perennials, such as phlox, funkia, etc., the peony's rich, glossy foliage is very effective.

The single flowering sorts are not so popular as the double ones, for they do not keep as long when cut, and fade more rapidly when on the plant.

Peonies, like most tuberous plants, when dormant, stand considerable exposure and can be shipped long distances with safety.

Bear in mind that small plants need two or three years after transplanting to recover their natural vigor. Until firmly established in the soil, they will not produce as many blooms or as large.

The peony is of great value both to florists for cut flowers and as a landscape feature. The possibilities of the latter have not yet been appreciated. The foliage is a rich, clean, dark green color, giving a combination in contrast that would be difficult to find in any other group of plants.

This family of perennials is never attacked by any insects, animals or fungous diseases; neither do they require any covering during the severest weather; in fact, they are among the most hardy, showy and easily grown of all the garden flowers. B. E. GAGE.

TO CLEAR OUT RED SPIDER.

I have a house that had single violets in it, which is infested with red spider. I wish to put asters in the house at once. What is the best way to get rid of the spider, the house now being empty? W. C. P.

The house being clear of all plants, the easiest way to thoroughly clean out red spider and any other pests is to burn sulphur in it. Hydrocyanic acid gas will effect the same purpose, but the sulphur burning is the simplest method. Use one or two iron pots or kettles, more if the house is large, place some red ashes in each and cover with flowers of sulphur. Then lock the doors and do not enter until next day. C. W.

PROPAGATING BOXWOOD.

I am sending a sprig of boxwood. Kindly let me know how and when it can be propagated outside; also as to the trimming of it in different shapes. Can it be trimmed like California privet, or must it be trimmed with more care?

E. W. C.

The dwarf form of Buxus sempervirens, which is so much used for hedges, is readily propagated by division of the plants. The best time for this work we have found to be the end of April or first week in May, just when the plants are starting to grow. Dig up a portion of any old hedge you may have. Pull the plants in pieces with your hands. Use a pair of shears in order to trim the shoots to a length of from six to ten inches. Never mind whether they have roots on or not, but it is an advantage to leave a portion of the stem which has been buried below ground. Wood above ground is much slower in rooting.

Our plan is to lay a line and, after firming the ground thoroughly, to nick out a narrow trench with a sharp spade, just wide and deep enough to bury the cuttings up to the leaves. To keep them of a uniform height, it will be necessary to plant some deeper than others. If the weather is at all dry, give the little trench a soaking of water, and be sure to tramp it firmly on both sides, as it is impossible to root box in loose soil. If an immediate hedge is not desired, regular nursery rows can be planted in a similar way. In an ordinary season few cuttings will fail to root.

Cuttings of the taller growing, or tree boxes, are better taken in fall; pieces six to seven inches long are about right. Insert these firmly in a frame or in boxes in a cold greenhouse, planting them out in nursery rows in spring.

Box trees stand and require much closer shearing than bays. The best time to trim is just when growth has fairly started, which in your section would be about the middle of May. Use a pair of ordinary hedge shears for this work.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business remains about the same as last reported. At times some of the stores have been working past closing time to get out all orders; then, again, there have been some dull days. All in all, the florists who do much funeral work are having a good wind-up to the season.

Stock of all kinds has been none too plentiful, which also is a good indication.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rahaley have returned from a delightful honeymoon, spent mostly in Chicago. They received some fine gifts from friends in the trade.

The Hielscher Wire Works are working overtime on hanging basket orders.

Current Comment.

Margaret O'Rourke last week walked into the Providence river at the Allen's avenue dump. She had been acting queerly of late and it is supposed that her mind had become unbalanced. She was about 35 years of age and had been employed for several years by Michael Sweeney at his greenhouses on Broad street.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business is not quite so brisk in the stores, at least in the cut flower department. There is plenty of good stock to be had at reasonable prices, and Bride, Bridesmaid and Liberty roses are selling cheap. Carnations are plentiful, particularly the whites, which are blooming freely at this time. Sweet peas are beginning to show the effects of the heat and are hard to move at any price. Violets are about over, and what are around are poor. All kinds of greens are scarce, especially plumosus.

The cold weather has held back the bedding plant trade, and has also retarded outdoor vegetation, so that those who handle bedding plants expect to have everything in a rush a little later. There were several heavy frosts last week, which did not do any damage to fruit trees, which are in bloom. A number of florists have finished planting out their carnations. Young stock of Cochet roses seems to be exceptionally scarce this spring.

Various Notes.

Chas. H. Cook has started the erection of his dwelling on his new place. He expects to erect several new greenhouses this summer.

Philip B. Welsh, of Glen Morris, Md., is erecting three new houses of modern construction, with iron gutters and eave plates. Mr. Welsh grows mostly for the wholesale market.

J. Bolgiano & Son have started their annual spring sales of plants and bulbs and, from the present outlook, this will be their banner year. They handled over 8,000 pansies in one day. Each day

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

It appears there will be enough sweet corn.

Nothing but talk has come out on the tariff this week.

The plebeian potato is putting on as many airs as any member of the family.

Visited Chicago: J. W. Jung, aster and salvia seed grower at Randolph, Wis.

The ground is still so cold and wet that the peas are only just beginning to go out of the warehouse.

There was an all-day snow storm at Chicago May 1. Counter trade was held in check, but has been on the boom this week.

Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., Copenhagen, have removed their store and offices from 12 Stormgade to the new building at 20 Longangsstræde.

If the Harrisii lily has fallen into disrepute, the Bermuda bulb industry is not wholly lost. One boat last week brought 9,642 cases of onion bulbs.

The growers of onion sets at Chicago have had only a day or two at a time that they could plant and are making strenuous efforts this week to get their seed in the ground.

M. B. Gray, formerly treasurer and manager of the McMorran-Gray Co., seed growers at Port Huron, Mich., announces that he has sold his interest in that firm and severed his connection with it.

H. Frank Darrow reports that Philippe de Vilmorin, of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, has been recently appointed by the French government a councilor of the foreign commerce of France.

It is reported that Robert Sydenham, Ltd., the Birmingham, England, seed house, sold enough sweet peas in packets in twelve consecutive weeks this season to make the average sales for the period 8,000 packets per day.

The action of Braslan vs. Pieters came up in the Superior Court at San Francisco April 23, on a motion for a change of venue from San Francisco to the court at Hollister, which was not decided. Both parties are preparing briefs.

From London come reiterated reports of "a very considerable shortage in the crop of kentia palm seed this season, more especially in Forsteriana. The consequence is a smart rise in price, the later prices showing an advance of nearly one-third over previous offerings."

At the end of last week heavy storms occurred over almost the whole country, from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic seaboard, doing a large amount of damage to crops already planted and putting spring work still farther behind, not only by reason of the interruption, but by making it impossible to get on the ground for some time after the storms ceased. This week summer temperature followed the storm over a large part of the country.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, have been established for ninety-one years, their seed business having been founded in 1818.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 356, "Peanuts," by W. R. Beattie, assistant horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry.

The government seed laboratory will doubtless find little Poa compressa in the samples of Poa pratensis, this year, for at current prices there is not much more reason for mixing Canada blue grass with the Kentucky blue grass seed than there is in the corn belt for adulterating pumpkin pies. Last year was a different year.

The amount of stock carried over in the hands of cucumber salters is lighter than for years, not that sales of the finished product have been heavy, because they have not, but stocks are pretty well cleaned up, especially in the east and south. The call for seed of the pickling varieties of cucumbers has been good, but some buyers have held off because they felt that prices would come down. There is, however, little prospect of this, and as planting time approaches there is likely to be a scramble for seed with the right reputation.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending April 24 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto...	10	$ 121	Grass	11	$ 241
Anise ..	105	1,363	Hemp ...	230	1,213

Coriander..	186	957	Rape	329	2,512
Cummin...	250	2,083	Other ...	...	5,129

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $14,527.

IMPORTS OF SEEDS.

In framing up the new tariff law, the first thing that the committees wanted to know about seeds was what quantities are imported and the amount of duty paid. The Treasury Department supplied the figures for the year ending June 30, 1907, as being the latest available, as follows:

Total value of imports of all dutiable seeds, $1,359,870.10; duty paid, $287,605.42.

Total value of imports paying thirty per cent as "seeds not otherwise provided for," which include garden seeds, $360,513.15; duty paid, $108,153.96.

Total imports of non-dutiable seeds, $5,048,938.35.

It is of interest to note that of cauliflower, on which the tariff committee of the American Seed Trade Association recommended a duty of $1 per pound, there was imported in 1907 a total of 5,665.7 pounds, having an invoice value of $28,283.95, or an average value of $4.99 per pound.

The total invoice value of flower seeds imported in 1907 was $150,926.51.

Of sugar beet there was imported in 1907 8,505,214.23 pounds, valued at $572,050.34, or 6.7 cents per pound.

CRAWFORD SELLS OUT.

M. Crawford, of Cuyahoga Falls, O., has sold his entire stock of gladiolus bulbs to Mallory & Bridge, of Lake Mills, Wis., who will grow them principally for cut flowers for wholesaling in Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis. Mr. Crawford has been growing the gladiolus for forty years. He now retains two bulbs of each variety for breeding purposes and will devote his attention to raising seedlings. Speaking of his sale and plans, Mr. Crawford said:

"My collection was grown in Shiocton, Wis., in 1907. Mallory & Bridge saw them all the season and were charmed with them. I am confident that they will be surprised at the excellence of this collection. It is unfortunate that we have no accepted standard by which the merits of a variety may be estimated. I think the Department of Agriculture is working on this.

"It is a pleasure to see how popular the gladiolus has become. We are only beginning to appreciate it. Bulblets and small bulbs are being bought everywhere. And yet but few people know what points of excellence are included in a good variety. So there is a great future for really fine stock. Few things yield more satisfaction than the growing of seedlings, and I expect to continue in the work."

A BIT OF TRADE HISTORY.

When Otto Kirchner, of Detroit, appeared before the committee at Washington to argue for specific duties on seeds, he prefaced his remarks with the assertion that D. M. Ferry & Co. import seven-eighths of all the seeds imported into the United States, and the following bit of trade history:

"D. M. Ferry & Co., whom I am representing, and who are the largest importers of seeds—I am informed that they imported practically seven-eighths of all the seeds imported into the United States—for twenty years prior to March, 1903, entered their seeds, which they had grown for them under contract in Germany, France or England, at the invoice price. They knew of no other market price. They had been inquired of by the special agents of the Treasury Department, they had submitted their books, their contracts and their invoices, and everybody was satisfied up to that time that these goods had been entered at their proper valuation. Then came a special agent of the Treasury and called attention to the fact that the, say Danvers onion, seeds had been imported at four or five different places in the United States approximately at the same time at different figures, and the claim was made that Ferry & Co. had imported these goods, though at their invoiced price, at less than their market value. Now, then, an investigation was had. I represented them in the matter, and after a full hearing the appraiser at Detroit sustained them in the position that they had taken, that there was no other market value than the invoice price.

"The collector, not of his own volition, but acting under special instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury, appealed from that appraisement to the Board of General Appraisers. Before the final hearing before the Board of General Appraisers I had an interview with Secretary Shaw, then Secretary of the Treasury, and the whole matter was gone over with him, and he was satisfied that these importations had been made, that there was no other market value than the invoice price, and therefore Mr. Waite—Judge Waite, a former judge in Michigan, and then and now one of the Board of General Appraisers—sustained the Detroit appraiser in his action, and gave his opinion in October, 1903, and from that time until now these importations have been entered at the invoice price.

"And now, Mr. Chairman, this identical question that was thrashed out so fully five years ago is again raised. And why? Because new men have got into the business, new men have been employed by the government. They do not understand it, and are unable to see why these seeds should approximately at the same time be imported into the United States at different prices.

"Now, my clients say that this is a pretty hazardous business. They do not know what other price to enter these goods at other than the invoice price. They cannot do as some importers do, simply out of fear to make values for the purpose of importation because they do not know what to do, and so they stand in fear and constant terror of having their commercial integrity impugned."

Wm. Hagemann & Co.

The business formerly carried on by Mr. Wm. Hagemann (who died on April 3rd, 1909) is being continued at the same address as heretofore under the management of Mr. Paul Kase, for many years associated in the business] with Mr. Hagemann, and Mrs. Wm. Hagemann.

PARIS GREEN IS CHEAP

An announcement of marked interest to the horticultural and agricultural interests of the country was the reduction in Paris green prices made April 28 by the close circle of manufacturers who practically control the production. The opening for this season is at 17 cents, which compares with 21½ cents, the price set a year ago and in force until the present cut.

The 4½ cents reduction is explained

Cut Dahlia Flowers Pay

If You Have the Following Varieties

After considerable consideration and observation, and "talks" with the trade, we have decided to offer the following Dahlias to florists this season. Our retail Catalogue, which will be mailed free, contains a larger collection, but few are superior to the following and all are good size, divided clumps that have been field-grown and are strong and healthy.

Price of all the below-named varieties of Dahlias, large divided clumps or roots, except where noted, 10c each, $1 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $70 per 1,000.

Jack Rose. (Decorative type.) The variety Jack Rose is rightly named and is a florist's Dahlia, "from the ground up." The color is similar to the Jacqueminot rose, and is a unique color in the Dahlia, which lights up beautifully at night. The habit of the plant is stocky, very free-flowering. Producing its blooms in great profusion, upon erect, long stiff stems, making it invaluable for cutting. You cannot afford to be without it, if you sell cut-flowers. Price, green plants, ready April 1, 1909, 50c each, $5 per doz., $35 per 100.

Decorative Dahlias

Sylvia. Best described as a Giant Nymphæa, being stronger, larger and deeper colored. Flowers 4 to 6 inches in diameter, of fine form and full to the center, which is white, shaded to soft pink on the outer petals. One of the best cut-flower varieties.

Admiral Dewey. Brilliant imperial purple.
Black Beauty. A beautiful dark velvety maroon.
Blue Oban. A sport of the Decorative Dahlia Oban, and the nearest approach to blue found in Dahlias. 25c each, $2.50 per doz.
Catherine Duer. Strong-growing, free-flowering crimson-scarlet.
Clifford W. Bruton. Best yellow; immense size; perfect form
Frank L. Bassett. Color, bright royal purple, shading to blue.
Grand Duke Alexis. Very large, white, tinted pale lavender.
Henry Patrick. Superb pure white; long stems; fine for cutting.
Lyndhurst. One of the best bright scarlet.
Maid of Kent. Cherry-red, tipped white.
Mrs. Winters. Very large; pure snow-white.
Nymphaea. Color, clear, light shrimp-pink.
Oban. Very large rosy lavender.
Orange King. Rich glowing orange; early and profuse.
Perle (Perle de la tete d' Or). The grandest white Decorative Dahlia to date; very large and of beautiful shape.
William Agnew. Rich, dazzling red; immense size.

Cactus Dahlias

Aegir. Petals are twisted and color bright rich crimson-scarlet.
Countess of Lonsdale. A pleasing blending of amber and salmon.
Dainty. The ground color is lemon-yellow, which shades lighter as the season advances, at which time the color approaches canary-yellow at the base of the petals.
Earl of Pembroke. Bright plum. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Floradora. Color, dark velvety crimson. The best dark crimson for cutting, as the flowers are borne on long, erect stems and keep for a long time. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
General Buller. Color, deep, rich, velvety maroon, tipped white. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Harbor Light. Flowers are of immense size, outer petals extending to 7 inches across; long, slender, twisted and incurved; color, orange-red.
Jealousy. Purest pale canary-yellow.
J. H. Jackson. The largest of the deep, rich velvety maroons.
Keynes White. One of the best white Cactus Dahlias.
Kriemhilde. One of the finest pink Cactus Dahlias.

Cactus Dahlias

Mrs. H. J. Jones. Incurved portion of the petals are deep crimson; the broad stripe of white running through the center of the petals extends almost to the center.
Standard Bearer. Brightest scarlet; profuse bloomer. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Strahlein Krone. Intense cardinal-red.
Victor Von Scheffel. The color is a fresh, delicate pink, shading to deep rose-pink. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Winsome. Flowers white, very large, beautiful Cactus form.

Show and Fancy Dahlias

A. D. Livoni. Beautiful soft pink; early and profuse bloomer.
A. Pefferhorn. Rosy crimson.
Arabella. Pale primrose, tipped and shaded old rose and lavender.
Camelliaflora. A fine large pure white.
Glowing Coal. Brilliant red.
Green's White. One of the best whites for cutting.
Harlequin. Brilliant crimson, striped and tipped white.
Lemon Beauty. A grand yellow.
Menheddy Beauty. Fancy buff, with crimson spots, free, long stems, large bloom. 8c each, 80c per doz., $6 per 100.
Olympia. Color is deep rose-pink, striped and penciled crimson.
Progress. The color is a clear, soft rosy lake, beautifully penciled and spotted glowing crimson. Very valuable as a cut-flower. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Queen Victoria. Deep yellow; fine for cutting.
Red Hussar. Pure cardinal, red flower, very free bloomer, splendid for cutting.
Storm King (Blizzard). A companion for the superb pink Dahlia, A. D. Livoni. Flowers are snow-white; extremely early and a free-bloomer. This is the florist's ideal white. 15c each, $1.25 per doz., $10 per 100.
White Swan. Snow-white, with long stems.

Single Dahlias

THE 20TH CENTURY. Intense rosy crimson, with white tips and white disk around the yellow center.

Dahlias to Color

We can also furnish, without names, in mixture, all colors separate, or all colors mixed, as follows:
Mixed Pinks, Mixed Whites, Mixed Reds, Mixed Yellows. 8c each, 75c per doz., $6 per 100, $55 per 1,000.
Mixed, all colors. 60c per doz., $5 per 100, $45 per 1,000.

in the trade as due to cheaper raw material—arsenic and blue vitriol, which are the chief ingredients of agricultural sprays. Arsenic is now selling at 3 cents, as compared with 4 cents, the minimum of a year ago, while blue vitriol is quoted at 4½ cents, the figure for this time of 1908 being 5 cents.

The dealers in chemicals have been waiting for this announcement in order to close contracts, and the cut was received with marked interest. The large reduction was a surprise in some circles, where it had been figured that the makers would quote about 19 cents or 20 cents.

NORTH DAKOTA SEED LAW.

Prof. Bolley, of the Agricultural College, gives the following summary of the new seed law recently signed by the governor:

"The law requires that persons selling or exposing seeds for sale shall attach a label which shall show the name of the person, firm or corporation responsible for the seed, and also the name of the kind of seed offered; prohibits the sale of seeds containing seeds of quack grass, sow thistle, Canada thistle and dodder, and requires that varieties shall be reasonably true to name; establishes a seed-testing laboratory at the Agricultural College and provides for the inspection, testing or analysis of samples to be sent

WATERMELON SEED.

In the year 1882, a small patch of each of a few varieties of watermelon was planted in Jefferson county, Florida, and grown for the seed by way of experimenting, and the result was so gratifying that in 1883 the industry was begun in earnest. From a patch of less than twenty acres in 1882 the industry has grown to its present large proportions. D. H. Gilbert, of Monticello, who is the largest operator in melon seeds, says Jefferson county now produces and ships over 200,000 pounds watermelon seed annually, with an increasing demand each year. Large quantities of watermelon seed are produced in southern Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska, but Mr. Gilbert believes it is only a question of time when Florida will come to monopolize the industry simply because of natural advantages.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Over here we are quite interested to note that there is a movement on foot to establish a national sweet pea society in America. Sweet pea lovers, and they are legion, wish the movement success.

Robert Sydenham, Ltd., Birmingham, reports that for twelve consecutive weeks the firm sold at the rate of 8,000 packets of sweet peas per day. What can our friend W. Atlee Burpee put up against this?

Visitors from America this year should note (and we always have a few at our National Sweet Pea Society's shows) that the show dates this year are, provincial at Saltaire, Yorkshire, July 13; London, July 23.

The report current in England a few weeks ago in regard to kentia seeds is now confirmed by the reports to hand on the seed crops, which state that the crops, especially of K. Forsteriana, are below the average. Consequently there is an advance in all prices. Bee.

HELIANTI.

With reference to the note on the new American vegetable, the name Helianti is the same as that used in France for the rhizomes of Helianthus decapatalus, which are used in that country as a vegetable. Bundles of the rhizomes may be seen offered for sale in the Parisian green grocers' shops. It is said to be of good flavor and superior to salsify. The rhizomes are lifted in the autumn and stored like potatoes. The method of cooking, I believe, is, after thoroughly scraping and washing the rhizomes, to plunge them into boiling water and after eight or ten minutes boiling take out and serve with sauce. The cultivation of this plant for the sake of the rhizome is only in its infancy, but it is said to yield heavier crops on a light, well-drained soil which has previously been well manured, than on heavy, low lying lands.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The last week in April was the coldest and most sunless we have had for a long time, temperatures as low as 20 degrees above zero being recorded on several mornings. Flowers, which had been in heavy oversupply, shortened up materially and made a moderate advance in price, carnations improving an average of 50 cents per hundred. Owing to clearer climatic conditions, supplies are again more abundant this week, and prices have softened. There is no particular change in roses. Beauties and Killarneys are good sellers and continue of exceptionally good quality. Short-stemmed blooms are making low prices. Carnations, owing to the cool weather, are holding well up to their winter quality. Violets, excepting a few doubles, are done for the season.

Sweet peas are selling well, and were not equal to the demand last week. All good flowers have been making $1 per hundred, but are now a little lower. There are good supplies of Spanish iris and gladioli coming in. Antirrhinums are selling poorly. A number of narcissi are now arriving from outdoors; the indoor supply is nearing an end. Trade generally is quiet. Owing to the low temperature prevailing, the sale of bedding plants, even of the hardier kind, has been limited.

Various Notes.

Edward Hatch, the popular secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, is expected home about May 25, much improved in health.

S. J. Goddard continues to ship quantities of fine Helen Goddard carnations to the Park street market. The color of this variety makes it one of the best sellers.

The weather bureau informs us that April temperatures averaged higher than usual. It seems hard to credit it after such a siege of cold, sunless weather as we have lately experienced. April 30 was the coldest day of the month, the maximum temperature being only 38 degrees.

A few carnation growers started planting out their stock this week, but the majority, owing to the cool weather, will wait a few days longer.

J. Tailby & Son, of Wellesley, are handling an exceptionally fine quality of Spanish iris at present.

The next field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be about the middle of June, when E. J. Shaylor's peony gardens in Wellesley will be the objective point.

W. McM. Brown, late of North Easton, is now in charge of the glass department at Menlo Park, Cal.

W. W. Edgar Co. are having a heavy demand for bedding plants and are planning for a big Memorial day business.

At the Harvard Botanic Gardens, Robert Cameron has a large and varied display of tulips, narcissi and other bulbous plants now coming in season.

Dottie S., the fast horse owned by Michael P. Fahey, the florist at 408 West Broadway, recently won two more blue ribbons.

April 26 some miscreant cut and slashed 1,700 shade trees at the Bay State Nurseries, completely ruining them. Much indignation is felt over the matter in North Abington and a special town meeting will be held in regard to it. W. H. Wyman has been instrumental in having the town laws rigidly enforced and this is believed to be the cause of the spoliation. W. N. Craig.

WASHINGTON.

J. M. Hammer & Sons, at 64 Florida avenue northeast, have filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. The debts are listed at $2,803.94 and assets at $523. Among the creditors are the following foreign concerns: Jacs Smits, of Naarden, Holland, $537.25; H. Zipp & Co., Leisse, Holland, $400; C. J. Speelman, of Sassenheim, Holland, $200, and C. Kuer & Son, of Hillegom, Holland, $50.

Vegetable Forcing.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 354, "Onion Culture," by W. R. Beattie, assistant horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

Chicago, May 5.—Radishes, 15c to 40c doz. bunches; cucumbers, 50c to $1.25 doz.; lettuce, 15c to 22c case; mushrooms, 30c to 60c lb.

Boston, May 3.—Tomatoes, 25c to 30c lb.; cucumbers, $3 to $6.50 box; beets, $1 to $1.50 doz.; carrots, 50c to $1 doz.; lettuce, 75c to $1.50 box; parsley, $1.25 box.

New York, May 3.—Cucumbers, 50c to $1 doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 65c lb.; mint, 30c to 40c doz. bunches; radishes, $1 to $2 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, $2.50 to $5 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

MANURE GNATS.

Sciara or Fickle Midge.

A few days ago I received a letter from a cucumber grower and also a package containing the root and stalk of a cucumber vine, with some of the soil hanging about the roots. This soil and the stalk and roots just below ground were simply alive with tiny white worms. The writer stated, as many others have written recently, that the vines were just beginning to bear and were nice and healthy, but suddenly began wilting. A few died immediately; others held out several days, but in a short time the entire crop was ruined. What few plants remained standing were evidently badly injured, because they stopped growing and looked dark and sickly. Upon pulling up some of the dead plants, great numbers of tiny worms were found at the roots of each.

These worms or grubs are the larvæ of the manure gnats, which are found so thick around stables and piles of fresh manure in hot weather. Sometimes they swarm about the barn so thickly as to necessitate dodging the swarm to keep from getting eyes, nose and mouth full of them.

How They Enter the Greenhouse.

They lay their eggs in the fresh manure, and when they hatch they are tiny white worms. When fresh stable manure is used to spade into the soil in the greenhouse benches, which is usually the rule in growing cucumbers, the eggs are taken in with the manure, and while in the larval state they do the injury that kills the vines.

This pest can be avoided by using other kinds of manure, but there is no other manure as good or satisfactory as fresh horse manure for cucumbers, both to warm the soil and to furnish a good, well balanced fertilizer for a perfect crop. Then, too, the damage is usually done before the grower has any warning of the approaching disaster, and when it comes it is too late to save the crop without much injury. The eggs are slow to hatch and the larvæ slow to mature, so it is seldom that they do any damage for a month after placing the fresh manure in the houses.

The Period of Greatest Danger.

The period of serious destruction is not long. They seem to hatch out, fly against the glass and get stuck wherever it is wet, and die off as fast as they hatch out, so that the next generation is not numerous enough to be of serious injury, if any at all. It is before they get the wings that they do the damage.

The worms resemble the larvæ of the striped cucumber beetle, but are smaller. They are often mistaken for these, and thus their true identity is often unknown. A grower who has once had them, however, can easily tell when he is getting them again, by the foul smell that is so noticeable upon entering the house.

Fumigating to kill the old or mature ones is a waste of time and money; they will die quickly enough in the greenhouse. Sometimes they darken the glass and pile up an inch deep along the sill, where they get stuck in the wet. Spraying the plants would not be of the slightest benefit, because they do not go on the foliage.

How to Fight the Pest.

The only effective method is either to kill the larvæ in the soil before they get to doing much damage or to avoid the use of horse manure. Many preparations have been tried, usually doing more or less injury to the tender roots and not as much injury to the larvæ as desired.

A new soil insecticide called Vermicide, has recently been put on the market especially for this purpose. Any of the nicotine products, diluted, will kill some of the vermin, but the cost is high.

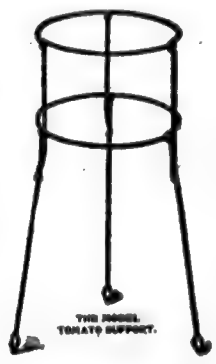
CALCEOLARIA FOR EASTER.



In the Seasonable Suggestions in the Review of April 22, I noticed a reference to Calceolaria rugosa, variety Golden Gem, as being a useful plant for Memorial day. I have often wondered why this beautiful plant was not grown by florists for Easter. As a yellow plant it is, in my opinion, away ahead of a genista, and in a cool room will last much longer in flower. Cuttings taken about March 1 will root in about three weeks, and if kept potted right along, pinching the hearts out of the shoots when they make three or four joints, one can have them in 6-inch or 7-inch pots by the end of September. I would not give them a shift or pinch them after that month.

A north house or frame is a good place to summer them in. After September they will stand the full sun. Give them frequent waterings with liquid manure during the winter. A temperature of 50 degrees during the night is about right, but if one wants to hurry them a little, 5 degrees more will not hurt them; 60 or 70 degrees in the daytime will be all right.

We had them in flower here, in Medford, Mass., the last week in March. Of course, look out for greenfly. Calceolaria Stewartii takes the same treatment.

George F. Stewart.

Peoria, Ill.—Joseph Cole has begun suit to break his father's will, which divided an estate said to be worth $115,000 between his two brothers and left Joseph unprovided for.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. Van Kleef, Jr., of W. Van Kleef & Sons, Boskoop, Holland.

A MISCREANT cut and slashed a large amount of stock at W. H. Wyman's Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, Mass., April 26.

J. J. SOAR is now the sole proprietor of the Little River Nurseries, at Little River, Fla., formerly owned jointly by himself and his brother, F. M. Soar.

JOHN E. DWYER, formerly manager of the Burr nursery, in Manchester, Conn., has leased four acres of land on Strickland place, in that city, and is constructing a nursery plant.

J. W. TETIRICK & SON, proprietors of the C. V. Nurseries, Blackwell, Okla., say business was excellent this spring, and with the present fine growing weather they anticipate a good growth in the nursery rows this season.

J. G. BOWYER, formerly in business as a nurseryman and florist at Gonzales, Tex., has removed to Harlingen, Tex., where he will grow citrus trees, palms, eucalypti, etc. He has named his new place the Harlingen Sub-tropical Nurseries.

J. W. MANNING, of the Reading Nurseries, at Reading, Mass., is planting fifty acres of additional area this spring. These nurseries are in the fifty-fifth year of their existence, and have developed rapidly during the last three or four years.

THE season is rapidly drawing to an end with the nurserymen. The backward spring has been greatly in their favor and all have had a big business, long continued and more evenly distributed over the planting time than is usually the case. Those who do landscape and garden work almost unanimously report the biggest season on record.

IMPORTS OF NURSERY STOCK.

One of the things the tariff framers at Washington wanted to know before they took up the question of duties on nursery stock was the volume, value and duties collected on imports of nursery stock under the old law. The Treasury Department submitted the following figures for the year ending June 30, 1907, as "the latest available and likely to be more nearly normal than 1908":

Myrobolan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry: Quantity, 17,133.40 thousands; value, $46,873.02; duty collected, $15,597.65; value per unit, $2.74; equivalent ad valorem duty, 33.28 per cent.

Pear, apple, quince, St. Julian plum, evergreen seedlings: Quantity, 9,987.02 thousands; value, $56,315.55; duty collected, $18,434.36; value per unit, $5.64; equivalent ad valorem duty, 32.73 per cent.

Fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines, Manetti, multiflora and brier rose stocks: Value, $23,791.10; duty collected, $5,947.13; ad valorem rate, twenty per cent.

Trees, shrubs, plants and vines commonly known as nursery stock, not elsewhere provided for: Value, $142,647.05; duty collected, $35,660.99; ad valorem rate, twenty per cent.

The total dutiable imports entered in 1907 under paragraph 252 of the Dingley law, covering nursery stock, were $1,841,206, of which the following countries supplied:

Netherlands	$810,468
France	331,999
Belgium	284,549
Germany	141,658
United Kingdom	102,687
Japan	107,053

EARLY FLOWERING SHRUBS.

Magnolia stellata Halleana makes a beautiful, large shrub or dwarf tree, whichever term seems the more appropriate. It is always the earliest of the family to flower. The first flowers opened near Boston this season April 15, and the plants were in full bloom April 25. This magnolia is a compact grower, making a round and quite symmetrical head. The flowers on some plants are pure white, while on others they take on a decided pink flush. They have a delightful fragrance. Where a single magnolia is wanted and the grounds are limited in space, this is the best variety to plant. It is necessary to plant with a good ball always, and fall planting is less desirable than spring.

Cornus mascula, often called Cornus Mas and commonly known as the Cornelian cherry, is always one of the earliest shrubs to open its flowers. Its showy yellow flowers were this year open April 18. The red berries which follow later in the season give the shrub some additional value. This cornus is usually the first of our shrubs to open, and where early spring flowers are wished it is well worthy of being more largely planted.

Rhododendron præcox is a hybrid between R. ciliatum and R. Dahuricum, making a low deciduous shrub, carrying small clusters of pretty lilac colored flowers, averaging one and one-half inches across. With R. Dahuricum and R. mucronulatum, this is the hardiest of the rhododendrons to flower, being in full flower at the Harvard Botanic Gardens, Cambridge, Mass., April 19. With Mr. Cameron it makes a neat shrub, four to five feet high, and has required no protection for a number of years. This would seem to be a desirable shrub to plant for early flowering effects. A sheltered location should be chosen, as late, severe frosts sometimes damage the flowers.

PRUNING SEEDLING TREES.

I am planting some seedling trees this spring—maple, elm, oak, white birch, European linden, red, pin and scarlet oak. Will you please let me know if I will have better results as to root growth and straightness of stem if I cut them off at the ground after planting? Would there not also be less loss? Will the oaks stand having the main root cut back? Some are too long for economical planting. W. G. S.

Unless your trees are of considerable size, I would not advise cutting them back severely. As your plants are evidently small seedlings, there would seem to be no good reason for cutting them down to the ground. Oaks are the most difficult of the trees named to transplant, but in the case of seedlings from six to eighteen inches high I think cutting back of the tops would be more harmful than helpful. If the roots are long and difficult to handle, you can safely shorten them somewhat with a sharp knife or pair of shears, always making a clean, straight cut, but do not cut off too much.

Maples, elms, lindens and birches of small size will require no pruning of either roots or shoots. The roots of oaks are inclined to be larger and to run more to taps than the other sorts named. If you take care, in transplanting, to have your roots puddled in clayey water, and moist and firm the soil about them thoroughly, the percentage of loss should be small in an ordinary season.

HEDGE FOR COUNTRY HOME.

Will you please tell me what is the best hedge for a country residence where cattle are likely to come in contact with it? It will be a boundary line. It is within the city limits, and will be observed by many. I would like one that blooms or has fragrance to attract bees and birds, if possible. J. R.

Cratægus Crus-galli, cockspur thorn, a well-known native variety with long spines, makes a close hedge, and for defensive purposes cannot be excelled. If planted fairly close, neither men nor animals will care to force a passage through it. The flowers are sweet and attractive to bees, while the scarlet berries persist until well into the winter. Cratægus Oxyacantha, the popular hedging plant of England, also makes a fine, compact hedge. In making a hedge of hawthorns, make a double zigzagged row and cut the plants back hard, to insure a thick bottom growth.

Cydonia Japonica, Japanese quince, is a brilliant, early flowering shrub, suitable for defensive hedges, but slower growing than the cratægus. Rhamnus cathartica, the common buckthorn, is still another desirable hedge plant, possessing defensive properties, but I think one of the cratægus named will suit you best.

ANTIRRHINUM FOR CHRISTMAS.

Would you please inform me as to the time to sow seed of antirrhinums to bloom at Christmas; also the time to put in cuttings? J. B. M.

Seed of antirrhinum should be sown now, in a frame or cool greenhouse in flats. Transplant to flats or frames when large enough to handle, and plant outdoors later, in rows twenty-four inches apart and eight to ten inches between the plants. Keep the plants well cultivated all summer. They will run up to flower. Let at least one flower truss develop on each, to see if the varieties are what you want. Pull up any poor sorts, or mark those you wish to keep. Cut the plants back fairly hard about the end of August. This will cause them to send up a crop of young shoots. Lift carefully and plant in the benches about the end of September. With careful treatment, these will give you a good Christmas crop in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. Plants treated thus will give you better returns than if taken from cuttings in the summer.

If you can get good cuttings now, get them in at once. When rooted, pot off singly, plant outdoors and treat otherwise exactly as suggested for the seedlings. These plants will prove more satisfactory than if carried along in pots all summer. Grow and treat them about as you would carnations and you will not go far astray. C. W.

BUDDING HOLLY TREES.

When is the proper time to bud holly trees? We have about 400 plants, from ten to eighteen inches high, and would be thankful for advice on how to bud them. B. & J.

The great demand within the last few years for English hollies of the bearing varieties, as well as the ever growing interest in the planting of holly hedges for the berries themselves, makes these branches of the nursery trade of the utmost importance, particularly in Oregon and Washington, where the holly seems to grow and fruit better even than it does in Europe.

Regarding the budding of the plants, there are two factors to be considered. The first is that the seedlings must be in good growing condition, and the second is that the buds be taken from heavy bearing trees. About May 1 is the proper time to bud these trees in Oregon and Washington, and the method used is the same as practiced with either roses or fruit trees.

A seedling of the height mentioned by B. & J.—ten to eighteen inches—should be about one-third of an inch in diameter and the buds should be selected from branches of about the same size. Make the cut in the stock about an inch and a quarter long and use an eye of about the same size, slipping it down until it wedges itself well under the bark. I have always used white cotton twine in tying, instead of raffia or anything else, and I tie the bud in tightly, for the reason that the stock will not increase enough in size to have any damage done by the string cutting before the eye gets well established in its new location.

Do not top the plants. Keep them growing throughout the summer, as, if there are any that do not grow, they can again be budded about June 1. About September 1 the tops should be cut partially off; that is, leaving a few inches above the bud for possible dying back, which often happens if the top is cut down too close to the bud, even if it has taken hold.

The full topping back should not be done until next winter, when in looking over the stock probably fifty per cent will be found to have started from two to six inches. Hollies should be pruned always at their dormant state, which is during December and January in this latitude—the vicinity of San Francisco—and the partial pruning back which I have advised for September 1 is merely to encourage the bud to make an effort to grow. As a matter of fact, the holly has no absolutely dormant season in this locality, but it approaches nearest to it after the berries are at their plumpest and brightest condition, in the middle of winter.

It is surprising how quickly budded plants grow into well berried shrubs, and how unsatisfactory, on the other hand, it is to wait for blooms on big, strong growing seedlings, which, were they full of berries, would be worth a small fortune. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Another week of beautiful, warm weather, with such an avalanche of flowers as has seldom been seen in San Francisco. For the first time this season, there is an abundance of all fancy stock. Roses, which have threatened all spring to remain in short supply, can now be had in any quantity desired and at the lowest of prices. Carnations, usually sold by the dozen, are now offered at low prices by the box. This will last but a couple of weeks, however, and then there will be a cessation of the excess. Valley moves well, considering the vast quantity of stock on hand, and the same can be said of Easter lilies. Tulips have not been in such demand for the last ten days as they were previously, and they are showing signs that they are near the end of the season.

Freesias, daffodils and Dutch hyacinths are completely gone for the season. A few violets are shown, but they are poor in color and weak in stem, and the retailers dislike to handle them. Orchids are in fair supply, with a fair demand.

Outside stock is beginning to be a factor that will have to be reckoned with. Already sweet peas have been reduced to 75 cents per dozen bunches, and the quality is much improved. Gaillardia, coreopsis and gypsophila are being used in great quantities by the street hucksters, while wild flowers are getting to be less in evidence as the weather becomes warmer and the ground drier. We have had no rain since February, and everything in this neighborhood has assumed a rather dusty aspect. When we consider that in all probability we will have no rain before next winter, it emphasizes the fact that we will have to do a deal of artificial watering before we have much natural assistance in that line.

Business continues to be quiet in a general way, although funeral orders have been rather plentiful for several weeks. The fact that flowers are so cheap and plentiful is greatly to the advantage of the retailers who make a specialty of funeral work, as good profits can always be made at this season of the year on funeral designs.

Various Notes.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been making some splendid window displays with Bougainvillea Sanderiana from the greenhouses of Gonzalez & Co.

H. Plath, of Ocean View, has the finest house of adiantum in San Francisco. He makes a specialty of this fern, and a visit to his houses well repays the time.

J. C. Lundgren, of Chicago, is in town, with the intention of locating here permanently. G.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The movement of stock of all kinds was somewhat improved last week. Roses are still a drug on the market, several of the retailers running cheap sales on Saturday, which were the only means of moving the surplus stock. Carnations, on the other hand, have been cleaned up the entire week, with not enough to fill orders part of the time. Sweet peas, pansies and valley have sold well. There is still a short supply of smilax. Eastern double violets are done for this season.

There are a few Spanish iris to be had and the demand for them is good. Lilies, both callas and longiflorums, have sold slowly.

Various Notes.

It is with regret that we report the death of Mrs. Harriet H. Smith, mother of Frank Smith, of Smith & Fetters, who died on Sunday, May 2. The funeral was held at their home, 1859 East Seventieth street, the remains being shipped to Bristol, Conn., for burial.

Albrecht & Smith, of Prospect avenue, report trade as good, with some large funeral orders.

C. A. Bramley says business is good at both stores, and reports heavy sales on his air fern novelties.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, visited old friends in Pittsburg last week.

ANNOUNCEMENT

WE have made arrangements with Messrs. Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., whereby they will grow part of the stock of our new white Carnation SHASTA, and assist in its dissemination next season, 1910. Orders intrusted to them will receive the same careful attention as those sent to us. 12,000 plants between us.

SHASTA is the variety which attracted so much attention at the American Carnation Society's Convention held at Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 27-28, 1909. It scored 89 points and was easily the best looking White Carnation in the hall.

We claim for it, purity in color, good size, fine form, splendid keeping quality, excellent stem, and extraordinary freedom in blooming. It's a money maker for grower and dealer.

We are booking orders now at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Dealers will please write for discounts on large lots.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Since Easter, trade has been good, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. Stock has been abundant and of fine quality.

Various Notes.

Carl Haugen, the violet king, picked the last of the season May 1. The first trailing arbutus came in April 26—two to three weeks later than usual.

P. Clausen & Son have sent into this market some of the finest lilies ever seen here. They were too late for Easter, but found a market just the same.

The great storm did no damage here. Rain and snow fell for four days, and at this writing, May 2, there is plenty of snow still to be seen.

St. Paul and Minneapolis closed the bowling season April 22, with three games in this city. In a series of eighteen games, St. Paul won eleven and Minneapolis seven.

The Warrendale greenhouses, which passed into the hands of A. Carlsen a few weeks ago by mortgage foreclosure, have been purchased by some outside party and A. Lauritzen is again manager of them.

G. A. Colberg, with Holm & Olson the last two years, has resigned his position and is succeeded by C. Fuhlbruegge, formerly of Winona.

Holm & Olson have purchased a tract of land in the city and are planting it to choice nursery stock, for use in their landscape department. X. Y. Z.

Andrew Lauritzen, of the Warrendale Floral Co., mentioned above, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. His debts, he says, amount to $7,527.77. In his assets, the estimated value of which is $5,780.47, he includes real estate worth $5,500, upon which there are four mortgages. He claims no exemptions.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Adam Shand, who for many years was in business on Germain street, moved just before Easter to a new store on King street, opposite the Royal hotel. The new place is much larger than the old one, and much better adapted for display purposes. Mr. Shand has greenhouses at Ashburn. Herbert E. Goold, at 90 Germain street, reports large sales and plenty of good stock, as the sunny winter has caused a healthier plant growth than usual. Among other florists whose Easter displays were indicative of prosperous business were Mrs. H. S. Cruikshank, 159 Union street; Campbell's Flower Store, 193 Charlotte street, and J. E. Quinn, in the country market.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, now ready for delivery, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready now, $35 per 100, 250 for $82.50, 500 for $150, 1000 for $300.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Weather conditions last week were the worst one could imagine. There were wind storms which uprooted trees and damaged greenhouses. Rain and hail, with a little sunshine thrown in, followed one another in quick succession almost every day last week, and sometimes, by way of variety, it did them all at once.

Flowers, especially roses, were certainly never more plentiful. Carnations were abundant the first of the week, and dropped out of sight entirely on Saturday. Taken on the whole, it was a most unsatisfactory week for the wholesalers.

The retailers did not complain much, however, as they were able to buy any stock needed at their own prices, and there was a fair amount of work going on all the week.

Various Notes.

William Hamilton, former superintendent of Allegheny park, has the sympathy of his friends in the loss of his wife.

H. P. Joslin was called to his old home in Massachusetts to attend the funeral of his brother.

The Schenley conservatories were heavy sufferers from the gale last week, when the wind blew sixty-seven miles an hour.

Hoo-Hoo.

FARGO, N. D.

The Shotwell Floral Co. is erecting three more greenhouses, each 22x100, on its property at Eighth street south, near Thirteenth avenue and just inside the city limits. The firm owns fourteen lots at this location, fronting on Eighth street. The new houses will be heated with steam and equipped with electric lights and patent water spray attachments. They will be completed about June 1.

This company has been in existence for twenty years, and has recently maintained three greenhouses in different parts of the city, besides a central plant at N. P. park. It is the intention now to grow the bulk of the stock that is needed in the business, instead of having a large part of it shipped in.

The firm is also making preparations for the development of a nursery business. A carload of trees, seedlings and shrubs arrived some time ago, and all available space on the Eighth street tract is being planted with this sort of stock.

Rowayton, Conn.—The Weathered Co., contractors, have a force of men at work here on the new greenhouses for Traendly & Schenck.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business and weather last week were spasmodic. The first part of the week was rather quiet, but the finish, all in all, was fairly good. In making comparisons with records of a year ago, we find conditions just the reverse. Last year the weather was good and the market glutted with stock, while last week the supply was very limited, especially in carnations, causing the price to go up a notch.

The dark days and cool nights were really beneficial to violets, which, with white sweet peas, cleaned up well. Harrisii are still abundant and move slowly. Greens are equal to demand, with the exception of smilax, which for the last fortnight has been scarce, and what there is, is short and not any too good. A few weeks will see it in good condition again.

Various Notes.

The storm of last week did considerable damage to the establishment of J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis., causing him to put in a rush order for glass with a local firm.

On May 4, in the midst of a few friends and relatives, Fred J. Manke and Miss Erna Denzin, of Milwaukee, were married. F. J. Manke and Wm. Manke constitute the firm of Manke Bros., of North Milwaukee, who grow carnations exclusively.

Holton & Hunkel's two 400-foot houses at Brown Deer will be glazed this week, weather permitting.

C. C. Pollworth Co., which has a large stock of nice spring bedding plants, says orders for these are steadily increasing. They anticipate an extra good season.

Gust Pohl is cutting some exceptionally fine snapdragons and sweet peas. He had a large assortment of pansies, all well grown, but the call has been light so far, owing to the unfavorable weather.

Outdoor work is at a standstill, on account of the wet. On Saturday, May 1, it snowed all day, and this was followed by several degrees of frost the same night. E. O.

Galveston, Tex.—It is reported that a corporation with $50,000 capital is being organized to build a range of houses here for growing cut flowers. The backers of the project are not yet disclosed.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The last two weeks have been restful ones for the florist, as, owing to the bad weather, there has been nothing doing in cut flower or plant sales. We have been having February weather, with snow and frost every night, and any day that the temperature went up, it rained. All this may have its advantages in giving the grower time to get his houses in shape after the Easter rush, and put the spring plants in line for the planting season, about to begin. Stock is plentiful and good. Smilax is scarce and high. Plants are making a fine showing, and there is a hope that, with propitious weather, sales will be larger and better than ever.

Various Notes.

H. Barsch is planning to extend his greenhouses this summer and make extensive repairs.

John Monson made his first fishing trip last week, but, owing to the weather, did not have his usual success. He promises himself more extensive fishing than ever this summer, when the rush is over.

Miss Whitted has the record for quick service last week. At 12:30 p. m. a call from Minnetonka brought an order to be in readiness for a luncheon there at 2 p. m. Although the train was gone, with the aid of automobiles and trolley the decoration was in place at 2:15.

O. C. Swanson had charge of the Partridge-Dodge wedding decoration, one of the most extensive jobs of the season. Smilax, palms and boxwood formed the basis, with masses of bloom throughout the rooms.

Visitors: S. B. Wertheimer, New York city; F. Kindler, St. Cloud.

Fulton, Ill.—Messrs. McKee, Preston and Still will locate a new greenhouse at this place.

Haverhill, Mass.—Leith & McDonald, of the Dustin Square Greenhouses, have made arrangements to open a downtown store. This business was founded in 1889, by Frank W. Poor. The present firm has five greenhouses, containing 15,000 square feet of glass, and specializes in carnations, but also grows a general stock.

A Prosperous Florist is like the Bee—Never idle

We have plants to sell, so have thousands of other florists.

But we have quantity, quality and prices that few can offer.

Our immense stock of bedding plants is now ready, every hole and corner full for immediate shipment.

Geraniums, S. A. Nutt (best crimson), John Doyle and other reds, Mme Thibaut and Jean Viaud (pink), 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Scarlet Sage (salvia). The true Clara Bedman or Bonfire variety. Ours is the true, medium tall, genuine variety, an immense bloomer, with deep red, brilliant flowers, so well-known and admired in the capitals of Europe and America. The seeds of this famous variety were gathered by me in Zurich, Switzerland, the home of Salvias. Price, 4-in. pots, $8 00 per 100.

Ageratums, best of the blue dwarf, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Heliotropes, best of blue dwarf variety, 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Begonia Vernon, newest strain, the well-known dark variety. Our own importation, the seeds having been gathered from the best specimen plants by me on my trip to Switzerland and France. It does well in either warm or cold climate and blooms profusely in July and August, even when fully exposed to the sun, and is very valuable for bedding purposes, in many instances taking the place of Geraniums and other plants. Price, 4-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

Begonia Erfordii, 4-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

Begonia Flambeau, on account of its waxy foliage (pink flowers in summer), is valuable for window boxes, vases, and makes a striking appearance, 5¼-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.; 4-in. pots, $1.00 per doz.

Fuchsias, assorted, in bud, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Petunias, double assorted, 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Lantanas, assorted, 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Nasturtiums, dwarf, assorted, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Stocks, German, six weeks, 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Vincas, variegata and periwinkle, 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Cobaea scandens, fine, blue, bell-shaped flowered, climbing vine, growing from 30 to 50 feet high in one summer, blooming far into November, 4-in. pots, nicely staked up, $8.00 per 100.

SMALL PLANTS

Petunia California Giant, 3-in. pots, $4.00 per 100.

Petunia Inimitable, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Verbenas, assorted, in bud, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Coleus, Verschaffeltii, Golden Bedder and Queen Victoria, $3 00 per 100.

Coleus, fancy leaved, 2½-in. pots, $4.00 per 100.

REMEMBER

We are one of the largest importers of these well-known and beautiful evergreen decorative plants, the Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa, and those we offer were imported the Spring of 1908.

Florists should bear in mind that no garden, lawn, etc., is complete without the Araucaria; therefore, if you wish to make money, recommend the Araucaria to your customers. Introduce this noble plant to your trade. We give you a special price, and it will pay you to handle them.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 18th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

O! what a sight!
Moonvines, moonvines, moonvines—
The genuine, pure white, waxy, fragrant moonvine,
With flowers as big as a saucer.

THE SECRET OF THE MOONVINE

Look! Life, Life, Life everywhere!

What is life? Yourself is a life. Your time is a life. Your porch is a life—a mass of flowers. Your home is a life. Your garden wall is a life. O! life and joy everywhere! Flowers and green everywhere—O! what a fine odor! Every spot of our home is a life. All happy.

"Mein Haeuschen steht im Gruenen."

I Am the Moonvine King of America

Grower and shipper of the so well-known Ipomoea Noctiflora, the pure white, fragrant, waxy moonvine, bearing flowers as big as a saucer, for which we have a world-wide reputation. For the last twenty years we have controlled the American market of this beautiful climbing vine, which grows 30, 40 to 50 feet high in one summer, covering every spot quickly wherever planted; 25,000 plants are raised and shipped by us every spring into every part of America. Beware of cheap stuff floating around the market. Price, 4-in. pots, nicely stocked up, $12.00 per 100; 3-in. pots, $8.00 per 100; 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

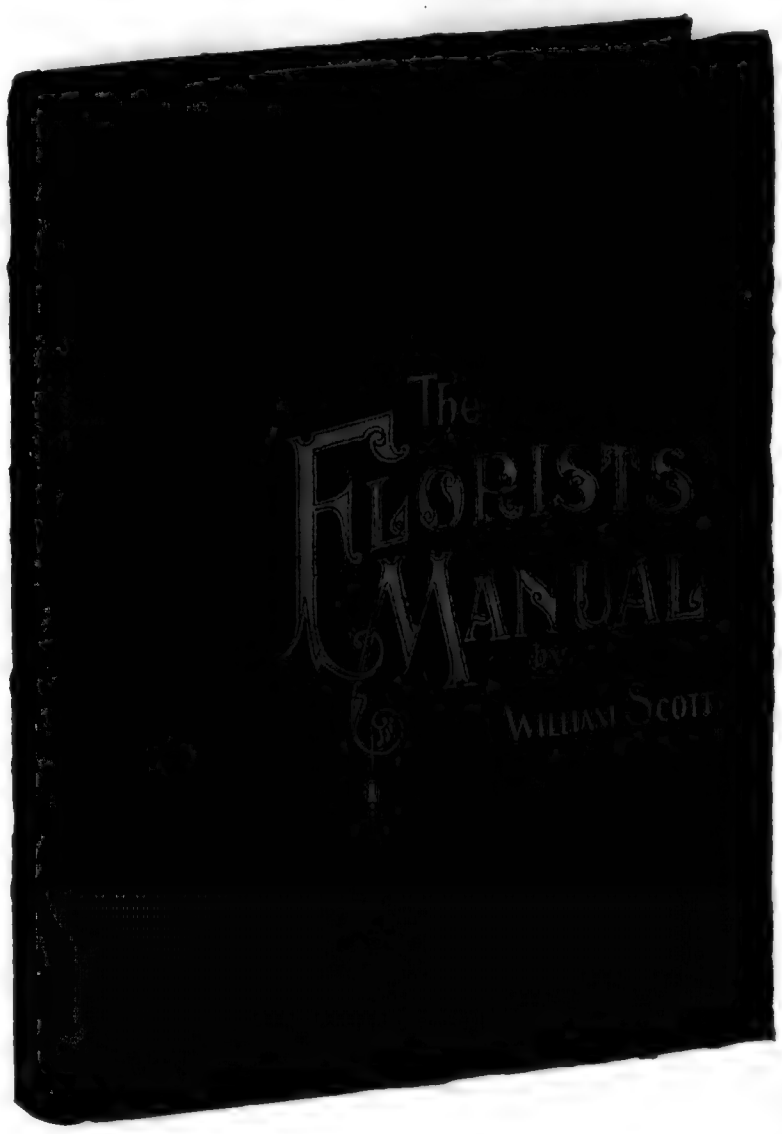
PLANTING PANSY SEEDS.

When should I sow pansy seeds to have them come in bloom in April in coldframes, and how should they be treated from time of sowing seed? I live in West Virginia. G. C. H.

Seed in your latitude should be sown early in August, either outdoors or under lath protection in a coldframe. If outdoors, it will be advantageous to scatter a light mulch of hay over the seed bed until the seedlings have germinated. Choose cool, moist weather for transplanting the seedlings. These can go in beds four feet wide, or as some prefer, in nursery rows a foot apart and two to three inches between the plants. If frames are at liberty, you can prick off directly into them. Let the soil be well manured. They will require no sash protection until the ground freezes solid, when a light coating of leaves will be sufficient. Place sashes over the plants and remove the leaves the middle of February to flower them at time named in your state. Pansies, like violets, enjoy abundant moisture at the root.
C. W.

PRIMULAS FOR SEEDS.



James Carter & Co., the English seedsmen, are said to this season have flowered 17,000 plants of Primula Sinensis for seed. Each flower is artificially pollinated by means of a brush, and this work is one of great importance in a place where plants are especially cultivated for seed production. Although early plants are the finest, those that open their flowers later always give the largest amount of seed. The first batch is sown about the end of June, but others raised a month later, although they make smaller plants, give much the best results in seed production. Flowers that open in March find brighter and drier conditions than those that are in bloom, say, about Christmas time.

"It is curious in this matter of seed production," says the Gardeners' Chronicle, "how the varieties differ. The beautiful Princess May variety, with its enormous blooms of exquisite pink shade, is an example of a poor seeder. Large batches of this plant are needed to ensure even a moderate supply of seeds. From half the number of plants of such a variety as Holborn Queen, a choice white kind, a larger quantity of seed can be gathered. The capsules remain on the plants until June, when they are gathered, placed in boxes, and thoroughly dried in a warm greenhouse. It is afterwards a simple matter to break the seed vessels, and, after separating the larger portions of the husk by means of a fine sieve, to secure the well-ripened seeds. It is interesting, in view of recent knowledge in plant-breeding, to know that by simply selecting and inbreeding, a variety can be fixed in a comparatively short time. In some cases the progeny comes true from seed after four or fewer generations."

COAL

Mention The Review when you write

Greenhouse Heating.

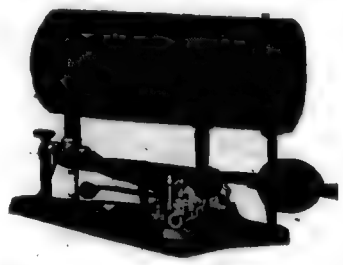
THE agreement between the miners and operators, insuring industrial peace in the anthracite coal regions for another period of three years, was signed at Philadelphia April 29, by the representatives of the employers and the men.

SOFT coal, including the best grades mined in Illinois and Indiana, is selling at the lowest prices in years. The overproduction has been steady for some time and the business has been so unprofitable that many weak concerns have gone out of business. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, for florists can afford to keep their bunkers full.

CHARGE FOR HEAT UNITS.

New principles and theories in the problems of modern heating and the manufacture of heating appliances were advanced by Louis Bruch, of the American Radiator Co., in an illustrated lecture on "Heating Boilers, Their Ratings and Reliability," before an audience of Chicago architects, contractors and engineers in the rooms of the Western Society of Engineers, April 30.

"In Germany the coal dealers are required to state the thermal units, or heat value, of the fuel they offer for sale," said Mr. Bruch. "But we Americans, who are inclined to laugh at the dear, old paternal German government, are willing to keep on letting the dealers sell us coal just by the ton and with no reference to its heat producing value, and as a result they sell the smaller buyers about anything they choose to call coal. It often is said water is a good conductor of heat, but the man who makes the statement without qualification should be placed in jail. Water at rest is a poor conductor of heat, but water in motion is a tremendous heat conductor."



NECESSITY THE MOTHER.

Necessity, the mother of invention, is responsible for a great many of the processes employed in greenhouse construction, as well as in other fields of endeavor. This is brought to mind by the account of the way in which Henry Stuttle, Batavia, Ill., came to devise the clamp he has since patented for the joining of second-hand pipe for greenhouse heating.

Mr. Stuttle was for years in the iron business, and among the things he was called upon to do was the installation of heating plants for florists. He put in the heating apparatus for quite a number of greenhouse men through his section of the country. In one case, he was called upon to make an estimate of the cost of heating certain houses at Geneva, and, knowing of a lot of second-hand pipe which was available, he took advantage of the opportunity to give his customer a low figure, while still making a satisfactory profit. The job secured and the pipe purchased, he discovered that the pipe could not be threaded, because of its condition. The result was that either some other method of joining had to be devised, or the prospective profit would be turned to a loss.

Being averse to taking a loss, Mr. Stuttle set about making a clamp to join the ends of his pipes. He made his clamp in two sections, uniting them with bolts. A little cement inside the clamp made a perfectly tight joint, and so successful was the job that he went on and made molds for the manufacture of the clamps to fit all sizes of pipes. They are now in use in a number of greenhouses at Batavia and elsewhere. With the clamp, old boiler tubes are joined up in a fraction of the time that is required for making the old-fashioned caulked joint, and, if circumstances require taking the piping apart again, it may be done without effort and without injury to the clamp.

two new houses this spring, one for roses and the other for carnations and chrysanthemums. The old house will be used for potted plants and greens.

Ralph Anderson, manager of the Queen City Floral Co., Traverse City, has started the erection of a greenhouse on Union street. The house will be 17x150 feet, with walls of cement blocks, and will be modern and favorably located for show room purposes.

The Woman's Club of Houghton will coöperate this year with the Houghton public schools in providing a big flower show this fall, to be held in that city in connection with the Copper Country Fair.

The Schultz greenhouses, at Marinette, Wis., the twin city of Menominee, are being enlarged, and will occupy double their former space. A neat office will be built on the State street corner, apart from the houses. A. G.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was irregular. Some days there was quite a demand and other days nothing was doing at all. The entire week the market had plenty of everything and prices were made to suit buyers.

There are plenty of extra fine roses, Killarney, Richmond, Carnot, Bride and Maid. The extra select do not bring over $6 per hundred. Beauties, too, are more than enough in all grades. Carnations are more plentiful than any other flower in the market, and cheaper than at any time this season. There is also a good supply of sweet peas and lily of the valley. In lilies, both calla and Harrisii are cheap and in big supply.

Fancy ferns are up to $3 per thousand. All other greens are in fair demand, especially asparagus.

Various Notes.

Emma Zender, daughter of Adam Zender, of Chicago, spent a few days here last week visiting Rose Windler.

William C. Smith has been appointed a committee of one to look after transportation for the members of the St. Louis Florists' Club for the S. A. F. convention trip. The appointment was made by President W. C. Young, of the Florists' Club.

William C. Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., sold his residence on Waterman avenue last week for $18,000, it being just across the way from their greenhouse plant. He will move this month to Vernon avenue.

A. G. Greiner, who is said to have the largest collection of cacti and succulents in this country, is making preparations for a big business this year.

The Riessen Floral Co. had a number of hotel decorations last week and also made several large funeral designs. The large show windows are as attractive as ever with the daily show of cut flowers.

Charles Beyer, on South Grand avenue, is handling a fine lot of large bay and boxwood trees.

Fred Meinhardt, Koenig Floral Co. and the rest of the florists near the large cemeteries are kept busy at present, preparing for planting, which will begin early next week.

William Schray & Sons have their houses filled with fine bedding stock, with plenty of orders for planting. The weather, however, has been too uncertain and planting will hardly start much before May 10.

work on its preliminary list for its fall show, which is expected to be held in the new Coliseum next November.

Next Thursday afternoon, May 13, the Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting at the old meeting place, Bowman's hall, Eleventh and Locust streets. The important matters to discuss will be the annual outing, convention matters and the celebration of the club's twenty-second anniversary, June 28. A large attendance is expected.

J. J. B.

Henry Russe, 1614 South Grand avenue, stopped in front of 3869 Folsom avenue the other day with a wagon loaded with plants he offered for sale. Four negroes took a hand in the bargaining. One of them bought two or three plants and tendered a gold piece. Russe drew forth a capacious bag containing $100 in bills and change, but he could not break the five, so he put the bag back into his coat pocket and went into a store. The one negro got his change and the other three decamped. A little later Russe discovered that his bag and the $100 had slipped from his pocket. The police are after the negroes.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Business was good last week, with many luncheons and parties. Orchids and gardenias are quite popular, while sweet peas and valley in corsages are holding their own. Violets have been scarce, both single and double. Smilax seems a luxury in this section at present, but Asparagus plumosus is getting more plentiful. Speciosum lilies, both long and short, are in demand.

The spring bedding stock is in good condition and the local florists are looking forward to a busy season.

Various Notes.

Miss Frances Burger, saleslady at Charles Offerle's store, and Wm. Harley were quietly married two weeks ago. This news came as a surprise to their friends. They will make their home in Erie.

George Gleichsner and John V. Gleichsner, who have been on the sick list, are convalescent.

The carnation ball given by the florists' employees at Assembly hall, April 28, was a very successful affair. Fully 250 couples were in attendance. Each guest was presented with a carnation at the door. The hall was tastefully decorated with palms and hydrangeas. The committee in charge was: Robert Bernie, Geo. Gleichsner, H. Niemeyer, Peter Silk, Dean Hill, Geo. Gensheimer and Frank Kern. The employees contemplate holding a chrysanthemum ball in the fall.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

The cold weather prevailing north has brought quite a change in the temperature we had a few days ago. Still the annual festival given at the City park took place Sunday, May 2, and thousands of people admired the beds of flowers newly planted. Any city should be proud of such a park, always kept in prime order.

The J. Steckler Seed Co. reports a heavy business in budding stock of trifoliata seedlings and seeds shipped all over Louisiana, around the orange growing belt. No doubt, the boll weevil is compelling some planters to change from cotton to a more reliable crop. Rice, broom corn seeds and peanuts are also attracting more attention.

Abele Bros. say they have been busy in their shipping department. The greater part of their propagation is made outside in coldframes, tender plants only being grown in the houses. There is an active demand for vegetable plants. Their stock of roses is large, and they are well satisfied with the use of outside raised benches. This new method of culture is growing more in favor with many florists and when an unlimited supply of water is at hand, it has certainly many good points. New Orleans has now

Florists' Review

When Writing Advertisers

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Viewing last week's business from the wholesalers' standpoint, it was not so "worse," but could have been better. Roses and carnations were quite plentiful, and but little of the stock went to the bad. Callas came in great numbers, but their sale was limited. Easter lilies and valley were not any too plentiful and the market for them was exceptionally good. A few of our florists are cutting the lilies which were intended for Easter, but they do not come amiss, as there is a good sale for them now.

The retailers complain of business being a little slow last week, but this week has started out with a boom and, from the present outlook, will make up for last week. The bedding plant business is keeping up to its usual standard for this time of the year, and the florist has no doubt in his mind but what he will sell out his entire stock before Decoration day. Geraniums are bringing $7 and $8 per hundred at wholesale, and $1.50 per dozen, retail.

Business throughout April was, on the whole, very satisfactory to the florist. Receipts ran far ahead of last year. Stock was plentiful and good. The weather was not the best, as exceedingly high winds prevailed during the month, and it really seemed as if we were having a repetition of March.

Various Notes.

E. J. Gould, of London, O., was in town last week on business.

Warren G. Matthews is without a doubt wearing the broadest smile of any florist in Dayton. He's grandpa now.

W. C. Hood, of Richmond, Ind., recently accepted a position with the Miami Floral Co., of this city.

H. H. Ritter reports trade of last week slow, but that this week has started out extra well.

A large company of friends walked in at Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Bartholomew's and gave them a good surprise, on Wednesday, April 28, their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. A most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew were showered with good wishes and received many beautiful gifts.

The Dayton Floral Co. decorated the motormen and conductors of the city railroads last Sunday by giving each a carnation for his buttonhole. The company had an extra large cut of carnations on that day, and thought this a good way to make use of their surplus.

The Miami Floral Co. reports a good local and shipping trade. Their stock is in fine shape, and they find good sale for all. They are also cutting heavily on callas, but these move a little more slowly.

The Market.

Business is fair, but will be better when the weather gets better. At present the weather is cold and snow is falling. The hail storm that struck this section of the country recently did but little damage here.

Funeral work has been keeping up well of late. Some good Beauties and other roses are coming into this market. Carnations are good and plentiful and have a satisfactory demand. Violets are about done for this season, as only a few are coming in now. Green goods, such as smilax, asparagus, fern leaves and galax, are selling well.

Various Notes.

Anderson & White have been busy with decorations of late. Their spring stock is looking well.

Lucien Le Clere is getting things in shape for planting at the I. & C. park, of which he has charge. August Le Clere made a flying business trip to Winchester last week.

F. W. Meyer, of Frankfort, Ky., was a recent visitor here. He is preparing for a big spring business at that place.

Honaker is cutting Beauties of good quality. He also has a good supply of bedding plants.

The Michler Bros. Co. has been busy planting privet and other hardy plants.

J. Ferdinand Keller, of the J. A. Keller estate, has 20,000 carnations that are hard to beat. Blue Grass.

ENID, OKLA.

A. D. Zimmerman, formerly in partnership with Everett C. Price in the Maywood Flower Gardens, at Ottawa, Kan., is establishing himself at Enid. Prospects look good here, the florists and nurserymen all doing a good business this spring. A recent hard rain has brightened outside conditions wonderfully, it having been rather too dry thus far this spring.

Warren, O.—George L. Brown, of Syracuse, N. Y., has leased the Gaskill greenhouses on North Tod avenue, and will continue the business. Mr. Brown was at one time in the employ of Mrs. Gaskill as a grower. Mrs. Gaskill will remain and assist in the business of the concern.

Menominee, Mich.—Charles Schulz is remodeling and enlarging his greenhouses, at the corner of State street and Dunlap avenue. When the work is complete, the greenhouses will cover more than double the space which they now occupy, besides being made strictly modern. The improvements will include a new office, with a frontage on both streets.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade remains about the same as usual. The supply of stock is none too plentiful at present. The cloudy weather we have had has held back the crop of flowers. Roses of specially fine quality are now coming in. The supply of indoor bulbous stock is nearly done, but a few daffodils and tulips are still to be seen. Sweet peas retail at $1 per hundred blooms. Violets for this season are practically done, for the growers are now dividing up their stock for another season. Pansies are in full bloom.

Various Notes.

Garden work is now being pushed here. E. Y. Peirce, R. H. Woodhouse, Peter Murray and William S. Brown all have large forces at work, and could use more at the present time.

R. H. Woodhouse is still cutting fine daffodils, Le Reine tulips and Paper White narcissi. He has some fine sweet peas also.

E. Y. Peirce is cutting some excellent roses. If we have some good sun, he will have a big crop of carnations for Memorial day. He has a fine batch of bedding stock.

Most of the growers intend to plant out young carnation stock the next week or so. We have had plenty of rain the last two weeks, and, after a little drying out, the ground will be ideal for planting.

S. S. Peckham has about 15,000 young chrysanthemum plants all rooted. Some of them he will dispose of to the trade.

J. H. Cleary carries a nice line of gold fish, also a complete stock of seeds.

William P. Peirce has always an attractive window display at his Union street store. W. L.

Flushing, N. Y.—Carl N. J. Petersen furnished the decorations for the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Van Nostrand. The affair was elaborate and fashionable and the decorations were fully up to the requirements.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Superintendent Seymour, of the park department, has presented to the common council a request for an appropriation of $10,000, to be used in building a large greenhouse in Delaware park, near the Albright Art Gallery. Mr. Seymour says that such a greenhouse can be operated for $1,500 a year, when once started, and that it will provide flowers enough for the different parks and public schools.

Iron Frame Side Detail

Look it over—do it carefully—it is the way we are building the two new houses for F. R. Pierson Co. Mr. Kroninger's 57 x 400-foot house, at Allentown, Pa., is exactly like it, excepting he uses a cast iron sill.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list.

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the fall and early winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.

GALAX AND FLOWERS.

The wreath of galax leaves and flowers shown in the accompanying illustration was made in the French style, the ribbon being placed at the top to convey the idea of hanging the wreath, so often seen in the windows of the Paris shops. The roses, gardenias and lily of the valley are used on the lower half, balancing the ribbon on the upper. The background is of galax leaves. This is one of the funeral designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, who believes that this arrangement will appeal to cultured taste.

PHIL.

THE SUCCESSFUL DESIGNER.

He Reproduces Nature.

If a man spends a large part of his life in searching his brain for scenes of real nature, as one may see it in the surrounding country, and then tries to reproduce the same in a miniature form, by means of a floral basket or some other piece of work made in a flower store, such a man may be termed a flower nature-imitator. By this I mean one who puts his heart in his work, as it were, and who, in walking through the fields or on the banks of some brook, may there see some particular flower and a coloring which nature has blended. And, carrying in his brain a full picture of what he has seen, he goes back to the flower store and there reproduces the coloring and the same effect in a basket or bouquet, so that a person who looks at it has the same impression as he would in looking at the same thing in flower nature, and perceives that the designer has so carried the idea in his brain that there has been no mistake made.

Mechanical, Because Unnatural.

Another man may have seen the same thing and imagined the same picture, but in trying to carry out his impression he finds that when he has half finished his work he is getting far away from the flower nature picture he saw, and is making something mechanical. His brain has acted the part of a machine, and his hands have done the work. Hence, when it is finished, one can see something that seems to look beautiful, but there is that something about it that takes it far away from nature.

There is a great deal of wiring in the flower business, and this, I believe, is a proper thing where you see that it is necessary in order to make the result look more natural. Of course, there are a great many designs and pieces of floral work which require all flowers to be wired, but these, you will find, are designs which the inventive part of our work has taken hold of and has shown us how we can make something which is appropriate for a good many occasions, but which, like the building of a house, has to be improved upon to enable the florists to advance with the change of years.

Improvement Along Natural Lines.

Take any other kind of business, for instance, and you find that almost everything each year has been improved upon, and the advancement has been looked upon as a good thing. The same is true of the flower business. The blending of colors is supposed to be as near as possible to the picture of real nature, as there is nothing more beautiful than that which nature has made, but the designer's aim should be to improve the mechanical part of it. Therefore, in making up such things as funeral designs, sprays, baskets and wedding bouquets, the coloring and natural instinct should be followed, and the balance should be the improvement that the florist makes in it, in order to give it a more natural and beautiful appearance.

Every man can criticise another's work, as there are no two persons born with the same ideas. Hence no two can see nature alike, and it only remains to decide which one of the two has more closely followed out the original and real ideas.

Character as Shown in Work.

It is every man's character and his attitude toward his work which makes his work look different from that of others. Take, for instance, a man who cares nothing about how he looks, or in what way he does his work, but simply follows the system that has been laid out by a good many other people; he is not as finished and as successful in his work as is the man who likes to see all his surroundings looking neat, beautiful, and in an up-to-date condition. The latter looks at the other man's work, finds out how he has done this or that, and then, with his newly-acquired ideas in mind, he tries to improve upon them. He may not fully succeed the first time, but a person who watches his work may see just where he has improved it, and made it look a little more like nature than the other fellow's. He keeps on trying, and each time that he makes the same thing you can see an improvement.

Danger of Running in Ruts.

The true artist does nothing carelessly or indifferently, but shows a real love for his work. Like the man that he is, he knows that he must improve, or, as the years go by, he will find that his work is like a wagon, with its wheels running in the same old rut and in the same old way, and that he has done but little for the betterment of his trade.

When a man has tried all this and can still look out into flower nature and see new things to be reproduced and improved upon, he can really be called a nature imitator, or floral artist.

SINRAM'S STORES.

A. C. Sinram opened his first flower store in Denver in July, 1906. The location was 1555 Arapahoe street, opposite the postoffice, the store as it appeared this Easter being shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. The store was a success from the start, and this season Mr. Sinram opened a second store, at the corner of Fifteenth and Tremont streets. The new place was ready March 10, and the accompanying illustrations give an idea of its size and equipment.

Mr. Sinram was after a larger and better place, where more up-to-date methods could be followed and where he would be able to secure his share of the rapid increase in the flower business in the Colorado metropolis. How well he has provided these facilities the pictures show. The store is several times the size of the first one, and is finished throughout in white enamel with marble tables, tiled windows and floors.

But the principal point of the equipment is inconspicuous. It consists of an artificial refrigerating plant, something with which few retail establishments are as yet equipped. Those who are located where they can take advantage of artificial refrigeration find it a great advantage, in cleanliness and saving of work, as well as economy of money. Mr. Sinram has his artificial refrigeration to cool his window display cases, one of which shows at the left in the picture of the interior of the new store. The refrigerating coils show inconspicuously at the upper left-hand corner of the picture. The apparatus also furnishes a large amount of storage refrigeration in the basement, making it possible to carry a large and complete stock at all times, and to take advantage of many favorable opportunities for buying.

MOTHERS' DAY.

It Will Pay to Push It.

It often happens that anticipation is better than realization—and so some say it was with Mothers' day.

Last year Mothers' day caught florists unprepared and it seemed bigger than it really was. This year a great many made preparations to meet a large demand, but few did anything toward assisting the publicity work for Mothers' day, and some thus were disappointed in the business done. There was a fair demand; indeed, in many places it was an excellent demand, but there was no really general observance of the day. It takes still a great deal of advertising to bring such a condition about.

Every florist should mark down Mothers' day for next year and do his part toward advertising it. The sentiment appeals everywhere and Mothers' day can be made one of the best days of the year, with publicity. It will not come all at once, and it will not come at all if the trade pours cold water on it. The general observance of Decoration day has come about gradually through a quarter of a century.

How It Works.

I wish to let you know that Mothers' day was a success in Lowville, N. Y. There was a special service in the Presbyterian church, the church being beautifully decorated in white and green. A white carnation was given at the door to each person who did not have one. The local papers took an interest in the matter and gave an interesting description of the observance of the day, asking everyone to wear a white carnation. It will be a big flower day in course of time. Wm. R. Keay.

In the Southwest.

Tulsa, Okla., came bravely to the front May 9 in observing Mothers' day. The City Federation of Women's Clubs induced the mayor to issue a proclamation, churches held special services and the day was made much of. By noon of Sunday there was nothing in town that looked like a white flower and "yours truly" did a flourishing business. As far as can be learned, Tulsa was the only town in Oklahoma to generally observe the day. At least she is not in the rear, thanks to your suggestions of April 29. I thought you might like to know. Perry N. DeHaven.

A Suggestion.

Mothers' day would be more successful than McKinley day. I would suggest to wear for a living mother any other color than white, and the white only for the dead. This would move all colors of flowers and stock can be sold for considerably lower prices. Even small boys wore flowers, but most interest was given by ladies to Mothers' day; men as a rule are always too busy to think about it. F. J. Olsan.

Observance at Des Moines.

Hundreds of men and boys in Des Moines were deprived of the privilege of wearing white flowers in honor of their Mothers May 9 because the florists' supplies were exhausted before the break of day.

Sunday had been declared Mothers' day in a proclamation issued by Mayor Mathis, conveying the suggestion that every man and boy wear a white flower in honor of his mother. The plan was received with readiness and as a result May 8 was the biggest white flower day in history. One prominent florist said that no less than 10,000 carnations alone were sold. Before the closing hour Saturday night every white carnation in the city had been ordered. Then, when the white carnations could no longer be purchased the demand for white roses began, and when that flower was no longer to be had it turned to others of the same color. Before the afternoon was half gone the supply was entirely exhausted.

Scores and scores of men walked from one flower store to the other and turned from each, disappointed. Not a white flower was to be had for those who did not anticipate the tremendous demand.

The altars of the churches were veritable piles of white flowers, and appropriate services were held in many of them. Old-fashioned songs, such as "Rock of Ages," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," were sung. At the Central Church of Christ members of the Women's Relief Corps were guests of honor and hundreds of men in the audience wore white boutonnieres. It was a day of white the city over.

Lawton, Mich.—Miss Isabel Bitely, a teacher in the public schools of Evanston, Ill., has purchased land in this vicinity and will begin business as a violet grower when the present term of school closes. She has made arrangements for the building of a greenhouse, the first of a number to be constructed.

Norwich, Conn.—Jacob Reid, who has been a resident of this city for the last eight years and was gardener for the late Mrs. John Mitchell, has accepted a position as head gardener and florist on the Bradley estate, at Brattleboro, Vt. This estate is an extensive one, on the banks of the Connecticut river, and employs several gardeners.

A LOUISIANIAN IN CALIFORNIA.

The writer has just returned from California, where he went on account of an advertisement in the REVIEW, to buy a carload of palms. The palms are bought and will be received before this reaches you.

California is very interesting at this time of the year, but I am convinced that the Gulf coast section can make as great a success of orange growing as California, if we will put as much work and brains into the business as they do there. I also believe that eucalyptus timber can be successfully grown here, which will be of as much value as an orange orchard. C. D. OTIS.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

The Birmingham Daffodil Show.

Peter Barr, the "daffodil king," seems to have discovered the secret of perpetual youth. Although turned fourscore several years ago, and now quietly spending his days at Kirn, Scotland, he occasionally ventures out into the world, and a few days ago he turned up hale and hearty at the Birmingham daffodil show. "Peter Barr is here" soon passed from one end of the show to the other, and enthusiasts for a time forgot their flowers for a hand-shake and a yarn with the veteran. He talked all day on daffodils to all and sundry who claimed the remotest acquaintance with him.

When he was a young seedsman, bulb catalogues contained about a dozen varieties; now there are about 500, and he admits his classification list of 1884 is entirely superseded. After looking around the show, he summed up the situation thus: "The hybrids of Leeds and Backhouse are entirely wiped out." Many varieties were exhibited for the first time, and a new classification is seriously engaging the attention of the Royal Horticultural Society.

H. H. Van Waveren, of M. Van Waveren & Sons, Ltd., Hillegom, Holland, who has traveled in England for sixty-two years in succession, and is now in his seventy-eighth year, was also a visitor; likewise another tulip and daffodil expert, W. Baylor-Hartland, from Cork, Ireland, in his seventy-fourth year, the pioneer of the daffodil trade in Ireland. Van Waveren has a new narcissus, named Dreadnought, with huge flowers of perfect form, four inches across.

An Exhibit of White Killarney.

Harry Barnard, traveling representative for Hugh Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, has now returned from his six weeks' trip in America. He came home on the Mauretania, and brought with him several boxes of White Killarney roses, which were exhibited at the Royal Horticultural hall in splendid form, April 20. Mr. Barnard, who has nearly completed half a century with his firm, was in splendid form also, and entertained his friends with enthusiastic accounts of his travels and the way things are done in America.

At the same show, Hugh Low & Co. exhibited the new blue rambler rose named Veilchenblau (violet-blue). This was sent out last year by J. C. Schmidt, Erfurt, Germany, and is the nearest approach to blue yet attained in a rose.

Dobbie & Co., who run one of the largest mail-order businesses in the country, with headquarters at Rothesay, Scotland, and seed farms at Marks Tey, Essex, England, intend to remove their headquarters to the Scottish capital, Edinburgh.

The great Temple Show of the Royal Horticultural Society will be held in London May 25, 26 and 27, and the great summer show of the Horticultural Society of France opens in Paris May 17.

International Excursions.

Several large international horticultural excursions are now arranged for July and August. German nurserymen and landscape gardeners intend spending a couple of weeks in England to study English methods, and landscape work in particular. French nurserymen have planned an extensive tour through Germany, and British traders are visiting the important nursery districts of France. All have an eye to the gathering of knowledge and expansion of business between the countries named. And, by the way, business is none too brisk in the nursery trade of Europe.

Modern times demand modern methods, and organized trips of this nature from one country to another were unknown until a few years ago. To a great extent they are pleasure trips, but the business man does not lose sight of the business end when there are any novelties or well-grown stock in view, and bargains are clinched even on a holiday trip.

BEE.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Otto Kalkreuth, who has been the florist at Mozart park for a number of years, has purchased the entire stock of plants and flowers from the park association and will hereafter conduct a business on his own account. The park association has decided to abandon operations.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bedding Plants.

In more southerly sections, planting out of bedding stock will already be in progress, but in the northern states it is hardly safe to commence this work before the latter part of May, more of it being done after than before Memorial day.

Attention should now be given to hardening off the plants gradually. Space required in greenhouses for growing on plants for Memorial day sales can be considerably increased by removing geraniums, verbenas, asters, ageratums and many other varieties to coldframes, where the sashes can be gradually removed, taking care to run them down on cold nights. The more tender sorts, such as alternantheras, coleus, cannas, etc., will be better in the greenhouses a few days longer, unless you can give them a gentle bottom heat from fermenting material in the frames.

If you can partially plunge your pots in the frames, they will require less water and keep a much better color. Keep the tops pinched out of coleus, achyranthes, etc., to give them a bushier habit, and pot off any late cuttings of these or any other bedding plants still in the propagating bench. Endeavor, as far as possible, to keep each variety of bedding stock together. It will save considerable running around later, and you can more readily tell the size of your stock. Get dahlias in a frame and keep them well aired to make them sturdy. It is now too late to do any propagating or seed sowing for the present season.

Hardy Bulbous Plants.

The sales of Dutch bulbous stock for outdoor uses show a steady increase each year. They are being more and more used, not only on private estates, but in parks, cemeteries, etc. The up-to-date florist who has an attractive bed of tulips or narcissi on his own lawn will find it an excellent advertisement, for many customers each year select what they want planted in the fall from the flowering plants. Each season shows a growth in the numbers of those who want a bed of, or, at least, a few dozen tulips, and anyone who has had the enterprise to plant a few bulbs each of the best kinds in a prominent position will have invested his money to good advantage. Now is the time to take a walk in the park or nearby public grounds to see these bulb displays and select those which may strike you as desirable bedders.

Primulas.

Primulas will now demand a little attention. The greenhouses are getting warm for them, and a coldframe with a north aspect will suit them much better from now until October. Spread a layer of coal ashes on the bottoms of the frames and furnish a little shade during the warm part of the day. Do not whitewash the glass. This only helps to draw up the plants. Use muslin or lath shades. After June 1 the sashes can be removed entirely, except in case of heavy rains. P. obconica should now be in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, and P. Sinensis and P. Kewensis should be about ready for the same size pots. Let the soil be light, plenty of leaf-mold and a small proportion of loam and sand. Seedlings of any late sowings should be pricked off as soon as possible. Do not use the hose at any time on these primulas. The watering pot is laughed at by some growers, but if you want first-class pot plants, its use is still necessary.

Winter-flowering Geraniums.

There is a good field for the development of the ever popular geranium as a winter blooming subject. Specially valuable and cheery is it when mums are on the wane and before bulbous stock is in season. As a Christmas plant it is splendid, yet how seldom do we see even an ordinarily well grown one at that holiday!

Plants to flower in 6-inch pots next December should now be nicely established in 2½-inch pots, and soon will need to shift into 4-inch. Grow them along in a light house without shade, and keep all flower trusses carefully removed.

Geraniums for winter blooming are much better grown under glass all the time, affording them a light shade during the hottest part of the summer. Scarlets and crimsons are the popular selling colors, but a few pinks, salmons and pure whites will find customers. Do not run too much on doubles. You should try some of the better singles, which are much more beautiful than doubles, and will sell on sight.

Berried Solanums.

The little plants of solanum, if hardened off, can be planted outdoors at any time. Much heavier berried stock can be had from those grown in the field than when kept in pots. The plants need no watering when outside, and are remarkably free from insect attacks. Yet many persist in growing them in pots all summer, which entails much more labor and gives fifty per cent poorer plants.

Cutworms.

Cutworms are now making their appearance, and will be specially bad where stock is adjacent to grass land or land that was but lately broken up. They get in their work at night, and can only be

WINDOW AND PIAZZA BOXES

SOME HELPFUL HINTS.

Becoming Popular Everywhere.

It is pleasing to note each year the increased use of window and piazza boxes of flowering and foliage plants in our great cities. It is but a few years ago that window boxes were something of a novelty, but now we see them in almost any city we visit. Even in small towns they are being made more use of, particularly on piazzas, and certainly nothing adds more to the beauty and picturesqueness of a residential district than a free use of these boxes. Not only are window boxes now being made a feature on the fronts of dwelling houses, but quite a few of the up-to-date department stores are using them, and there would seem to be an almost boundless field for future development. Both growers and retailers are in the habit of filling a certain number of boxes each year. The retailers particularly, if of a progressive nature, should strive to greatly increase this special branch of their trade, and there can be no better way of advertising it than by displaying at their stores one or two tastefully planted boxes which will give prospective customers an idea of how properly planted boxes will look and what their cost will be.

A Feature in European Cities.

In European cities, window boxes are a feature which always rivets the attention of American visitors. In somber London, where many thousands are used and filled with geraniums, musks, lobelias, fuchsias, calceolarias, marguerites, begonias and other popular box plants, they simply transform the residential sections. In Paris, Berlin and other continental cities they are also largely used, and the annual filling of these forms an important branch of the florists' business. It is true that our greater summer heat makes it impossible to grow some of the plants which thrive there, and it is equally true that more watering is necessary to keep the plants in good condition, but there is a large array of plants suitable for window box use, and the watering, if carefully done once a day, will usually keep the plants in good shape.

Cared for by Contract.

There are some places where the florists who fill the boxes also contract to water and care for them through the summer at so much per box, as is not infrequently done with cemetery vases. The price to be charged per box will depend so much on their location, on the number used, on whether plants are to be changed from time to time, and on the class of plants used, that it is difficult to give an average estimate.

In some of the large cities, notably at swell hotels and clubs, arrangements are made to remove all plants as they become shabby and replace them with others. This necessitates having a stock of suitable material to draw from. Some of the flowering plants commonly used are hydrangeas, geraniums, show pelargoniums, fuchsias, begonias, cannas and abutilons, while in foliage plants, palms, pandanus, ficus, marantas, alocasias, caladiums and many others are utilized.

Construction of the Boxes.

Window boxes are usually made of wood, which should be hard pine, cypress, hemlock or some other hard, durable wood. It does not pay to use soft woods, for their duration will only be a couple of seasons. The length and width will of course depend on the windows to be fitted, but it is a mistake to have them only six inches deep, as we too often see; nine inches is better, while for piazzas a foot is all right, allowing the use in the latter case of palms and other plants of fair size. The width of piazza boxes can also be greater than is possible with window boxes.

On piazzas earthenware boxes of a rustic nature are often used, but wooden ones predominate. The color they are to be painted will depend on the color of the stone or wood of the house. Ample holes should always be left for drainage. It is best to leave the bottom boards half an inch apart, where two pieces are used; if only one board is used, bore a good number of holes three-fourths of an inch to an inch in diameter.

The Soil.

The soil for boxes should be carefully prepared, and it must be rich if your plants are to come through the season in a thrifty condition. Fibrous loam, two parts; dried and well decayed cow manure, one part, with some sharp sand to keep it open, makes a good compost. Some bone meal can be added with advantage, but we like to mix this in a month before using it. Leaf-mold is often used, but it is too light and contains too little plant food, although it is excellent for young bedding stock in pots and flats. We have found a top dressing of decayed cow manure or pulverized sheep manure, during the summer, beneficial when the plants show signs of standing still or being starved.

Plants for Window Boxes.

Some of the best plants to use in window boxes, where the plants are to go directly into the soil and not be changed, are zonal geraniums, petunias, abutilons, heliotropes, dwarf nasturtiums, lantanas, verbenas and dwarf cannas. The last named should not be used unless a little height is desirable. Where some shade is to be had, as on piazzas, tuberous and fibrous rooted begonias, like Vesuvius, fuchsias and lobelias will do well. Among foliage plants, acalyphas, variegated abutilons, coleus, caladiums, crotons, green and colored leaved dracænas and aspidistras all stand sun well, or will do with a little shade. Palms, as a rule, prefer some shade, as do alocasias, fittonias and other warm house foliaged subjects. Among trailing plants, which are indispensable, are variegated and green vincas, Thunbergias alata, alata alba and aurantiaca, Linaria Cymbalaria (Kenilworth ivy), Asparagus Sprengeri, German ivy, Panicum virgatum, cobæas, and ivy geraniums. Impatiens Sultani and Holstii we have seen do well in boxes. Swainsona galegifolia alba answers better on piazzas than in windows, owing to its height. Ferns should only be used where they can have freedom from the sun's rays.

Taste in Color Combinations.

There has been a pleasing breaking away from the boxes containing miscellaneous mixtures of coleus, geraniums, vincas, alyssum and similar plants, containing a veritable riot of colors, to more pleasing arrangements which harmonize well with the buildings. Window and piazza boxes, as well as vases, should never contain pink and scarlet together, as we often see, although scarlet and white, pink and white, yellow and scarlet, or any of these colors by themselves, look well. Such geraniums as Ricard, Nutt, Jacquerie and Crampel, in reds, are hard to beat, though some drooping plant, like vinca, is of course needed on the front. A pleasing box last year contained Ricard geraniums and white Lobelia gracilis; the latter completely hid the box from view. This was at a seaside resort. Inland, the lobelia is less reliable, but white petunias or verbenas would make good substitutes.

The Cost of Filling.

The cost of filling such a box for an ordinary window would be moderate. Using 4-inch geraniums set moderately thick, there would be a good profit at $5 per box. We know growers who fill them at $3 and say it pays, but no one should begrudge the higher price for a box well planted.

When using pink geraniums, Jean Viaud or Gertrude Pearson, with such an ivy variety as Souvenir de Charles Tur-

GERANIUMS FOR EASTER.

Kindly advise me as to what kind of geraniums I could grow from cuttings being rooted now. By next Easter or later would they be large, salable plants? Or would they be overgrown? If nice plants can be produced by then, what special care or attention do they require during the summer? Give me any advice in growing nice, large plants, full of bloom. I have good varieties, and would like to try the above, if in your judgment it is advisable. G. H. H.

Geranium cuttings, if put in at once, will root fairly well, but would have done better when the weather was cooler. They damp off badly during hot summer weather. Presuming that you put the cuttings in at once, you can grow these along and have large plants in 6-inch pots before Easter, 1910. Cuttings rooted in October or the early part of November will make good 4-inch pot plants by Easter.

Double geraniums of the Bruant type will do well stood outdoors in the hot months, but the singles, especially of the large, round-flowered English types, succeed best under indoor culture. Shift your plants successively from 2½-inch to 4-inch and later to 6-inch, and even 8-inch pots, if required. Geraniums want an abundance of sunlight, but when in bloom under glass a light shade tends to keep them from fading out. C. W.

SPIRAEA GLADSTONE.

Please tell what to do with Spiræa Gladstone plants that are left over. Can I divide and grow them outside this summer and lift in the fall to force, and are they hardy? S. M.

Spiræa Gladstone is perfectly hardy, wintering just as well as the old S. Japonica. If your clumps are large, cut in two or three pieces with a sharp spade; small clumps can be left intact. Plant in rich soil, and if you leave them undisturbed until the fall of 1910, you will have excellent forcing clumps, far superior to what are imported annually from the European continent. It would not do to attempt any forcing of these spiræas next fall. The plants need and must have an additional year's growth to make them in fit condition. C. W.

ANOTHER DOUBLE CALLA.

Every little while someone comes forward with a report of a double calla. Authorities say that Richardia Africana, or Calla Æthiopica, the lily of the Nile, frequently sports with double or even triple spathes, but florists who grow the calla in quantities encounter these sports so infrequently that they always are regarded as great curiosities. When a double calla bloom falls into the hands of a store florist he always makes it the center of a window display, with a show card, that attracts much attention.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a singularly well formed double calla discovered by Joseph Traudt at Canajoharie, N. Y. Mr. Traudt has grown callas in considerable quantity for many years, and says this is the first double flower he ever has seen. He grows all his callas in pots, and has now flowered the same bulbs each spring for six years. This season they produced an unusually large number of fine flowers, and he found the crop one of the most profitable of the season.

PRIMULA FORRESTII.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, Messrs. Bees, Ltd., of Liverpool, exhibited Primula Forrestii, a handsome Chinese species producing rich golden-yellow flowers in profusion, and were awarded a first class certificate for it.

This is an interesting new species from the high alps of Yunnan, China, 9,000 to 11,000 feet altitude. The species possesses many points of uncommon interest. The root-stocks are described by Mr. Forrest, who collected this species and others for A. K. Bully, as growing in the crevices of dry, shady limestone cliffs, where they become two to three feet in length. Only a few inches of the tapered root-stalk are generally enclosed in the crevices of the rock, the remaining part of the plant being pendulous for almost its full length, a few inches of the growing apex only being turned out and upwards. It is estimated that some of the native plants are from 50 to 100 years old. The plants shown by Messrs. Bees were about two inches high, and bore simple, ovate-elliptical leaves with crenate margins. The flowers were borne on erect scapes, and were deep yellow with orange-colored eye. Both flowers and foliage were fragrant. The older leaves were mealy on the under surface. The Gardeners' Chronicle says the species is described as perfectly hardy in Cheshire and it is the consensus of opinion among British growers that this will prove a valuable addition to the list of hardy plants.

HAIL LOSSES.

The Florists' Hail Association is doing its work so quietly that many do not know what a good work it is doing.

I recently had word from our genial secretary, John G. Esler: "We are hit $10,000 worth in Omaha and Council Bluffs. Several are frozen out, besides losing all their glass. Probably one of the most destructive storms on record. Hail insurance a godsend." I decided to send you a list of the losses paid in the last few months.

A word to the wise is sufficient. Write to John G. Esler for blank application for membership, and insure against loss by hail in the Florists' Hail Association of America, which is now insuring over 30,000,000 square feet of glass.

PLANT DEVELOPMENT.

[A synopsis of a lengthy paper prepared by Charles Allen, of Queens, N. Y., and read before the New York Florists' Club, May 10.]

There are three distinct methods of plant development, each equally potent in its own way, each of equal importance in the line of usefulness to the plant grower and a marvel to the student of natural phenomena.

FIRST—Selection through environment; which means to render nature all the assistance possible in harmony with what we term natural law.

SECOND—The second phase, or method, is to thwart nature in all her purposes along the lines of reproduction, which is done through the agency of hybridization, the object of which is to unite the good qualities of two or more species, forming one of greatly increased value.

THIRD—The third is nature acting in self-defense in the restoration of some of the specific properties for which the plant is distinguished, and which have been destroyed through the interference of art. These results are usually termed "sports," or, to be more scientific, a case of atavism, or reversion.

Environment.

The dahlia, more than any other plant, shows the changes due to environment; changes the hybridist claims are due to his marvelous skill in the distribution of pollen—than which there can be no greater mistake. The marked change in the dahlia from the original type to the show, exhibition, cactus and pompon forms, is truly remarkable, in fact, wonderful. Strange as it may seem, human agency has had but little to do with the changes in these floral forms which have created such an intense interest.

Let us be more explicit and elucidate the cause of these wonderful and pleasing developments. In Mexico, the home of the dahlia, the flowers are apetalous; the margin of the flower, the same as with all the compositæ, is simply an adornment and undoubtedly for some wise purpose. When removed to a colder clime the floral discs of the dahlia elongate to protect the germ from the cold, which would prevent fertilization and render our beautiful flowers, from nature's standpoint, failures, as are all seedless flowers. We find in the history of the dahlia that some of the most rare of the double forms became such in the hands of some most distinguished florists in Germany, the second generation from seed. This was not the result of the treatment at the hands of the plant breeder, but from the conditions of environment. To protect her own, nature changes the form of the flower by protecting its germ with the beautiful from the standpoint of art.

In its native habitat the sweet pea is the tallest grower of the numerous family of lathyrus, and, where growth is slow and climate moist, its period of flowering is much longer than where the seasons are short and the atmosphere of a high temperature. But the law of reproduction is always understood and respected by the plant and, in obedience to command, it adapts itself to any situation in which it may be placed. In the short seasons of northern New York growth is rapid, and, in the heavy clay soil, with seasons of heat and drought, in order to produce the required number of seeds, the rampant growth of vine had to be curtailed and the season of flowering made shorter; the result was all its flowers were produced at nearly the same time, which makes the plant far more effective and useful for the florist. This result is conspicuous in Blanche Ferry and the dwarf varieties now in general cultivation, which shows clearly the plant's adaptation to change of environment. It shows, too, that the keen eye of the horticulturist—the man that

MONTANA'S LARGEST RANGE.

Two interesting photographs from the State Nursery Co., of Helena, Mont., are here reproduced. One picture shows the greenhouses, containing 120,000 feet of glass, with the dry land farm on the farther side of the houses, close to which are the company's ice houses and ice pond. The nursery lies to the left, where a mile of the Northern Pacific railway branch runs through the 400 acres of land owned by the nursery company. On the left are the residences of T. E. Mills, the manager, and J. M. Mills, the foreman of the nursery stock. The building at the extreme left, showing only in part, is the nursery's boarding house, where some of the thirty employees are catered for. The tennis court lies just in front of the boarding house, in the left-hand corner. The company has forty-seven greenhouses, all devoted exclusively to flower culture, and is adding ten more this summer, representing an additional 30,000 feet of glass. Forty acres of the firm's land are used for the growing of nursery stock and for experimental purposes. The nursery has its own street car station. The station and the bridge by which it is reached are built in rustic style.

The group in the other picture includes the manager and a majority of the employees.

NORTH AND SOUTH HOUSES.

I should like to have some advice in regard to greenhouse building. I have a lot 125x270 feet, and I want to build the 125-foot way, which would make my houses run north and south. Can you give me some idea as to how carnations will do this way? I am going to build twenty-one feet wide, with the King Construction gutter, and use 16x18 and 16x24 glass. As we have quite a warm climate here in Oklahoma, I should judge that almost anything would grow. Please give your opinion on the subject.

D. J.

While the prevailing sentiment is, without any doubt, in favor of houses running east and west, there is no reason why you should not grow good carnations in houses running north and south. The fact is, it is done right along.

The main objection to houses built this way is that when the sun is low in midwinter, the rays, instead of striking the glass at right angles, strike it at such an angle that much of the light, instead of passing through the glass, is deflected and lost to the plants inside. Then, too, the woodwork in the roof of such a house will cast more shade than is the case in an east and west house. If I were planning to build a range of glass, I would build east and west if possible.

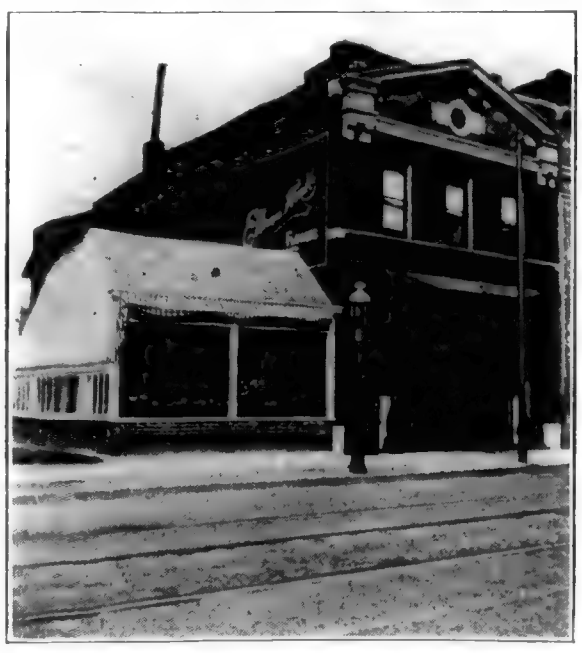
JUDGING SEEDLINGS.

A Novel Experience.



One of the problems of the near future, it seems to me, is securing greater uniformity in the judging of new varieties of carnations and other flowers at the various local shows and meetings. Under present conditions, the owner of a new variety cannot tell whether or not his variety will be scored the same at one meeting as at another, even though the blooms be exactly the same in every respect. No doubt other disseminators have noticed this, also, but we have recently had it brought home to us most forcibly in the following manner:

Last January we showed our new white carnation, Shasta, at the A. C. S. convention. The judges scored it twenty-three out of twenty-five points on color. A few weeks ago we sent a bunch of blooms to another city for exhibition and when we were informed that the variety scored fifteen out of twenty-five points on color, you may imagine our surprise. We knew that the blooms were just as good in color as those at the A. C. S. show. In fact, Shasta never shows any trace of pink or other color at any stage. We asked the secretary to inquire of the judges what was the reason for the low score on color, which he very kindly did. Imagine our surprise when he gave us the judge's answer, which was, that he did not consider it worth more than fifteen points on color, because it was white! What a misconception of the intent of the table of points! Because a variety is white, be it ever so pure, it should not score as high in color as a colored variety! Such a construction of the rules for judging can only be excused on the ground of ignorance.

Governing Principles in Judging Colors.

Judges who understand the rules score color according to its purity, etc. In case of white, freedom from objectionable coloring, such as pink mottling or stripes, or decided cream tint, are the points considered. A variety which is free from these will score as high as any other color.

In the colored varieties there are more points to be considered, especially in the pinks, of which there are several shades that are equally desirable. It would be folly to score one shade of pink higher than another, as long as each was a good example of its shade. In those shades the judge desires evenness of color over the whole bloom, and freedom from dullness or washiness. He wants a color which will not dull with age or bleach under strong sunlight. Usually a pink with considerable yellow in its composition will stand the test best and he looks for this. In the reds and crimsons a rich brilliancy and the retention of this brilliancy are the points which bring the score up high. It is even conceded that there are several shades of red, all of which may score equally high, such as orange scarlet, cardinal, etc.

Ellison's New Store.

National Rules Should Be Observed.

Now, it seems to us that not only is it necessary that the national society's table of points be used, but its instructions for using this table should be carefully studied by everyone who may be called upon to score new varieties.

Secretaries of local societies and clubs should provide themselves with these rules, which will be gladly furnished by the national societies. It goes without saying that whenever a flower is judged, if there is a national organization established for its promotion, the rules employed by that organization in judging the flower should be employed. While no local society is bound to recognize the national society as a superior, yet an honest desire to do the right thing should cause it to respect an organization which has made a study of its one specialty, just as the layman respects the opinion of an expert.

Too often the judging is done in a haphazard way, and frequently by persons who are wholly incompetent, and the owner of the variety judged either suffers undeservedly or gains without meriting it. We have seen certificates awarded to varieties which would not score seventy-five points before the national society. A. F. J. Baur.

ELLISON'S NEW STORE.

The Ellison Floral Co., St. Louis, recently moved into a new store at 4511 Olive street, shown in the accompanying illustration. Next door they have built a show house, which adds greatly to the attractiveness of the place and increases their facilities, both in the decorating line and for handling the plant trade at holiday time, especially the latter.

WHITE FLY ON HOUSE PLANTS.

What can we recommend for white flies on our customers' house plants?

B. M. R.

White fly on house plants is best fought by dipping the plants in soapy water. Hold the heads down and give them a thorough wetting. Spraying with soapy water, or dipping, will soon reduce the number of these little pests. Under glass, fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is usually resorted to, but of course this cannot be used in a dwelling house.

C. W.

A FEW "NEW" INSECTICIDES.

Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the Bureau of Entomology in the United States Department of Agriculture, says the number of proposed new insecticides which come to his office for examination or report rather increases from year to year than otherwise, under the stimulus of special problems such as the boll weevil and green bug problems. "These supposedly new insecticide discoveries are reported at an average rate of two or three a day, and some of them require examination, but most of them are readily judged from a mere description. Not one in a hundred of these presents any novel or useful idea. During the last fifteen years only two new and useful insecticides have developed. These are arsenate of lead and the more recently discovered so-called miscible oils or system of rendering certain petroleum products directly miscible with water."

Burlington, Ia.—Some of Joseph Bock's greenhouses were badly wrecked recently by a heavy wind storm.

Greensboro, N. C.—W. Clark Porter has leased the greenhouses of the late J. E. Smith, on South Cedar street extension. The stock will be kept on sale, as heretofore, at Helms' drug store and at the Greensboro Drug Co.'s store. The greenhouses have 15,000 feet under glass. Mr. Porter, being otherwise employed, has engaged two florists to run the business.

FICUS AND PHOENIX IN FLORIDA.

August Van Eepoel believes there is a great future in the growing of ficus and many palms under lath shade in Florida. He is located near Tampa, and sends the photograph from which the accompanying illustration was prepared, and writes:

"The picture of phœnix and araucarias I hope you will put before your readers, to show them the possibilities of this climate. These plants are grown in open air, under shade, the year around.

"I was in the florists' business ten years ago in Europe, but since then have taken up farming and breeding of full-blooded stock. As a pastime I have kept up my old occupation—just for amusement. I have no greenhouses or glass of any kind. Some plants grow well here; others do not. Rubbers, phœnix, araucarias and arecas do wonderfully, and I think good money could be made here by growing those plants for northern markets. Some northern florists think Florida grown stock is forced or long-jointed. This is not so; outdoor stock here is stronger than northern stock grown under glass, and will stand more rough usage.

"The Phœnix Canariensis shown in the picture are 4 years old, and the araucarias 1½ years old. When I imported the araucarias they were from eight to twelve inches high; now they stand as high and strong as four-year-olds, though they have had only nine months' growth in Florida. They might have done better; they did not have the needed potting, as a shipment of pots got lost and was more than two months on the road.

"The bottom row of araucaria consists of the glauca variety, which does not grow so fast.

"Rooted cuttings, twelve inches high, of Ficus elastica will grow three feet in one year, with leaves only two or three inches apart, but they cannot stand over three degrees of frost, and this is a drawback to their outdoor culture in Florida. The other plants will stand five degrees of frost, and this we rarely have.

"The water I use contains sulphur and other minerals, which do not affect the growth of the plants, as some believe. I grew all kinds of bulbs and they multiplied so fast that I had to throw them away. The Holland varieties and lilies, however, do not do well."

Araucarias and Phoenix Grown in Florida.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. O. P. Bassett.

Mrs. Orland P. Bassett, of Hinsdale, Ill., wife of O. P. Bassett, senior partner in the firm of Bassett & Washburn, died May 7 in the Mary Thompson hospital, Chicago, as the result of tropical intestinal fever. She contracted the disease in Hot Springs, Va., about a month ago. It was pronounced rare by attending Chicago physicians. Mrs. Bassett came home three weeks ago to see her aged mother, who was then in the Mary Thompson hospital and who later recovered. Mrs. Bassett was well known in Hinsdale society. She is survived by Mr. Bassett, her mother, Mary E. Andrews, of Berwyn; one sister, Elizabeth Fox, of the same suburb, and four brothers, O. F. and D. E. Andrews, of Berwyn, and N. C. and H. W. Andrews, of Coloma, Mich. The funeral was from the family residence in Hinsdale, Sunday, May 9, and was largely attended. Many flowers were sent by friends and business associates, among them being pieces from several Chicago retailers.

J. N. Holland.

J. Newton Holland, of Greenville, S. C., died May 3, under an operation for appendicitis.

William Miller.

The death of William Miller, who for upwards of forty years was gardener to the Earls of Craven, at Combe Abbey, Warwickshire, occurred April 16. Mr. Miller belonged to the old school of Scotch gardeners, and not a few of the Scots now in America owe much of their success to the training received at his hands, for many young men passed under his discipline in the old days. A few years ago Mr. Miller resigned his position at Combe. Being well over 70 years of age at the time, he might reasonably have claimed some rest after an exceedingly energetic and busy life, but instead he preferred to commence a business and nursery at Berkswell, near Coventry.

John Fottler.

John Fottler, who had been christened by a former Boston mayor as the father of Boston's park system, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Dorchester, Mass., died at his home May 5, in his ninety-sixth year.

Mr. Fottler came to America seventy-six years ago, with his parents, brothers and sisters, from Bavaria. After a short stay in the west, Mr. Fottler returned to Boston and first secured employment in Quincy market. When the public gardens were opened, John Fottler had the distinction of delivering the first load of plants to be set out there. As far back as the early seventies, Mr. Fottler conceived the idea of a great system of free public parks for Boston, to be owned by the city, and to no man was greater credit due for the inception of Boston's present magnificent park system. Mr. Fottler's business was the raising of small fruits and vegetables for the Boston market. He retired from business a number of years ago. He married Miss Mary MacDonald in 1838, who predeceased him. Four sons and two daughters survive.

AN EQUALIZER OR AIR ESCAPE.

The season for storms and high winds is at hand, and many of us have already suffered losses from this source.

I was much interested in reading the accounts in the Chicago news letter in the REVIEW of May 6, and note the reference to a point which has puzzled me for a long time—the outward pressure on the glass during high winds, causing the roofs to heave and the ventilators to strain their fastenings, as well as blowing out all loose glass. I have stood many a time and watched this performance going on, trying to get at the cause, so that a remedy might be applied.

It seems to me that it must be caused by an unequal atmospheric pressure, and if this is so, we ought to have an equalizer or vent of some kind on our houses, which would open outward automatically, allowing the air pressure within to conform with that outside. This would lessen the strain on the glass, as well as on the nerves. J. L. J.

PLANT INDUSTRY.

The Bureau of Plant Industry was established by Congress by the act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, approved March 2, 1901. It was a consolidation of the former divisions of botany, pomology, vegetable physiology and pathology, agrostology, experimental gardens and grounds, and seeds. At the date of its establishing it numbered 203 employees. July 1, 1908, at the beginning of the current fiscal year, the number of employees was 976. It is explained that "the increase in the force of the Bureau of Plant Industry is due to the increase in the demands on that Bureau for scientific work and information respecting seeds, plants and crops of all kinds from different parts of the country."

NEWFANE, N. Y.—Warren Tumber is having a good season at his vegetable houses, on East avenue. He grows good quantities of tomatoes, celery and other plants, and the greater part of his stock is usually contracted for in advance.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Now an open market has been declared by the cement trust. Use concrete.

THE English trade papers continue to voice complaints of bad business at Covent Garden market and generally throughout the industry in that country.

THE latest press bulletins of the National Council of Horticulture are entitled "The Cockscomb," "Window Gardening," "The Syringa or Mock Orange Bush," "Phlox," "Roses for the Home Garden," and "Peonies."

PLENTY OF MONEY.

Secretary J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., says the Florists' Hail Association is in affluent circumstances, in spite of the drain on its treasury by reason of the more than usually numerous and severe hail storms this season. He writes:

"After adjusting all losses of which we are at present notified, the association will have remaining in its emergency fund $30,000, and in its reserve fund $21,000."

PLENTY OF ORDERS.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Please cut out our advertisement of carnations and also of seeds, for we are sold out of stock. Please attend to this at once, as we do not want to answer any more letters. Thanking you for past favors.—Scharff Bros., Van Wert, Ohio, May 3, 1909.

Please discontinue the advertisement for Cedar Acres gladioli; it has brought us all the orders we need.—B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass., May 5, 1909.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

New National Flower Show Committee.

President Valentine has appointed the following committee to take up and formulate plans for holding another national flower show: F. R. Pierson, chairman; F. H. Traendly, New York; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; W. J. Stewart, Boston; Edwin Lonsdale, Philadelphia; Robert Craig, Philadelphia. The committee to have power to add to its membership at discretion.

It is the intention that this committee shall have entire charge of formulating the preliminary arrangements for a show and that it will be prepared to report at the next convention, suggesting a time to hold the show, the city in which it shall be held, and to perfect and present a complete organization to carry forward the project to completion.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

President Elmer D. Smith has appointed Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass., and I. W. Powell, Millbrook, N. Y., to serve as the executive committee for the ensuing year.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the Lenox, Mass., Horticultural Society have affiliated with the Chrysanthemum Society of America for the year 1909, and C. S. A. trophies will be offered for chrysanthemums at the fall shows of these societies.

As secretary of this society, I heartily indorse all that President Smith has written regarding the wishes of the officers of the Chrysanthemum Society to increase its membership. We need every chrysanthemum enthusiast, and shall be pleased with the support of everyone who grows a chrysanthemum.

CONDITION OF FARM CROPS.

The monthly crop report of the Department of Agriculture, under date of May 7, summarizes the condition of certain crops as follows:

May 1 the area of winter wheat to be harvested was about 27,871,000 acres, or 2,478,000 acres (8.1 per cent) less than the area harvested in 1908, and 2,163,000 acres (7.2 per cent) less than the area sown last fall.

The average condition of winter wheat May 1 was 83.5, compared with 82.2 April 1, 89.0 May 1, 1908, and 86.0, the average for the last ten years on May 1.

The average condition of rye May 1 was 88.1, compared with 87.2 April 1, 90.3 May 1, 1908, and 89.1, the average for the last ten years on May 1.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The wholesalers were all well satisfied with the business for the first week in May. In the middle of the week there were two days of summer heat, which did much injury to the quality of stock, but cool weather came again in time to prevent serious overproduction. Thursday and Friday, and Friday always is a good shipping day, were strengthened by the special demand for Mothers' day. This celebration had little effect locally, but many out-of-town orders were received which specified white stock for Mothers' day. The result was steady if not high prices, and on the whole the week was an exceptionally good one.

The rose market weakened perceptibly when the temperature shot up to summer altitudes last week, and has not yet recovered. The supply of Beauties is now the largest that it has been this spring and prices are down about to the lowest levels. More growers than ever before have provided for a summer crop, and fine stock is being cut, both from plants given a winter rest and from young stock which was planted in new houses late last fall. There is a larger proportion than usual of medium and short lengths of fine quality. Killarney continues to hold the lead among other roses, both in supply, in popularity and in price, while in quality it outranks Maid or Bride and is fully as good as Richmond. The hot weather produced a swarm of thrips in many rose houses, and the sudden fluctuations in temperature brought mildew to not a few growers, so the quality of roses is not what it has been, but is again improving with cooler weather.

Next to roses and carnations, sweet

Beauties

For several years we have been "headquarters" for Summer Beauties in this market. The plants grown cool all winter, are now coming into crop. It's splendid stock. All lengths of stems. You who use Beauties will miss it if you do not order of us.

Peonies

The good Peonies are now arriving—fine white and pink—put up by the oldest and best shipper for this market—the same stock we have handled with such general satisfaction for several years. Plenty for you now, for Decoration Day, and right through to July.
Order today—we want your business on Peonies.

Sweet Peas

Our Sweet Peas have been the talk of the town all winter and now that the Spring Crop is on they are better than ever. Fancy flowers on long stems—nothing like them to be had elsewhere. White, pink and lavender, in unlimited quantity. Fancy shades for those who order in advance.

Roses

If you want good stock—any length—wire us. Maid, Bride, Kaiserin, Killarney and Richmond are all fine and our supply heavy. You will use these in quantity, once you try our stock.

Carnations

We always have a large supply of the best grade Carnations. There has been no change all winter long—"Order of Amling if you want good stock"—and the supply has never wavered—we have them every day in quantity. REMEMBER, it is not what you pay, but what you get, determines value.

Mignonette

Good stock; your customers always like it in boxes of flowers. Order some today.

Lilies

Fancy, long Easter Lilies for your spring wedding decorations. Also Callas for funeral work.

Hardy Cut Ferns

Hardy Cut Ferns are reported scarce and poor. We are fortunate in having a large supply of Ferns that are exceptionally good for the season.

peas are the largest factor in the market. Quality is better than it ever before has been, with long stems and fine flowers. The good grades of peas are selling well at fairly satisfactory prices, but the short stock is not readily salable.

Peonies are now arriving abundantly and are selling well for the season. The stock which is in suitable condition is going into cold storage for Memorial day, because the early demand for peonies will not take up any considerable quantity at satisfactory prices. Good pink and white must bring $5 to $8 per hundred or go into the freezer to await the time when they will be wanted at these prices.

Callas are again in large supply and slow sale, with plenty of short Easter lilies. Considerable outdoor bulbous stock is received, but is not specially wanted. The demand for valley has slackened perceptibly. A few violets still are seen.

The stringency in the fern market has been relieved by the arrival of the spring crop from Michigan and the snow birds from Massachusetts. Asparagus is fairly abundant and smilax strings not quite so hard to find as a week ago.

It pretty regularly happens at this season that Monday sees a fair market, with accumulation of stock and a weak demand Tuesday and Wednesday, a little stronger market Thursday, the shipping of large orders at cheap prices Friday and a large local outlet Saturday, the weather being a large factor throughout; the rain of Saturday and Sunday spoiled the local business Monday of this week and started the accumulation a day earlier than usual. But the "regular" channels are able to handle only a small part of the receipts these days.

Decoration Day.

Everyone feels confident of a big business for Decoration day. The quantities of stock required for this occasion are now as great as for any other holiday of the year; some say Decoration day calls for even more stock than Easter. Of course, prices must be moderate, but it is figured the demand will take up everything coming into the market at fair rates, and that buyers will not be so critical of quality as at other holidays.

It is the general opinion there will be plenty of stock, except carnations, but one or two houses predict carnations will be equal to the demand and that roses will be the shortage. It frequently has happened that the item everyone thought would be short has turned out to be long, and vice versa. This doubtless is due to two reasons; first, the extra efforts of the growers to get in every possible flower of the short item, and, on the other hand, the disposition of the buyers to order the more abundant and less high priced flowers.

The indications are that there will be enough peonies to go the rounds at from $5 to $8 per hundred for good shipping stock.

Carload of Cattleyas.

A carload of cattleyas arrived last week from New Jersey. It is the start at orchid growing made by the Poehlmann Bros. Co. It is the intention to increase the stock of plants from time to time until a steady supply of cattleya flowers can be maintained.

George Reinberg went into cattleya growing two years ago and in the last week or two has been getting excellent returns on his investment.

Randall's Seed Annex.

The A. L. Randall Co. moved its seed and poultry supply division May 10 to the ground floor store at 98 Lake street. This department of the business has been successful and it is the intention to develop it for all it is worth. This division of the business is under the management of H. S. Seeley.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held at the Union restaurant, May 6, with an attendance of nearly thirty members. The following were elected to membership: W. J. Smyth and T. L. Vogel, Thirty-first street and Michigan avenue; Otto Goerisch, of the A. L. Randall Co.; A. A. Le Vaque, of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co.; P. W. Peterson, of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.

The fall flower show was the subject of general discussion.

Various Notes.

Albert Fuchs recently sold his apartment building, the Netherlands, on the north side, taking in part payment the Michael Cudahy residence at 3138 Michigan avenue, which he has now sold for $48,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000.

The George Wittbold Co. says the late spring has been exceptionally favorable for the planting of hard-wooded stock; they have moved a much larger quantity of stock from the nursery than they did last year. They feel that though the season for planting soft-wooded stock may be short, still it will produce about the usual volume of business.

Visitors in town this week were S. M. Wyatt, Watseka, Ill.; Miss Letta J. Baker, Ottumwa, Ia.

fail to appreciate the value of indoor sweet peas; they are accustomed to handling the outdoor crop and put too low prices on the peas grown under glass.

C. W. McKellar is still receiving quite a few violets from Rhinebeck and finds a fair market for them.

The Eaton Flower Shop has taken a three years' lease on a part of the store at 273 Dearborn street, and a five years' lease on the store to be made for them at 73 Jackson boulevard.

Kennicott Bros. Co. says last week was the biggest first week in May in the history of the concern, possibly in a measure due to the large quantities of iris they are handling this year. But Kennicott Bros. Co. always has reported May the biggest month of the year.

C. A. Samuelson has given up the store formerly occupied as a work-room and shortly will remove his entire establishment to new quarters across the street. He has occupied his present stand since the year after the world's fair and has a lease on the store to May 1, 1910. His move is occasioned by the opportunity to get a long term lease in a good store, something he was not able to obtain from his former landlord.

At E. H. Hunt's they say it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. In other words, the very next day after the sudden rise to summer temperature the rose growers began to call for To-Bak-Ine to fight the thrips.

Peter Reinberg says the amount of damage done by the hail storm just before Easter was decidedly deceptive. Glass was broken, a pane here and a pane there, all over the place, but he did not think the damage would amount to much. They have not yet finished replacing all the broken lights, but he now thinks 300 boxes will be consumed before they are through.

Grover Tonner, one of the members of the well-known Tonner family, is here from Aberdeen, S. D., on his wedding trip.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has obtained the store next door to 45 and 47 Wabash avenue for the storage of bay trees and boxwood.

Canger & Gormley are in the market for an automobile delivery van.

Wietor Bros. are now cutting a few fair flowers of the Rhea Reid rose. They have 2,500 plants and will carry them a second year.

E. E. Pieser says he figures the southern peony crop will be thirty per cent short of a full crop, but that there now are enough plants of blooming size so that the supply of peonies for Decoration day will be greater than it ever was before.

F. F. Benthey says that while crops locally were shortening up last week, the cut from the Otto Benthey place at New Castle was on the increase. The shipment from there May 10 was the largest of the year.

Vaughan & Sperry are receiving peonies from Tennessee and find they sell exceptionally well for so early.

Bassett & Washburn say Beauties will be exceptionally abundant for some weeks, given good weather.

Percy Jones says the department store buyers, who once would take any sort of stock, are now as critical as any other class of trade, so that stock which will be acceptable to them can easily be sold over the counter for at least as much money as the outside stores pay.

Among last week's visitors was W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade has not been going with a rush, and not until the end of last week, when considerable funeral work was made up, did stock move well at any of the wholesale houses. Mothers' day, May 9, brought a little extra business to some. Friday, May 7, one could buy white carnations at $1 per hundred, and Saturday $3 per hundred was asked, just because it was Mothers' day and white carnations were in demand. Monday, May 10, the market opened with considerable stock in all lines, with prices somewhat lower than on Saturday. The demand also seemed to be good and it may be that we will have a good business this week.

The plantsmen are in for a busy week, as planting out began Monday, May 10, and all have plenty of orders to keep them busy the next two weeks.

Various Notes.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., was in the city May 8, buying supplies. Mr. Denker reports business good.

Charles Connon is now running the old E. Michel flower store at 4651 Maryland avenue, known as the Maryland Floral Co. Mr. Connon has become a bowling fan and joined the Florists' Bowling Club.

C. Young & Sons Co. is doing the planting of Delmar Garden, under the supervision of W. C. Young. The sunken gardens are one of the attractions this year; also new bedding designs.

Alexander Krite, husband of Mrs. Louisa Krite, who runs a flower store on Cass avenue, died Monday, May 3. Mrs. Krite is well known in the trade, who extend their sympathy.

The planting season will open this week at all the city parks. Forest park will be made especially attractive with new designs, original with Superintendent Ostertag. The other parks, too, will receive the benefit of new bedding designs. Mr. Ostertag says they will spare no pains to make all our parks more attractive than ever.

Fred H. Meinhardt, who is this year state vice-president of the S. A. F., is busy attending to cemetery work, in which he has a large trade. His duties as state vice-president will be taken up early in June and we know he will do good work and take a large party to the convention city.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, spent a few days here last week.

The early closing of the wholesale houses at 5 p. m., and on Saturdays at 12 m., is looked forward to by the employees with much pleasure. Some say the houses are contemplating starting as early as June 15 this year.

William Ossick, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., was missing a day last week, but returned all smiles. He says it is a fine boy, and the image of his father and mother.

The Florists' Bowling Club had ladies' night Monday, May 3. Quite a few of the fair sex were in attendance and several made quite a good showing at bowling. The club will have to find a new bowling alley, as the old one has closed for the season. The new place will be announced in the next issue.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While conditions are a little less satisfactory than a week ago, they are on the whole good for the season. Roses are abundant and lower in price. The quality, thanks to the cool weather, holds good. Carnations also are holding up remarkably well in quality, with no great change in prices. A few straggling violets still appear, but the present week will end them. Sweet peas continue good and remain popular. Marguerites sell fairly well, also Spanish iris. Quite a number of narcissi and tulips are coming in from outdoors. These are of good quality, and a little later than usual in flowering. Lilies and callas meet with a fair sale, with no change in prices. Mignonette is getting small. Some candytuft is seen, but sells poorly, nor is there any better call for antirrhinums, wallflowers and stocks. Pansies are abundant and good. Gladioli are becoming abundant, the smaller varieties selling better than the Gandavensis types.

Asparagus and ferns are unchanged, but hardy ferns continue scarce. There is a good demand starting in for bedding plants, although bedding out does not become general here until near Memorial day.

Various Notes.

A recent call on Jackson Dawson at the Arnold Arboretum found that gentleman busy planting out numerous varieties of Wilson's recent introductions from northern China. In the propagating house were pans of some fifty varieties of new rhododendrons, the seeds germinating as thick as mustard and cress. There were also numerous interesting novelties in berberis, clematis, magnolias and many other genera. In the grounds the early spiræas, such as arguta and Thunbergii, magnolias and prunus, were attractive, P. subhirtella being especially fine. Cerasus pendula was already on the wane. The pyrus and malus were opening, while the large collection of lilacs looked uncommonly well, thanks to the cool, moist season. Forsythias were a golden mass of bloom.

It is to be regretted that Peter Bisset will be unable to attend the club meeting May 18 to deliver his lecture on the aquatic garden. Mr. Bisset's paper will, however, be read, and a number of slides given. Other aquatic specialists will be present. Exhibits will be unusually interesting, and the question box will have more queries than for a long time.

The Metropolitan Park Commission, in a report now before the state legislature, recommends a new bridge over the Neponset river, between Boston and Quincy, and a parkway from Columbia road along the Boston shore of Dorchester bay to Neponset river, at a cost of $1,000,000.

Farquhar & Co. have a large and interesting display of tulips and narcissi in their nurseries at present. The tulip display in the public gardens is also now at its best.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The first week of May was one of the kind that gives the wholesale man plenty to do, if only in handling the immense quantities of roses coming in. Beauties were so plentiful that buyers made their own prices.

White carnations were the only bright spot. There was a scarcity of these all the week, and on Saturday $5 per hundred was the asking price. Other colors held their own at regular rates.

There were quantities of ten weeks' stocks, miniature gladioli and irises, which moved slowly. Lilies were also short.

The plantsmen are busy finishing up their tree and shrubbery planting, and are commencing to push out bedding stock.

Mothers' day would have been all right if the originators had only suggested wearing a flower in honor of your mother, but when they made it a white carnation, there were not enough to go around.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met in the store room of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., Tuesday evening, May 4, with a good attendance, in spite of the busy time.

There were several nice exhibits of bedding plants, which were the subject for discussion. Also Mrs. James Parks' gardener exhibited three specimen ferns and one plant of Clerodendron Balfouri, for which he received a cultural certificate.

I. Rosnosky, of Philadelphia, entertained the boys with an enthusiastic talk on a club house, open at all hours, such as they have in Philadelphia.

Various Notes.

William Falconer was absent from the club meeting, owing to the planting rush now going on at the Allegheny cemetery. He is making many improvements.

Randolph & McClements began the use of an automobile at Easter time, which is giving them good service. It is more than likely that this firm will add a couple more by next fall.

The Zieger Co. is also experimenting with an automobile, with the intention of purchasing it if it proves satisfactory.

Allison Park, which is the home of Uncle John Wyland and a number of other carnation growers, also of T. P. Langhans, has organized a civic improvement society. None of the florists' names appears among the officers, but no doubt they are interested. Uncle John is one of the few florists who plant their own homes beautifully and at the right time, and the natives will only need to look at his home to see what a nice country home should be.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Owing to dull weather, last week's crop of carnations came a little short. There was a good sale for them, and in some instances it was necessary to cut as often as three times a day to keep up with the orders. White carnations were in especially good demand the latter part of the week, as Sunday, May 9, was Mothers' day. Orders for them came in so heavily that it was impossible to fill them all.

There is no decrease noticed in the rose crops, and stock is coming along in a way that is very satisfactory to the grower. The weather has been so changeable that the growers are kept busy fighting mildew, but so far they have been successful in keeping it out.

Callas and Harrisii sell in small quantities. The peonies have been making rapid progress in the last ten days, and if the temperature does not take a sudden drop between this and Decoration day, there will be home-grown peonies on the market.

Business in the cut flower line last week, taking everything into consideration, was satisfactory, but could have been better. In the pot plant line it was most satisfactory.

Heavy rain storms, accompanied by high winds and some hail, visited this section of the state in the last few days. Luckily, none of the florists has suffered to a great extent, as have some of our fellow tradesmen in near-by cities. The hail was not heavy enough to break any glass, but we have had so much rain that it has checked all outside planting for a few days. The market gardeners in the lower parts of the Miami river valley are suffering great loss to their crops, as the river has risen considerably and flooded their land, and the rain has washed out the young plants.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the establishment of J. F. Young, 37 East Fifth street. Among the topics for debate was the question, "Would a Coöperative Supply House Be a Benefit to the Florists?" E. E. Schaefer, of the Advance Floral Co., was assigned this topic, and delivered an interesting address, followed by the different opinions of the members, the substance of which proved that each florist was in favor of buying his own supplies as he needed them. Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs, in a few remarks on "Giving Away Flowers," expressed the idea that it was perfectly right to give them away when the occasion justified. For example, when a good customer came in to pay a bill or give a large order, it was advisable to give a few flowers, and there are many other ways in which a florist reaps a benefit by opening his heart occasionally. A general discussion followed, and all were in favor of Mrs. Hendrichs' idea, but none thought that any material benefit was derived in donating large quantities of flowers to churches, lodges, etc., for, instead of giving you an order, they would come back to you when in need of another donation.

The Miami Floral Co. is having some fine cuts on Kaiserin.

George Bartholomew was in Springfield, O., on business last week.

Mrs. B. Hendrichs is the first in Dayton to put blue carnations on the market. She reports that the sale on them is good.

OKLAHOMA CITY.

A Destructive Hail Storm.

In the afternoon of May 8 the most terrific hail storm this city has ever known caused the florists here much loss. Angel's Greenhouses had about 1,000 feet of glass broken. Carter & Hagemann, who had about a third of their glass broken out about two weeks ago by hail, lost the balance of it in this second storm.

Of the 14,000 feet belonging to the Stiles Co., there are not a dozen unbroken panes. The foreman states that by actual measurement and weight, the majority of hailstones were three inches in diameter and weighed seven ounces each. Many pots in the houses were broken and, between the falling glass and continued hail, much damage resulted. For summer flowers the firm has erected over a part of the field a flat roof of laths, nailed on rafters supported by 8-foot posts, set 8x10 feet. It is estimated that the hail broke about 3,000 laths.

Fortunately, the Stiles Co. carried extra insurance on its total area of glass, and Carter & Hagemann had full insurance, while both firms condole with Mr. Angel, who had not insured. G. S.

BRACONDALE, ONT.

Miller Bros. have been hard at work saving what they could of their establishment, wrecked by the boiler explosion in April. It was found that the damage was not as great as was first thought. Immediately after the explosion it appeared that the entire establishment was a wreck and that nothing could be done other than clear the ground and rebuild. The boiler plant was destroyed, but later inspection proved that a good many of the houses had suffered no great amount of injury beyond the breaking of the glass. Five of the houses were quickly reglazed and a large force of men is now at work repairing the others. The loss, so far as spring crops are concerned, was practically total and most of the young stock also was destroyed, but the firm is full of pluck and anticipates being in shape to do business again in the fall.

IT gives me pleasure to renew my subscription, as I owe my success in large part to the REVIEW.—F. W. BROOKE, Ithaca, Mich.

PLANT DEVELOPMENT.

looks into as well as at a plant—is the most potent of plant breeders.

Hybridization.

Much stress is laid on the importance of hybridization as an order of development; much more can be said—much more need be said—in the interest of the craft, as you fellows who are courting flora's mystic favors fully understand.

When hybridization was defined as a cross between species, the result of which is a mule, a creation incapable of reproduction, we could only regard it as the parent of monstrosities. But since the more recent definition of the word making it include a cross between varieties, we most heartily accept it as an important agent in the development of the various classes of plants, in which we are all interested. But the improvements should have been given to cross-fertilization rather than hybridization. Call it what we choose, the result is the same.

The rose, the florist's friend, to a great extent his source of profit, the almost universal favorite, the flower that is loved by all, the poet of the floral kingdom, from whence did it come? The story is too long to tell. It need not be told. Its life's history is known by all who can appreciate beauty and fragrance. There can be but one answer, and that is indefinite.

Hybridization is the active principle that brought together the species which have been known for 2,500 years. It transformed stamens into petals, giving to the world of beauty its double flowers and strange combination of colors, and enhanced the fragrance of all forms that did not lose their pistils in the transformation. When they do the flower is no longer fragrant, as that vital element is the active principle of the seminal emissions which are the flower's voice to the insect, bidding it come to the wedding feast.

But what is hybridization, a science or an art? It is both, and it is neither. This may seem a strange anomaly. The bringing together of the two active principles that form the current of life is a scientific fact, but it cannot be reduced to a practice that will insure a particularly desired result. I have never yet known of an instance where the hybridist sought to procure a certain result and obtained it. The results are oftimes most happy—all that can be desired—only they were not what were expected or hoped for.

The carnation appeals to us for recognition, and the same law applies to its development as governs all other creations, and the same results follow. There is more fascination in growing the carnation from seed than in growing the rose. The period of growth is shorter and results more interesting because more varied and more quickly obtained.

It is more than fifty years since the carnation was introduced to me as a florist's flower and the recollection is as vivid as if but yesterday. During that period its development has made rapid strides, and the indications are that the limit of its perfection has not been reached, and may not be during the present century. The carnation and I had our first meeting, where grown as an industry, in the greenhouses of the late John Humphries, at the corner of Washington and De Kalb avenues, Brooklyn.

At that time there were but two varieties grown to any great extent, La Purity and President DeGraw; and the pride that Mrs. Humphries manifested in showing these that, to use her language, "My old man knows best how to grow," is a precious memory. As this was my first visit to a greenhouse where plants were grown for the sake of their flowers, and where I could see a "whole house" full of carnations, my surprise was ill concealed, and Mrs. Humphries saw, only too plainly, the rustic she had as a guest, and, to her surprise, a customer. Mrs. Humphries' modesty was only equaled by her frankness, and she advised me to visit Flatbush, where, she said, "they had big houses, while John's were only small, but we try to care for them."

In good time a friend escorted me to Flatbush, where Dailledouze, Zeller, Gard, Bennett, Davidson and Augustus Messenburg, at that time the pansy king, gave me a hearty welcome, and the, seemingly, fields of carnations were an inspiration.

The good work has gone on; the carnation has developed from a luxury to a necessity—the end is not yet. The latest developments show most conclusively that the limit of its possibilities is far off, as may be seen from the fact that its wonderful beauty is accompanied by vigor of constitution.

Sports.

Before taking up the subject of plant development through the agency of sports, in detail, it should be clearly understood that I am in the most perfect harmony with Ernest Heckel's theory regarding the "soul cell" in plants, not a human but a plant soul, a vital principle analogous to the human mind, which is adapted to its necessities, with power to will and to act in harmony with the animal creation; that it has power of adaptation to environment, or, in other words, to adapt itself to changed conditions of growth through climatic conditions.

As a florist's flower the rose is familiar to you all, and, as an article of merchandise, it has no rival. Many of you, perhaps all present, are familiar with its history, in so far as it has a history, which, in reality, it has not; in fact the rose is making its own history. I remember very well attending an exhibition of roses at Aurora, N. Y., sixty-five years ago, where the late David Thomas had on exhibition 250 varieties, all of which, with the exception of the Solfatore and the Chromatella, were hardy. Soon thereafter the Safrano and Bon Silene were introduced, the hardy forms were gradually retired from cultivation, and the rosarians became active in their manipulations for the production of new and rare varieties. Their labors were crowned with success, and a vast number of varieties in every shade of color and of rare beauty in form was the result. The changes wrought have been marvelous, and the resulting commercial value astounding. To those men high honors have been awarded, and volumes of praise given, which was justly due. Through their efforts the ideal of life has become the actual; the beautiful has become the useful.

What is known in the trade as a sport was simply the result of an effort made by the "soul in nature" of the plant to be restored to the conditions the Creator assigned it. The changes are constantly going on. The inner life of the plant, its vital force, was created to work in harmony with the highest development of the human race. Change is the soul of nature and is constantly going on. With the development of the superior mind subordinate creations keep pace with every onward, upward movement of the forms they were created to serve.

Sports do not seem to have a history, and there has been but little attention paid to this wonderful manifestation; only because they are not known or appreciated. This seems to us most extraordinary when we consider the important place they fill in the vegetable economy. In our list of garden vegetables new varieties rapidly appear, through selection of types which have their origin solely through changes wrought by the soul of nature, changes made to keep pace with other and higher types. These new types soon disappear and new ones take their places, all in the line of development that has no limit other than necessity. The flower, the vegetable and the fruit are all governed by the law of natural progress and development.

Do not for a moment think that sports are confined to plants of perennial habit; they are more frequently seen in the vegetable and flower garden than elsewhere, and from this source some of our most valuable varieties have been obtained.

One of the most reliable and extensive growers of the tomato for seed purposes—the introducer of a large number of the best varieties known to the trade—said: "I never rely upon cross-fertilization for a new variety, but am ever watchful for new forms that are constantly appearing. When one is discovered it is given every possible attention, every opportunity to develop its every possibility, which is the secret of my success." Let me add, it is the secret of every success in horticulture.

In plant development it is the ever watchful eye, the discerning mind, united with an applied industry that knows no failure, united with the vital principle of one life, which means all life, each item being a component part—that is the parent of new and improved varieties.

The Market.

The weather last week was warm, supply increased and prices fell. Beauties are down to 10 cents for the best. The best Brides and Maids were selling at 4 cents Monday, May 10, and unbroken in boxes, the best as low as 2 cents in thousand lots. Great days these for those Brooklyn department stores, where values are butchered and public love of flowers fostered in the city of rubber plants and churches.

Immense quantities of lilac began to arrive last week. The southern supply was cut out by frosts. Now the local stock is arriving. Big bunches were selling Saturday at 50 cents. A few peonies are here and go quickly at good prices. These, too, before the end of the week will be abundant.

Carnations have joined the procession, and prices are nearly cut in two. Last week they held well at good figures, especially the white ones. A few violets straggled in Saturday to say good-bye, and someone paid 50 cents to 60 cents a hundred for them. There is plenty of valley and lilies, and sweet peas are too abundant. Gladioli also have arrived, and are snapped up quickly at good prices. The coming weddings will use many of the outdoor blooms. Between the May and June weddings and the Memorial day celebration, it would seem the call should not be discouraging to handlers of cut flowers, until well into the heart of the month of roses.

Mothers' day was not sufficiently advertised in the east. A few of the metropolitan dailies featured it, but their warning as to probable prices did more harm than good, they quoting 25 cents as the regular price of a carnation boutonniere. The sentiment is growing encouragingly, however, and another year will find the observance of the day more general.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club's meeting, May 10, was well attended. The plant display was large and varied and of great excellence in quality. The lengthy and valuable paper prepared for the club by the venerable Charles Allen, of Queens, was read by S. S. Butterfield and was greatly appreciated.

H. A. Bunyard, chairman of the outing committee, reported satisfactory progress, and announced that the store of Arthur T. Boddington will be closed July 1 as a compliment to the club, and all his employees will attend the outing, a worthy example for employers of every variety.

Resolutions on the death of W. C. Krick were read by Secretary Young. Messrs. Birnie, Marshall and Weston were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of John Scott, and Messrs. Donaldson, Manda and Schultz on the death of Herman Dreyer. The death of J. H. Starin, an honorary member, was announced, and a committee on resolutions—Messrs. O'Mara, Sheridan and Young—appointed by President Turner.

Messrs. Sinns and Meikeljohn were elected to membership. The thanks of the club were voted John Birnie for the excellent exhibit of plants staged through his influence. Messrs. Manda, Marshall and Berry talked earnestly in behalf of the bowling club.

An interesting talk by John Birnie as to the needs and possibilities and remunerative investment of a great central plant market created much favorable discussion. J. B. Nugent said he is in touch with a capitalist who will put up a building 50x100 in the neighborhood of Twenty-eighth street, asking only a guarantee that all its space would be taken by the trade, and agreeing to build a greenhouse the full size of the building on the roof of the structure. Mr. Totty moved for a committee to at once proceed with a thorough investigation of the proposition, and President Turner appointed Messrs. Birnie, Nugent, Totty, Miller and Schultz. Mr. Birnie extended a warm invitation to the club to visit the early plant market, where $3,000 worth are sold daily in three hours. Messrs. Totty and Sheridan acted as judges of the plant exhibits and reported as follows:

Six ramblers, new, by H. C. Steinhoff, of Hoboken, a vote of thanks and the request that it be exhibited again.

Geraniums, heliotrope and verbenas, by John Birnie, a cultural certificate.

Hydrangeas, dwarf fuchsias, geraniums and pansies, by Charles Hunt, of Staten Island, a cultural certificate.

African marigolds, by George Fich, of West Hoboken, vote of thanks.

Three plants of a new white rose, by Hartman & Wagenfohr, of Woodside, vote of thanks.

JOHN SCOTT

Rutland Road, Flatbush, N. Y.

The business of the late John Scott will continue, under able management. The reputation of the house for the finest plants and cut flowers will be maintained. The patronage and confidence of the public is solicited. This opportunity is taken to gratefully acknowledge the kindness and sympathy of all for his family, and to guarantee that the same care and enterprise characterizing the record and reputation of Mr. Scott, in the past, will be continued.

Coleus, by A. C. Schroeter & Son, of Bayonne, N. J., a vote of thanks.

Mignonette, geraniums and Rex begonias, by Herman Mende, Secaucus, N. J., cultural certificate.

Various Notes.

The Manhattan Flower Market, at 46 West Twenty-eighth street, between Ford Bros. and Traendly & Schenck, opened May 8. It is a large store and handsomely fitted up.

Ambrose Cleary disposed of over $1,000 worth of bay trees in a single day last week. All the auctions continue to draw large crowds, and prices are satisfactory.

Samuel Burnett is back again at his desk.

The nurserymen report a most remarkable season, and the demand shows no sign of diminution. Bobbink & Atkins' representative has just returned from a record western trip, and reports prosperity abundant everywhere west of Buffalo.

Charles Millang is refurnishing and decorating his new store on the ground floor of the Coogan building, and will make this his cut flower headquarters, with Paul Meconi as superintendent. His big store at the corner of Twenty-seventh street and Sixth avenue will continue as plant headquarters. Miss Scallen, formerly with John W. Scallen on Broadway, is now bookkeeper for Mr. Millang.

A. Warendorff has the decorations of the Metropolitan opera house for the Conrad funeral services May 13. In addition to the opera house decoration, he has many set pieces from the leading European singers now in the city, and some orders by cable from the continent. In the auto parade his decoration of the Lozier car won the prize of $500.

John Wendell, of Central avenue, Williamsburg, met with a bad accident May 10, in which he sustained scalp wounds, lost his left ear and has concussion of the brain. The horse ran away with a load of pansies and other plants.

W. C. Duncan, of Sparkhill, N. Y., is reported missing from home for a week. He came to the morning market at Twenty-sixth street, as usual, and no tidings of his whereabouts or fate have reached his anxious family.

Frank Millang is back again at his headquarters in the Coogan building, recovered from his dangerous illness.

Mary Sullivan, wife of John Sullivan, formerly gardener for William B. Astor, died at Rokeby, near Poughkeepsie, last week, at an advanced age.

Count Colloredo-Mansfield and Nora Iselin were married May 10, a society affair that gave opportunity for J. G. Leikens to show his artistic skill. Apple blossoms in abundance were the striking feature of the beautiful display.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., has moved his headquarters to the second floor of the Coogan building.

Fred Burki, of Bakerstown, Pa., is building another iron-frame house, 54x 358 feet, the Lord & Burnham firm having charge. Paul Pierson has bought the Briercliff range of greenhouses, and the same firm has the contract for two new iron-frame houses for Mr. Pierson, each 55x300. Mr. Sykes, the Chicago manager for Lord & Burnham Co., was in New York last week, closing up a contract for the concern. He says the western business sky looks sunny. Lyman B. Craw has convalesced sufficiently to make an occasional call now at the New York office.

Kessler Bros. are doing a good plant business, and last week secured the contract at Coney Island to decorate Dreamland.

The movement to close the wholesale stores on Sunday has failed because of lack of unanimous support.

Clarence Saltford's fishing last week was in the trout streams of Sullivan county and his trophies many.

The Astoria bowlers will go to Cincinnati in W. H. Siebrecht's touring auto, and they will bring back some of the prizes. Messrs. Donaldson, Miesem, Siebrecht, Kessler and Lorentz make an unbeatable combination. In the mixed bowling last week the standing resulted in the following order as to merit and score: Gentlemen—H. Lorentz, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., John Donaldson, Miesem, A. Bleckwenn, Doerhoefer, Philip Kessler, Archmann, Arnold H. Siebrecht, Dr. Lorentz, Jacobson, W. H. The Rising Eastern Market.

Mothers' day was the feature of the cut flower market during the week ending May 12. The success of this anniversary was remarkable. Last year, when first instituted, Mothers' day made a pronounced hit. This year the popular observance so far exceeded last year that there was no comparison. I do not mean by this that everyone you met on the street or in any public place wore a white carnation. Far from it! But the demand was so great that the supply was entirely inadequate, despite the special preparations by our enterprising wholesalers, who had, in many instances, coached their growers long enough ahead to bring a crop of white carnations in at this time. Conservative judges state that the demand for white carnations was greater than at Christmas or at Easter. They were bought in large lots, and in small lots, by buyers of all degrees. Everyone asked for white carnations first, and, if they got white carnations they often took something else also. The average market price for white carnations was $4 per hundred. Advance orders were booked and filled at $30 per thousand. Some choice White Perfection brought $5 per hundred, and there were a few scattering sales at higher prices at the eleventh hour. Enchantress, which is sometimes taken to make up a shortage in white, brought $3 per hundred, but deep pink carnations and red went begging and were hard to market at any price.

The demand for carnations helped the cut flower market in other lines, bringing flower buyers to the stores at a time when they were badly needed. The rose crops are extremely heavy just now, Beauties being especially overdone, and it requires great exertion on the part of the wholesalers and growers to keep the stock moving. Other features of the market may be briefly summed up as follows: Cattleyas are rather scarce. Gardenias are retrograding. Valley is in good supply and of excellent quality. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful; the price is falling. Violets are over. The stragglers of the Easter lily crop are over, and the new crop stock is now in. Japanese iris from the south is plentiful; the yellow is not popular. The white and purple are in fair demand. German iris, locally grown, is also here. Greens are selling fairly.

The Largest Order.

The observance of Mothers' day in the churches, in the hospitals, in the prisons, and in the home, was general, a white carnation, occasionally a pale pink carnation or a white rose, being the sign of the observance. The largest order on record was placed by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., with Frank L. Polites, a Chestnut street florist. This order was for 7,350 white carnations, to be distributed as directed among the twenty car barns of the company. Each carnation had a neatly printed linen paper tag attached to it by white ribbon. On the tag was this inscription:

All I am or hope to be,
I owe to my sainted mother.
—Abraham Lincoln.

The order was satisfactorily filled, on time, but Mr. Polites said he had some difficulty in procuring enough white carnations, 9,000 in all being required.

Various Notes.

Casper and George L. Pennock sent two wagonloads of American Beauty roses to their wholesalers, the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., May 10. One-half the specials in this consignment were required for one order.

Henry L. Blind, of Blind Bros., Pittsburg, was here a few days ago.

Charles Mawby and W. Faust, lately with C. W. Keegan, propose opening a new retail store of their own on Thirteenth street, above Sansom street.

Mrs. J. M. Gasser and two attractive nieces, of Cleveland, were here this week.

Walter P. Stokes gave an interesting illustrated talk on "How to Grow Seeds," before the employees and friends of the J. Horace McFarland Co., Harrisburg, Pa., May 11.

Pittsburg is always called the Smoky City, but Israel Rosnosky says that just now the Pittsburgers say it is not smoky enough. Surely this cannot include the florists.

Arthur Zirkman, with M. Rice & Co., has just returned from a successful trip through New England. Mr. Zirkman says that the observance of Mothers' day was general, and that there will be a heavy demand for Memorial day, judging by the confidence the buyers display in his firm's new style designs, which closely copy nature.

The Robert Craig Co. has been enjoying an excellent demand for foliage plants for outdoors and for growing on under glass.

Robert A. Craig sold 1,100 Pandanus Veitchii in forty-eight hours.

George Redles gave an entertaining talk on "Wild Flowers," before the Germantown Horticultural Society May 10. It is doubtful whether anybody, here or elsewhere on the eastern seaboard, can talk about wild flowers as delightfully as Mr. Redles.

John Thompson, lately with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., has returned to this city.

Work on the new greenhouses of the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, is progressing rapidly.

William J. Young, Jr., Germantown, has a well grown lot of bedding plants in all the standard varieties.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have their store full of Memorial day designs on the way from the factory to the shipping room.

Many of the growers are investing in glass to hold for a year or more, believing it a profitable investment at present prices.

Duncan Macaw, right-hand man to Robert A. Craig, has won himself many friends by his cordiality and cheerfulness.

PHIL.

AKRON, OHIO.

Salt Makes Water Harmful.

The failure and disappointment that accompanied the effort of Heepe Bros. to engage in rose growing in Akron on a large scale last year is attributed by them directly to the condition of the city water. The story is one of the most remarkable that has grown out of the local water situation.

After careful planning, the Heepes built an extensive greenhouse and started into the rose business on an extensive and expensive basis. They benched some thousands of American Beauty plants, but in spite of all they could do the roses refused to thrive. Chemists and experts were called in, the soil and the temperature and all the circumstances surrounding the rose venture were carefully investigated, but no satisfactory solution of the rose problem was found, and the plants continued to fail. The result cost the Heepes a considerable amount of money.

Finally, in making some changes about the steam heating plant, it was noticed that there was a strong incrustation of salt about the pipes, and this gave the suggestion of salt in the water, which they believed might explain the trouble they had with the roses.

A careful analysis was made of the city water that had been used on the rose bushes, and the chemist reported the astounding proportion of an ounce of salt to a gallon of water in some of the samples. He also stated that there was no doubt that the strong presence of salt in the water used for the roses was directly responsible for the trouble with the roses.

The Erie Railway Co. will not permit the use of Akron city water in the boilers of its locomotives because of the salt, which has a disastrous effect on its boilers.

STATE STUDIES FOR FLORISTS.

At the Illinois State Experiment Station, Herman B. Dorner is in charge of the greenhouses built for work in the interests of the florists of the state. During the last winter these houses have been devoted to an experiment on carnations with chemical fertilizers supplementing stable manures. The object of the experiment is to determine what chemical fertilizers used with manure are best for carnation growing. The results from this experiment will form the foundation for future work on the amount to use for best results.

In this work eight benches, each 4x100 feet, were available. Each bench was divided into sixteen sections, 4x6 feet inside measurement, this leaving some three feet over, which was divided into two small sections, one at each end of the bench. The object of this was to have sections protecting the exposed ends of the experimental sections.

Two benches, with thirty-two sections in all, were used in each experiment, thus repeating the work four times. Each set of benches was planted to a different variety. The sections were numbered 1 to 32, each number standing for a definite fertilizer combination. As a further precaution, the location of the numbers on the benches, in the various experiments, were changed so that each of the numbers appears at different places in the houses. Thus sections occurring at the exposed ends of the house also occur in the center and at the protected end.

The varieties selected for the work were Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon and Winsor, as representing a variety of characters, especially in growth of flowers and stems.

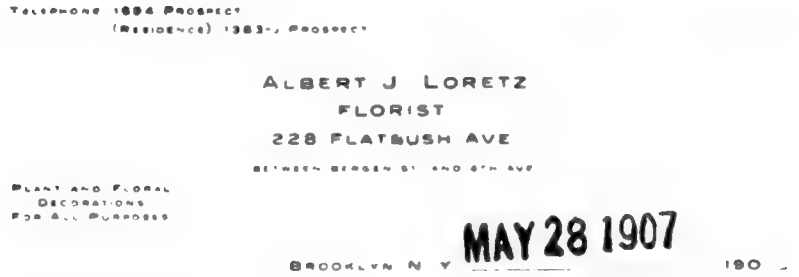
The fertilizers selected for the work were forms commonly used, and are easily procured: Dried blood, sodium nitrate and ammonium sulphate for nitrogen; acid phosphate, raw rock phosphate and steamed bone for phosphorus; potassium sulphate, kainite and wood ashes for the potassium. Ground limestone and ashes were also used to furnish lime. Sheep manure and well rotted stable manure were also used.

In preparing the sections a definite amount of manure was added to each of the sections, excepting those used as checks. The chemical fertilizers were then weighed out and added and the whole thoroughly incorporated. All chemical fertilizers were applied in quantities to afford an equal amount of the element for which they were used.

All fertilizers were applied before planting, with the exception of those containing nitrogen. Of these, one-half of the dried blood was added at this time and the remainder later. Of the sodium nitrate and ammonium sulphate only one-fifth was added before planting. The remainder was added later, in four installments.

In securing data, records have been kept of all the flowers as to size, length of stem, condition of calyx, of the general character of the plants, temperature, watering, etc. From these data and general observations the work for the following year will be planned.



ACETYLENE GAS REFUSE.

In recent years the use of acetylene gas for lighting purposes has greatly increased. Acetylene generators yield a large quantity of refuse, and, judging from the inquiries which from time to time are made as to the manurial value of this waste material, there seems to be considerable doubt as to its composition. The fact that it is almost entirely slaked lime has led to its being regarded as of equal value to lime for use as a manure. That it is not quite the same as lime is obvious to the senses both of sight and smell. These differences are due to the presence of small quantities of impurities in the original calcium carbide used in the preparation of the gas. That the impurities may greatly reduce the value of the refuse for manure, and even make it positively injurious to plant life, is shown by a series of experiments carried out at the English Wye Experimental College. So until further experiments have been carried out, gardeners are recommended to use great caution.

LEUCOTHOE CATESBAEI.

Leucothœ Catesbæi, or Andromeda Catesbæi, in severe winters will scorch and kill back badly, unless well covered. It succeeds best in a shady spot where there are some high, overhanging branches of deciduous trees to break the hot summer sun from it, and it does specially well on rather low ground where, however, water does not stand. The thick, dark green, heavy, pointed foliage is always beautiful, taking on a beautiful shining green in summer, and the arching of the branches gives it a graceful appearance. This variety should always be planted in shade, and if kept mulched will make rapid growth. It propagates easily from portions of the current season's wood placed in sandy loam in flats during August and September and kept in a frame or cool greenhouse. Its flowers were opening near Boston April 25 this season.

SOME FAVORITE FORSYTHIAS.

Forsythia suspensa was at its best this season near Boston April 27, the bushes being a veritable mass of golden bells. The mild winters for the last two years have allowed the forsythias to come through without any winter killing. The drooping nature of F. suspensa adapts it well for some locations. An immense specimen at present, which hangs down over a rather high wall, is magnificent. In mixed shrubbery forsythias are rather out of place. They should have beds or banks to themselves or be planted as individual specimens where they can have room to show their individuality.

Forsythia viridissima has a stiff, bush-like habit, very different from S. suspensa. The flowers are also a somewhat paler yellow in color and flower a little later than F. suspensa and F. Fortunei. In the neighborhood of Boston the shrubs were opening their flowers April 24, and were well expanded about May 1. To prolong the season of the golden bells, as forsythias are commonly called, this variety should always be included.

Forsythia Fortunei is a beautiful variety, being a veritable mass of golden yellow flowers near Boston April 27. It makes a wide-spreading bush, with handsome, dark, shining foliage later, which in fall takes on a purplish tint.

Any of these forsythias look pitiful if pruned before the flowering season. I had occasion to see a large bed headed back quite closely a few days ago in a small public park, which completely ruined the bed for the season. Some so-called landscape men seem to think that every shrub which grows must have a certain amount of shearing each spring, and just so long as political expediency and not practical experience is in the ascendant, we must look for just such works of butchery. Any pruning needed by the forsythias should be given immediately after flowering. The same holds good of all deciduous flowering shrubs, with one or two notable exceptions, such as hydrangeas.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Zeigler Estate.

A meeting of the creditors of F. Louis Zeigler, of Newport, was held in that city last week, before Referee in Bankruptcy Chester W. Barrows, at which Jeremiah P. Mahoney, of Newport, was appointed trustee under bonds of $1,500. A letter was read from Mr. Zeigler, dated at Seattle, in which he said that he intended to permanently reside there. He said that his liabilities would amount to about $3,000, in amounts of from $1 to $300, and that he had turned over everything for the benefit of his creditors. The list of liabilities that has been scheduled by the referee is as follows: American Florist, New York, $3; Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, $54.20; Bridgeman's Seed Warehouse, New York, $11.70; Bombayreed Mfg. Co., Columbia, S. C., $71.39; Bythesea Greenhouse, Newport, $84.58; Bonnie Brae Greenhouses, New Rochelle, N. Y., $45.50; Continental Bulb Nurseries, Hillegom, Holland, $46.50; A. B. Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

HENRY FIELD, Shenandoah, Ia., is on an eastern trip.

PEAS are in strong demand with the retail seedsmen, and wholesalers feel the call.

COUNTER trade is now trying to catch up. It is reported to be doing well, but is still a few laps behind.

IT is reported that Leonard Condon and John Condon, for some years employed by H. W. Buckbee at Rockford, Ill., will leave Mr. Buckbee June 1, with the intention of starting in the seed business at Rockford for themselves.

THE Lima varieties of beans, both pole and dwarf, are now being planted for the 1909 crop in the California districts. Cucumber seed is also being planted. Reports are that conditions are favorable for the seeding of both the cucumbers and beans.

IT is reported from Hollister, Cal., that the A. J. Pieters Seed Co. has brought suit, through its attorney, G. W. Jean, against the Braslan Seed Growers' Co. for the sum of $3,353.12, alleged to be a balance due for goods delivered and sold to defendant.

THE contract grower for whom O. S. Jones & Co. have put out more than 3,000 acres of peas in Lake and Minnehaha counties of South Dakota, as was first reported in the REVIEW April 29, is said to be the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.

THE bean growers report it still hard to get farmers interested in the garden varieties of beans. The field bean is bringing good prices and many of those who have grown the garden varieties in the past few years seem willing to go back and give the field bean a trial.

IT is reported from Louisville, Ky., that the onion set plantations are looking well and doing well. The seeding of the whites that was reported to be doing poorly a week or two ago is coming along better and it looks as though an average stand of whites will result. The acreage is not more than last year and the outlook for a crop is about as good as at this time last year.

SOME of the up-north farmers have sown their contract peas and are looking for a good crop; others are busy getting their ground ready. The fact that the season is unusually late does not seem to bother the pea growing farmer. Most of them consider that a late spring insures a good crop year. If this is so, the pea growers should be satisfied, as all of them seem anxious to see a good crop.

IT is anticipated that Governor Hughes will sign the new New York pure seed bill.

FOR the congressional seed distribution of 1907 the appropriation totaled $205,140, but the report of the Division of Accounts in the Department of Agriculture shows that there was expended for the "purchase and distribution of valuable seeds" the sum of $180,871.16. For 1908 the appropriation, including $50,000 deficiency, was $252,000, and the sum actually expended for the "valuable" seeds was $235,648.84.

AT Chicago the seeding for onion sets is about completed. Some few acres on particularly low ground are still bothering, but it is so little compared to the whole that it cuts no figure. A week or two ago it looked as though the Chicago set acreage would be cut down considerably on account of adverse weather, but things have worked out satisfactorily, and the ground that is now seeded makes the Chicago acreage for 1909 about what it was expected that it would be. Compared with 1908, there are more acres, but the early planting has had much to keep it back, and it is reported that quite a lot of the seed was washed out by the heavy rains; this, together with a lessened product on account of the large percentage of the acreage that had to be sown so late, will even things up, and no more than the product of 1908 can be expected.

BAD WINTER IN HOLLAND.

The seed growers in the Groningen district in Holland had a severe winter and a correspondent there says nearly all turnips are lost, particularly the red top varieties. Green curled kale passed the winter well, but Thousand-headed is quite gone. There is a small number of mangel plants to set out for seed, and therefore a short crop only can be saved, for which certainly an extraordinarily high price will be asked next year. Radishes will be the main crop this year, but cress, spinach and peas have also been contracted for in large quantities.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending May 1 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto..	26	$ 283	Lycopod'm	10	$ 780
Canary...	250	1,074	Millet.....	5,012	9,224
Caraway..	300	3,200	Mustard..	909	8,488
Cardamom	24	1,225	Poppy....	250	867
Castor....	1,366	9,092	Rape.....	3	13
Clover....	413	9,000	Other.....	....	3,492
Coriander.	85	194

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $13,917.

THE SITUATION IN SEEDS.

The jobbers report stocks well cleaned up. The way beans have come to the front in the demand for supplies is a pleasant surprise to many. It was thought that the demand would be light and the general impression was that the quantity to be disposed of was large. It has turned out just the reverse and, instead of a surplus of beans, there is a scarcity. Onion seed of a dependable sort was never so scarce as at present. Ordinarily the demand for onion seed should be over by this date, but the backwardness of the season at all the principal onion growing points has upset calculations and onion seed is still in brisk demand. The early plantings of radish and other seeds that make the early spring crops for the market gardeners and truckers have in many cases been frozen out. This has created a second demand for all of these seeds and has helped to deplete the stocks of these varieties. On the whole the situation from the seedsman's standpoint is as good, and perhaps better, than if the season had been more favorable for the planter. It also makes the trade in general more anxious to see good seed crops produced from the 1909 plantings. The turnip seed season will soon be on and the outlook for a large trade in this article is bright.

CLIMATIC INFLUENCE.

In a paper prepared by the venerable Charles Allen and read before the New York Florists' Club, May 10, Mr. Allen said, among many other things:

"The egg plant shows greater change through environment than almost any other garden vegetable. In its native habitat—tropical Africa—where it is extensively grown as a garden vegetable, the fruits are small and prolific in seeds of high germination. When grown for a series of years as far north as New

SEEDS :: BULBS :: PLANTS

72 Cortlandt St. NEW YORK CITY

Always Mention the Florists' Review when writing advertisers.

York, with good cultivation, the product reaches an enormous size, the seeds are but few, much shriveled and of low germination. The cause of the large size of the fruits is not due to extreme cultivation, as might be supposed, but is to be found in the extra care that nature takes in the protection of the germs. The colder the climate the more pulp nature puts around each seed for protection against cold. An egg plant grown in Georgia will contain twenty times as much seed as one grown on Long Island, where the trucker formerly gave $5 per ounce for the latter, and would not use the former were it given him. Nature requires from every plant a given amount of seed for reproduction—from each fruit a proportionate share; when one fruit does not furnish its proportionate share more fruits are furnished. As the trucker only sells the fruits, the more he gets from the plant the greater his profits. Hence, the true value of seed, in this class of low germination or recuperative strength."

DISEASED BULB FIELDS.

A bulb grower admits there are diseased bulbs in Holland. "This disease arises," he says, "from the same reason that the disease comes from in the boxes with bulbs ready for forcing; namely, infected soil. There used to be a time that growers in Holland left the remains of tulip-leaves, etc., on the ground and simply dug them under in the autumn, when the soil was prepared for another crop. Part of lands thus carelessly treated have produced diseased tulips, even if the bulbs were planted three or four years afterwards. There also used to be a time that covering material was used twice; the consequence was no end of diseased bulbs. People have learned to be a good deal more careful now."

SOME NEWER SWEET PEAS.

The finest varieties raised by the late Henry Eckford were Dorothy Eckford and Queen Alexandra. Whether in dimensions, in faultless form, or in perfection of color, those ideal representatives of purest white and richest scarlet will not easily be surpassed. At present, however, the predominating forms are the Spencer hybrids, with their fantastically waved or crenulated standards, to whose excessive multiplication some prominent horticulturists are already beginning to object, on the ground that older and—as they deem them—more valuable varieties are in danger of being forgotten. Among the most prominent of the latest Spencerian hybrids is a notable one entitled The King, by Messrs. Dobbie & Co., and King Edward Spencer, by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. It is probably the largest, and one of the most brilliant in color, of all sweet peas of its own peculiar hue, says David R. Williamson, writing in a leading English paper, but requires a fertile soil and a warm summer to develop its possibilities. In the coolness of autumn it perceptibly declines. Etta Dyke, whose synonym in America is the White Countess Spencer, is, perhaps, the most eulogized of all pure white sweet peas of this special description. Very beautiful are also the Primrose, Ramona and Apple Blossom Spencers; likewise the beautiful lavender-colored Asta Ohn, raised and named after his daughter by Henry Ohn, the Chinese head-hybridist of Lester Morse, of the Santa Clara nurseries, in California. Mr. Morse recently sent to me sev-

Cut Dahlia Flowers Pay

If You Have the Following Varieties

After considerable consideration and observation, and "talks" with the trade, we have decided to offer the following Dahlias to florists this season. Our retail Catalogue, which will be mailed free, contains a larger collection, but few are superior to the following and all are good size, divided clumps that have been field-grown and are strong and healthy.

Price of all the below-named varieties of Dahlias, large divided clumps or roots, except where noted, 10c each, $1 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $70 per 1,000.

Jack Rose. (Decorative type.) The variety Jack Rose is rightly named and is a florist's Dahlia, "from the ground up." The color is similar to the Jacqueminot rose, and is a unique color in the Dahlia, which lights up beautifully at night. The habit of the plant is stocky, very free-flowering. Producing its blooms in great profusion, upon erect, long stiff stems, making it invaluable for cutting. You cannot afford to be without it, if you sell cut-flowers. Price, green plants, ready April 1, 1909, 50c each, $5 per doz., $35 per 100.

Decorative Dahlias

Sylvia. Best described as a Giant Nymphæa, being stronger, larger and deeper colored. Flowers 4 to 6 inches in diameter, of fine form and full to the center, which is white, shaded to soft pink on the outer petals. One of the best cut-flower varieties.
Admiral Dewey. Brilliant imperial purple.
Black Beauty. A beautiful dark velvety maroon.
Blue Oban. A sport of the Decorative Dahlia Oban, and the nearest approach to blue found in Dahlias. 25c each, $2.50 per doz.
Catherine Duer. Strong-growing, free-flowering crimson-scarlet.
Clifford W. Bruton. Best yellow; immense size; perfect form
Frank L. Bassett. Color, bright royal purple, shading to blue.
Grand Duke Alexis. Very large, white, tinted pale lavender.
Henry Patrick. Superb pure white; long stems; fine for cutting.
Lyndhurst. One of the best bright scarlet.
Maid of Kent. Cherry-red, tipped white.
Mrs. Winters. Very large; pure snow-white.
Nymphaea. Color, clear, light shrimp-pink.
Oban. Very large rosy lavender.
Orange King. Rich glowing orange; early and profuse.
Perle (Perle de la tete d' Or). The grandest white Decorative Dahlia to date; very large and of beautiful shape.
William Agnew. Rich, dazzling red; immense size.

Cactus Dahlias

Aegir. Petals are twisted and color bright rich crimson-scarlet.
Countess of Lonsdale. A pleasing blending of amber and salmon.
Dainty. The ground color is lemon-yellow, which shades lighter as the season advances, at which time the color approaches canary-yellow at the base of the petals.
Earl of Pembroke. Bright plum. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Floradora. Color, dark velvety crimson. The best dark crimson for cutting, as the flowers are borne on long, erect stems and keep for a long time. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
General Buller. Color, deep, rich, velvety maroon, tipped white. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Harbor Light. Flowers are of immense size, outer petals extending to 7 inches across; long, slender, twisted and incurved; color, orange-red.
Jealousy. Purest pale canary-yellow.
J. H. Jackson. The largest of the deep, rich velvety maroons.
Keynes White. One of the best white Cactus Dahlias.
Kriemhilde. One of the finest pink Cactus Dahlias.

Cactus Dahlias

Mrs. H. J. Jones. Incurved portion of the petals are deep crimson; the broad stripe of white running through the center of the petals extends almost to the center.
Standard Bearer. Brightest scarlet; profuse bloomer. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Strahlein Krone. Intense cardinal-red.
Victor Von Scheffel. The color is a fresh, delicate pink, shading to deep rose-pink. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Winsome. Flowers white, very large, beautiful Cactus form.

Show and Fancy Dahlias

A. D. Livoni. Beautiful soft pink; early and profuse bloomer.
A. Pefferhorn. Rosy crimson.
Arabella. Pale primrose, tipped and shaded old rose and lavender.
Camelliaflora. A fine large pure white.
Glowing Coal. Brilliant red.
Green's White. One of the best whites for cutting.
Harlequin. Brilliant crimson, striped and tipped white.
Lemon Beauty. A grand yellow.
Menheddy Beauty. Fancy buff, with crimson spots, free, long stems, large bloom. 8c each, 80c per doz., $6 per 100.
Olympia. Color is deep rose-pink, striped and penciled crimson.
Progress. The color is a clear, soft rosy lake, beautifully penciled and spotted glowing crimson. Very valuable as a cut-flower. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Queen Victoria. Deep yellow; fine for cutting.
Red Hussar. Pure cardinal, red flower, very free bloomer, splendid for cutting.
Storm King (Blizzard). A companion for the superb pink Dahlia, A. D. Livoni. Flowers are snow-white; extremely early and a free-bloomer. This is the florist's ideal white. 15c each, $1.25 per doz., $10 per 100.
White Swan. Snow-white, with long stems.

Single Dahlias

THE 20TH CENTURY. Intense rosy crimson, with white tips and white disk around the yellow center.

Dahlias to Color

We can also furnish, without names, in mixture, all colors separate, or all colors mixed, as follows:
Mixed Pinks, Mixed Whites, Mixed Reds, Mixed Yellows. 8c each, 75c per doz., $6 per 100, $55 per 1,000.
Mixed, all colors. 60c per doz., $5 per 100, $45 per 1,000.

eral unnamed Spencerian hybrids, whose appearance during next summer I await with interest, says Mr. Williamson.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business for the last week has been good. Several large funerals cleaned up stock fairly well, but still there was a good deal left. Planting time is here and the florists are busy getting out bedding stock for the cemetery and lawns. All kinds of bedding stock are plentiful and of extra good quality. Some good geraniums in 4-inch pots are selling at $1.50 a dozen, the price some of the local florists are trying hard to get for all 4-inch stock, although the majority are selling them for $1 a dozen.

Various Notes.

August R. Baumer is wearing a smile these days that is hard to equal. The stork has been at his house. It's a girl. Mother and daughter are doing well.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—H. P. Potter will build an additional greenhouse, 16x110, at Twenty-fourth and Market streets.

WINDOW AND PIAZZA BOXES.

ner for the front, looks well. As a rule, scarlets and crimsons are preferable to pinks. Whites are not so desirable as the higher colors. Scarlet geraniums and white marguerites look well for a time, but the marguerites are not persistent bloomers. Poitevine, Dryden, Grant and Trego are all good geraniums for boxes, and for an ordinary box, thirty-six to forty-two inches long, nine inches deep, and planted with nothing but geraniums, a $5 bill would leave a satisfactory profit. If cannas are used, do not use geraniums in the same boxes, and only use the dwarf cannas.

Plants for Piazza Boxes.

With piazza boxes, a little more variety of material is permissible, and the plants are better with more height. Where there is considerable shade, Boston ferns, with kentias or phœnix and a draping of Asparagus Sprengeri, are suitable. In partial shade fuchsias, tuberous begonias, hydrangeas and show pelargoniums will do nicely. Boxes of fancy caladiums, with panicum and fittonia in front, last season were tasteful. These cost $7.50 per box. A similar box of crotons and Abutilon vexillarium can be planted somewhat cheaper. It is possible always to use in these boxes plants which as individuals would be hard to sell, and in estimating the prices of boxes these things should be duly considered.

For parties wanting something inexpensive there can be nothing better than either dwarf nasturtiums or petunias. Each of these flowers the whole summer long, and, if the boxes are started in a greenhouse before being placed in their summer quarters, they will lack the bareness of those filled with small seedlings around Memorial day.

The Various Items of Expense.

In figuring the cost of filling window or piazza boxes, the transportation to and from the greenhouses, the compost, a coat of paint where needed, as well as the plants, are to be included. If all these are reckoned, we shall see that it will hardly pay to fill a box even of annuals short of $3, or of geraniums and other flowering or foliage plants for less than $5, while where palms and larger and more expensive plants are used, the cost must be proportionately higher. It is, of course, possible to shade these prices where a good number are to be filled, but if only one or two are needed, the margin of profit will be none too great.

All boxes are best filled at the greenhouses. One experience in carting soil and plants to a distance, and being short of this or that, will convince anyone of this.

Always be sure that the balls are well soaked before planting. Those set out with dry roots will never thrive. Do not urge customers to put off their box filling until June, when you can just as well do this work in May, and be sure to impress upon them the desirability of picking off faded flowers and watering regularly to keep them in good condition.

Blooming plants for windows and foliage plants for piazzas are better than the reverse order. Of course, there are a good number of flowering subjects adaptable for piazzas and porches, but foliage plants are more suitable for the latter, and should be used more sparingly, if at all, in window boxes. Some strong color is needed to show up the latter to advantage, especially if at a considerable altitude.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

[Concluded from page 8]

found by digging around the bases of plants attacked. At night with a lantern they can be discovered and destroyed. This is a tedious and backaching task, and out of the question where there are large breadths of plants. The free use of black soot dusted over and among the plants is repugnant to cutworms, even more so than lime. A bait of poisoned mash made of fresh shorts sweetened with molasses and to which a little Paris green is added, if laid around their haunts, will attract and kill many. Our British friends claim to have a number of preparations, such as Vaporite, which, when scattered over the ground and hoed or raked in, will destroy by suffocation all pests in the soil. Such a remedy, if put on the market here at a moderate price, would have an immense sale, once it could be proved that it does the work claimed for it. Frequent stirring of the soil with hoe or cultivator is disliked by cutworms, and if persisted in will reduce the amount of damage they would otherwise do.

Brief Reminders.

Finish any pruning on spring planted roses at once.

Remove dead wood from flowering shrubs, now that growth is sufficiently advanced so that it can be seen.

Get spraying outfits in readiness. The work of fighting leaf-eating insects must start as soon as the leaves unfold, to be at all effectual.

Plant out any left-over spiræas, dividing any large clumps.

House Spanish iris and Gladiolus nanus now to be in season for Memorial day.

Do not forget to save a sufficient number of stock plants of yellow and white marguerites, planting these out when danger of frost has gone.

Gradually reduce the water supply on freesias you are growing along for flowering bulbs. Keep these on a sunny shelf, or in a frame.

Keep the hoe going among hardy perennials, as well as shrubberies.

Gloxinias will require a fairly heavy shade to prevent burning of the flowers. Pot on your spring seedlings and grow in a warm house.

Stir around sweet peas outdoors freely and afford them a mulch of old decayed manure to keep the roots cool and moist.

Plant out gladioli and tuberoses. Let the latter have a warm location, with plenty of sun.

CUCUMBERS.

This is the strenuous time of the year for cucumber growers. The plants are now well started up the trellis and are anxiously being watched There is no greenhouse vegetable more difficult to grow than the cucumber, and to get a perfect crop requires a good deal of skill on the part of the grower. There are many things to consider that might cause the loss of the entire crop in a short time. The first thing to consider is the temperature. The house must be warm night and day to have them do as they should. A night temperature of 65 to 68 or 70 degrees is about right, with a day temperature of about 80 degrees when bright. If the vines are kept too warm in the daytime, the difference in the temperature at night may be too great and be injurious to the plants, and if kept too cool they will not grow enough to be profitable.

Overwatering or insufficient water will injure them considerably. When small they do not require much water, but when well started or full grown they require a lot of it to keep the soil just moist enough. Sometimes it will look too wet on the surface and be injuriously dry down deeper, where the roots are. The only way to tell positively is to take a small trowel and dig into it occasionally in different places and find just how it is deeper down.

Ventilation is an important point. A little air should be given as soon as the sun begins to warm up the houses. It is a mistake to wait until the houses are hot enough for day temperature before opening the ventilators. Very few growers give their houses enough ventilation. Plants need fresh air, not only to breathe, as people do, but they also need a free circulation of air to keep the foliage dry and to keep down the fungus and diseases, which flourish in a close atmosphere.

Soil is also important to consider. If not good and rich when put in, more fertilizers should be added occasionally. Diseases usually get started when the plants have become soft or weak from neglect or improper care. Insects of all kinds must be watched for and cleaned out before they get numerous enough to be injurious. H. G.

WINTER ONIONS.

What kind of onions should I plant out in open ground for winter and early spring sales, and when is the proper time to plant them? G. C.

The winter onion is the kind you want. Buy the top sets and plant them the last of August, in rows, just as you would any onion sets. Cultivate carefully the remainder of the summer. They make their growth before being frozen in the fall. In the spring, as soon as thawed out, they get green and are ready to pull. Do not pull the entire patch, but save a few rows from which to get your supply of top sets for the planting that summer.

Top sets are those which come in clusters on top of the stalk, like seed pods. The onion sets generally used for spring planting as soon as the ground can be cultivated are called bottom sets, and are simply small onions of the same yellow and white kinds used for large or main crop onions. They are produced by planting the seed very thickly, so that the onions cannot grow large. Many are sold for pickling in the fall. The balance are used for spring sets, and come on closely after the winter onions, or about the time the winter onions are beginning to get too strong to eat. For a steady supply, both kinds are necessary, as the winter onions get too hot and tough for table use in a short time, although they are nice and tender at first. H. G.

State of Trade.

Trade the last two weeks has only been fair, owing to weather conditions, and perhaps also to some customers having had so many flowers at Easter that they felt like giving them a rest for a time. But the stock has been fine and apparently plentiful. Roses have been and are in good supply, while carnations, on account of the weather, have shortened up a little and it looks as if there would be no abundance of them for Decoration day. Outdoor flowers have not made an appearance as yet. Sweet peas are coming in, but not in large quantities, and they find ready sale, as violets are on their last legs. Some fine plants are seen, but as yet it has been too cold to set them out.

Various Notes.

The Gallup Floral Co. has closed out its business at 1547 California street.

Among the recent visitors was J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind.

Mothers' day made quite a call for white carnations. None were to be had at noon on that day.

N. A. Benson, state vice-president of the S. A. F., has sent out a timely letter drumming up the attendance to the S. A. F. convention at Cincinnati.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June 9 to 11, 1909.

NURSERYMEN'S CONVENTION.

Elaborate preparations are under way for the thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held at Rochester, June 9 to 11. The Hotel Seneca is to be headquarters, meetings and trade exhibits under one roof. But the principal interest will lie in the Rochester nurseries themselves, and the Rochester nurserymen are preparing to make the visit memorable. Both President C. J. Brown and Secretary George C. Seager are Rochesterites, and the following local committees have been placed in charge of the preparations:

Executive Committee—William Pitkin, J. M. Pitkin, Charles J. Brown, Charles J. Maloy, E. S. Osborne, Horace Hooker, William C. Barry, A. H. Salter, George C. Seager.

Committee on Finance—William C. Barry, Irving Rouse, Nelson Bogue, George C. Perkins, George S. Josselyn, Theodore J. Smith, John B. Morey, William J. Maloney.

Committee on Rides, Excursions and Lonesome Roads—Charles J. Maloy, M. B. Fox, B. F. Allen, F. E. Grover, Charles H. Hawks, R. D. Luetchford, A. L. Wood.

Committee on Entertainment of Ladies—Horace Hooker, R. G. Salter, J. F. Dale, E. S. Mayo, A. A. Mosher, Thomas F. Brown, C. H. Chase, Mrs. C. J. Brown, Mrs. G. C. Seager.

Committee on Smoker—E. S. Osborne, Charles L. Yates, O. G. Chase, J. M. Pitkin, O. E. Graham, Walter W. Wyman, Charles H. Vick.

Committee on Decorations—A. H. Salter, J. M. Charlton, George F. Crosman, J. M. Keller, Fred W. Vick, Fred Schlegel.

Press Committee—H. C. Goodwin, Prof. John Craig, Charles A. Green.

J. M. Pitkin, chairman of the committee on program, announces the following:

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 9 A. M.

Address of Welcome, Hon. H. H. Edgerton, Mayor of Rochester.

Response, George S. Josselyn, Fredonia, N. Y.

President's Address, Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.

Roll Call of State Vice-Presidents. Nurserymen from various states are requested to get together in the meeting room before the morning session the first day and choose their respective vice-presidents so they can respond at the opening session, as provided in this program.

Report of Tariff Committee, Irving Rouse, Rochester, N. Y.

"Nurserymen Pulling Together a Little More," J. H. Dayton, Painesville, Ohio.

"The Experiment Station and the Fruit Interests," Dr. W. H. Jordan, N. Y. Agricultural Station, Geneva, N. Y.

Report of Transportation Committee, F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.

"Should Wholesale Protect Retail?" J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

"Evergreen Conifers," Samuel C. Moon, Morrisville, Pa.

Appointment of special committees.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, AFTERNOON.

A ride through Rochester streets and parks. Conveyances will be at the Hotel Seneca at two o'clock. This is expected to be a most attractive feature of the convention. A band concert will be given in one of the parks. All nurserymen and representatives of allied industries, with their wives and children, sweethearts or friends, invited. Give the secretary your name, so that proper arrangements can be made.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, EIGHT P. M.

Meeting of state vice-presidents in assembly room to nominate officers and a place of meeting for the year 1910.

POMOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Pomological Society has accepted a joint invitation tendered by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, the Niagara District Fruit Growers and the St. Catherines Horticultural Society to meet at St. Catherines this year for the thirty-first biennial conference. Arrangements are rapidly progressing for a reunion of unusual value and interest at this attractive place. The date is September 14 to 16, 1909.

An unusual feature lies in the fact that the Ontario government has recognized the importance of the coming of this society to Canada by placing a substantial sum of money at the disposal of the committee on arrangements. This committee includes representatives of the provincial as well as of local societies.

The secretary of the Pomological Society was invited to meet with this gen-

PACIFIC COAST.

Wenatchee, Wash.—The Wenatchee Floral Co. will build a greenhouse at 515 King street, to cost about $1,500.

North Pomona, Cal.—Mrs. Julia A. Marugg has sold her chrysanthemum business to A. W. Pooley, of Covina, but is continuing to handle pansies, carnations and potted plants, as usual, at the Pomona Floral Nurseries.

The next annual meeting of the American Association of Farmers' Institute Workers will be held at Portland, Ore., August 16 and 17, 1909. At the same place, and beginning August 18, will be held the annual meeting of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations. The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will be in operation at Seattle at that time.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Never within the recollection of the oldest florist in San Francisco has the florists' trade been so demoralized as it is at present. The city is so thoroughly divided in regard to the districts devoted to retail stores that most of our largest dealers have had to open two or more establishments.

It is hard to tell at this time where the center of trade is to be in the downtown district. The prominent retailers are opening stores in close proximity to the large dry goods shops. It always happens that certain streets and locations get the great bulk of the travel, and this is the greatest puzzle to be solved. It is yet too early to tell how the trade will go, so a dozen of our big florists' establishments have located on half a dozen of the principal downtown thoroughfares and are awaiting the turn of the tide. Rents for desirable locations are sky-high, and in any event it will be some time before they will be justified in taking such a load to carry. The downtown property owners are asking all the traffic will bear, and for these reasons, coupled with the fact that the general public are buying sparingly, I have made the statement that everything in the flower line is demoralized at present.

Out in the older sections of town and in the residence districts, the dealers are closely watching the happenings downtown, willing at any time to make a change if the public seems to demand it. The gentle public seems not to know just what it wants either. It is certain, however, that when the last of the big dry goods houses have permanently settled in their new quarters, they will have a large following of patrons and it is for these that the florist will lie in wait. Another few months will probably show which of them have used good judgment in the selection of new locations.

The unequaled white decorative Freesia. Send in your orders early if you want the large sizes, as I am booking large orders for them now and will have to refuse orders for mammoth, although I will have many more bulbs than other years. Our stock is absolutely pure, as great pains is taken to remove any rogues, as they may appear, and all seed pods are removed, avoiding all danger of mixture, as Purity does not come true from seed. Dealers getting their stock from us, will always be sure to get the purest of stock.

Carnations and roses are so cheap that it is hardly worth the while to give quotations. In a couple of weeks, however, the spring crop will be off and we can look for something more pleasurable to mention. Irises are plentiful and cheap. Daffodils and tulips are out of market; so, also, are violets. Valley is holding its own and there is a fair demand for Harrisii. Funeral work is about all that the retailer gets, and not much of that.

Various Notes.

Bert E. Whelpsley, representing the Alex. Mann Co., is making a trip among the retailers in the surrounding towns.

The orchid growers in the vicinity of San Francisco will form a combine and raise the price of orchids for next season, according to a report circulated here.

Mrs. Fannie Cooke, widow of the late John Cooke, the pioneer florist of Berkeley, Cal., died at her home in that city April 28. Mrs. Cook was 73 years of age and leaves a family of four grown-up children.

A horse was stolen from the barn of H. Hayashi, of Elmhurst, on the night of April 24. The animal was valued at $150.

Geo. E. Rider, of Los Angeles, is in town on a few weeks' vacation.

The Piedmont Floral & Seed Co., of Oakland, is remodeling its Broadway store. G.

CALIFORNIA BULB CULTURE.

The heavy demand for bulbs, as shown in the sales by dealers who handled them during the last season, promises well for a continuance of such patronage from the flower-loving public. This has been a remarkably favorable season for this class of stock, and the absence of frost and other disagreeable features for several years has greatly encouraged private parties to give bulbs a large space in their grounds. Late frosts and an absence of late rains play havoc with such articles when planted in the open, but we have had no complaint on this score in central California for several years. The larger and more varied stocks carried by our principal dealers have tended to a great extent to popularize the best varieties, and private people are getting more exacting regarding what sorts they plant, but they are devoting much more ground to the cultivation of well tried bulbous plants.

Formerly a few dozen mixed hyacinths and a hundred or so of tulips represented the sum total of the knowledge displayed by the bulb lover. A great change has taken place. The dealer has been forced to keep himself well informed on the most desirable varieties, as well as to exhibit his knowledge on the various successions of flowers, so that the customer can have a continuous showing of blooms throughout a greater portion of the year.

Tulips and daffodils of the extreme varieties have been in great demand, as well as anemones, ranunculi, irises and other late blooming bulbs. The public is showing considerable interest in the many good things that can be handled at a fair profit by the dealer, and if the season just finished is to be a criterion, it behooves us to lay in a heavy stock of selected varieties for the next season's trade. Loss From Hail.

A severe hail storm swept this city May 6, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, causing great damage to glass and young plants. Hailstones averaging in size that of English walnuts fell thick and fast for nearly fifteen minutes. Miss Elva Davis' loss is about $150; D. L. Vincent's, $100 from hail and $200 from lightning; M. Wetterling's loss to greenhouses and hotbeds, $100. The House of Correction also lost heavily.

The freshly plowed ground looks as if hundreds of Newfoundland dogs had been playing on it and left their tracks. The oldest settlers say they never saw anything similar. Even the "indestructible" roofing, with which many houses were covered, was riddled by the hailstones. M. W.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market during last week was of a steady nature, everyone being kept busy but nobody unduly exerting himself. The week opened with an oversupply of everything. The stock of white carnations, however, shortened up on Friday and Saturday, and few were to be had at any price. This was caused by everyone celebrating Mother's day, May 9. The observance of the day was general, and Baltimore localized the celebration in a manner that equaled that of any other city. J. Bolgiano & Son distributed over 3,500 white Enchantress to their patrons. The market people did a land office business in white carnations, and were asking 10 cents each for large varieties.

Roses were plentiful, especially pink and shorter grades of red and white. Lily of the valley has arrived in enormous quantities, and every stand has large trays full of exceptionally fine valley. The Exchange is receiving heavy shipments of lilies, which are hard to move. A few gladioli have made their appearance, and are eagerly sought after.

Q.

Hilpert & Hammen have been granted a permit to build a greenhouse on the Belair road, near Erdman avenue. Part of the building will be in the city and part in the county. It will be heated by steam. The cost will be about $1,000.

WASHINGTON.

The Washington Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce, the two business organizations which are booming industrial Washington, combined May 7 in giving a banquet at which the guest of honor was President Taft. That the affair was flowery in its nature may be judged by the fact that J. H. Small is president of the Board of Trade and Wm. F. Gude is president of the Chamber of Commerce.

FULTON, IA.—Messrs. Still and McKee, of Morrison, will locate a greenhouse at this place, on the south side.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade centers show but little activity at present; there seems to be some difficulty in getting stock to move. One day, hot as a July day, opened the tulips flat, and threw an immense lot of roses on the market. Carnations are high and scarce, none selling for much less than $3.50. Harrisii, irises and sweet peas help to drug the market. Peonies are coming in now, but in few varieties.

Various Notes.

Mothers' day, May 9, was the occasion of a great demand for white carnations, and when these could not be got, other white flowers were used. Some of the department stores bought up a supply of carnations and sold them at 1½ cents each, leaving an extremely small margin for the floral stores to copy.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

THE BEST WHITE ROSE

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, now ready for delivery, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready now, $35 per 100, 250 for $82.50, 500 for $150, 1000 for $300.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

The Market.

Weather conditions last week were quite favorable and business was excellent. The planting season is here and all the plantsmen are busy with flower beds, window boxes, vases, etc. Cut flowers are of good quality and meet with ready sales. Geraniums, cannas and other bedding plants are in great demand.

Various Notes.

Anderson & White are busy with spring stock at their place on Georgetown street. They have a good supply of bedding plants, as usual, and are using many of them in the cemeteries.

Charles Michler, of the Michler Bros. Co., is particularly busy with landscape work. This firm has a large variety of plants and does a good business.

J. Ferdinand Keller has begun planting out beds in the cemeteries and other places.

Edward Schneider, formerly in the business at Memphis, Tenn., contemplates locating in this city.

Blue Grass.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Mothers' day was generally observed here on Sunday, May 9. White carnations were in great demand, though cut flowers of all kinds were sold for the occasion. White roses and gardenias were as eagerly sought for as carnations for that day.

We are having a great deal of rain, with now and then a little sunshine for a few hours.

Various Notes.

Frank Thayer is on the sick list.

Charles Agnew, of Topeka, Kan., has accepted a position with the Baur Floral Co.

James F. Smith, representing Boas & Co., of Philadelphia, and W. P. Snyder, representing the Edwards Folding Box Co., were in the city this week.

Miss Elizabeth Moran, formerly saleslady for the Baur Floral Co., has taken charge of a Japanese tea store on West Twelfth street. B. P.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

May has started off with a rush and indications point to a good month. Decorations for weddings and receptions, combined with funeral work, have kept the store men on the jump.

The month of April had but eight days of sunshine, which cut down the supply of cut flowers, especially roses and carnations, which are being cleaned up every day. Callas, sweet peas, valley, snapdragons and outdoor lilacs are arriving in good quantities, with some few orchids. The cloudy weather in the last month has had a bad effect on the bedding plants, which are about a month behind time.

Various Notes.

E. A. Nelson has invested in a trotting horse and it has been tipped off that it is a dark horse.

Sidney Smith raises prize chickens as a side line, and reports better success with his chickens this spring than with his carnations.

A. Wiegand & Sons have received a shipment of imported orchids. Hans Kipke, of this firm, made a flying trip to Chicago last week. These trips are getting frequent; wonder when it is coming off.

A severe hail storm passed over Indiana last week and did considerable damage in Lafayette.

Alfred Warner spent a few days in Chicago last week, buying supplies.

John Bertermann is going to have another son-in-law.

Roepke & Rieman have a fine lot of Crimson Ramblers.

The City Florists' Club is talking picnic; that means a ball game. Last year the south side team beat the north side, with the assistance of the umpire, John Elsner, 10 to 9. This year we are going to get another umpire. H. L. W.

At a dinner given at the Columbia Club by John Bertermann, president of Bertermann Bros.' Co., the engagement of Miss Olga Bertermann to Paul Shideler was announced. Mr. Bertermann gave the dinner in honor of his wife's birthday anniversary. The engagement of their daughter was a surprise to most of the guests. A pretty menu card contained the announcement. It was not made known when the marriage will take place. Mr. Shideler is an artist.

The Market.

Trade has been good here for the last two weeks, especially in funeral work. Stock is still excellent for this time of the year, considering the changeable weather we have been having—one day summer heat and the next day regular winter weather. The warm days have brought out the crowds looking for bedding plants, etc., and as soon as the weather becomes settled we shall be right in the midst of the spring rush. There is not much here at present in the way of fancy stock in plants, etc., and we have to fall back to regular spring stock for store showing.

There was a good demand for white flowers for Mothers' day. White carnations took the lead, but there was a good lot of other stock cleaned up, and another year ought to witness a good flower day.

Various Notes.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting some fine sweet peas and also some good roses.

E. Metzmaier reports business rushing.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has a fine block of geraniums, which are just right for market. They are also cutting some fine roses and carnations. They have all their carnations planted in the field, and are busy planting some benches in roses.

Sherman Stephens reports everything active at Greenlawn, especially on bright days. He has a large number of vases to fill every year for Greenlawn, which keeps them hustling to get done by Decoration day.

J. M.

Lincoln, Neb.—Joe B. Frey, who has been manager for the firm of Frey & Frey for twenty-three years, has resigned and started business on his own account. His fine record in connection with Frey & Frey augurs well for the success of his own enterprise.

Provincetown, Mass.—J. & A. E. Brian, of the Pilgrim greenhouses, have issued some neat spring announcements. The founder of the firm was formerly a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, but failing health led him to try a change of business and he seems to have been quite successful as a florist.

A Prosperous Florist is like the Bee—Never idle

We have plants to sell; so have thousands of other florists.

But we have quantity, quality and prices that few can offer.

Our immense stock of bedding plants is now ready, every hole and corner full for immediate shipment.

Geraniums, S. A. Nutt (best crimson), John Doyle and other reds, Mme Thibaut and Jean Viaud (pink), 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Scarlet Sage (salvia). The true Clara Bedman or Bonfire variety. Ours is the true, medium tall, genuine variety, an immense bloomer, with deep red, brilliant flowers, so well-known and admired in the capitals of Europe and America. The seeds of this famous variety were gathered by me in Zurich, Switzerland, the home of Salvias. Price, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $8 00 per 100.

Ageratums, best of the blue dwarf, 4-in. pots, in bloom. $6.00 per 100.

Heliotropes, best of blue dwarf variety, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $7.00 per 100.

Begonia Vernon, newest strain, the well-known dark variety. Our own importation, the seeds having been gathered from the best specimen plants by me on my trip to Switzerland and France. It does well in either warm or cold climate and blooms profusely in July and August, even when fully exposed to the sun, and is very valuable for bedding purposes, in many instances taking the place of Geraniums and other plants. Price, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $8.00 per 100.

Begonia Erfordii, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $8.00 per 100.

Begonia Flambeau, on account of its waxy foliage (pink flowers in summer), is valuable for window boxes, vases, and makes a striking appearance, 5¼-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.; 4-in. pots, $1.00 per doz.

Fuchsias, assorted, in bud, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Petunias, double assorted, 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Lantanas, assorted, 4-in. pots, in bloom, $7.00 per 100.

Nasturtiums, dwarf, assorted, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Stocks, German, six weeks, 4-in. pots, $7.00 per 100.

Vincas, variegata and periwinkle, 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Cobaea scandens, fine, blue, bell-shaped flowered, climbing vine, growing from 30 to 50 feet high in one summer, blooming far into November, 4-in. pots, nicely staked up, $8.00 per 100.

Cannas, 4-in. pots. Henderson, Poitevine, Bismarck, Mlle. Berat, etc., $8 00 per 100.

Aster Victoria, German, 5 best sorts, $3 00 per 100.

Honeysuckle, large, 6-in., 50c; 10 plants sold at 100 rates.

REMEMBER

We are one of the largest importers of these well-known and beautiful evergreen decorative plants, the Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa, and those we offer were imported the Spring of 1908.

Florists should bear in mind that no garden, lawn, etc., is complete without the Araucaria; therefore, if you wish to make money, recommend the Araucaria to your customers. Introduce this noble plant to your trade. We give you a special price, and it will pay you to handle them.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana. Just arrived, May 10, 1909, per steamer Manitou, a consignment of Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana. Price, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 each.

O! what a sight!
Moonvines, moonvines, moonvines—
The genuine, pure white, waxy, fragrant moonvine,
With flowers as big as a saucer.

THE SECRET OF THE MOONVINE

Look! Life, Life, Life everywhere!

What is life? Yourself is a life. Your time is a life. Your porch is a life—a mass of flowers. Your home is a life. Your garden wall is a life. O! life and joy everywhere! Flowers and green everywhere—O! what a fine odor! Every spot of our home is a life. All happy.

"Mein Haeuschen steht im Gruenen."

I Am the Moonvine King of America

Grower and shipper of the so well-known Ipomoea Noctiflora, the pure white, fragrant, waxy moonvine, bearing flowers as big as a saucer, for which we have a world-wide reputation. For the last twenty years we have controlled the American market of this beautiful climbing vine, which grows 30, 40 to 50 feet high in one summer, covering every spot quickly wherever planted; 25,000 plants are raised and shipped by us every spring into every part of America. Beware of cheap stuff floating around the market. Price, 4-in. pots, nicely stocked up, $12.00 per 100; 3-in. pots, $8.00 per 100; 2½-in. pots, $5 00 per 100.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Rockford is daily becoming more and more a center for the production of flowers, the greenhouses of the local florists being enlarged annually to care for the increasing business. Much cut stock is shipped to Chicago, and other middle western cities depend on Rockford in a large measure to make up their shortage in cut flowers; large shipments are made daily to many cities within a radius of several hundred miles.

There are ten greenhouse establishments in Rockford, some large and others small, but all enjoying business commensurate with their production. H. W. Buckbee, John W. Ingalls & Co., H. B. Sullivan, C. H. Woolsey, M. C. Sadewater, J. J. Soper, H. R. Cotta, J. M. Corbin, H. S. Morton and L. C. Shearer are the ten Rockford growers of flowers for market purposes, wholesale or retail.

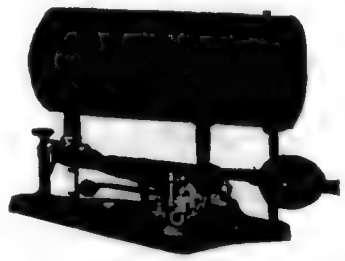
STEAM BOILER FOR WATER.

Will you kindly answer, through your heating column in REVIEW, the following: Can a horizontal flue steam boiler be successfully converted into a hot water boiler, and if so what would be the necessary changes? A. B. K.

Yes, by enlarging the blow-off pipe in the rear of the bottom of the boiler to the same area as the flows. Take off the water columns, steam gauge and pop valve. G. T. E.



A NEW TEXAS PLACE.

We are building two connected houses, each 27⅓x100, two 20x100, one 16x100, one 10x100, ten feet to the ridge, five feet to the eaves. One gable will be of glass. The sides will have twenty-two inches of glass and will be double boarded, with paper between. The north side will be protected by a boiler-shed. How shall we pipe these houses? We use either 2-inch or 3-inch flows and 2-inch for return. Will a Kroeschell No. 4 hot water boiler, rated at 5,000 feet of 2-inch pipe or 10,500 feet of glass, keep these houses at 58 degrees in zero weather? F. T.

Put in twelve 2-inch pipes in the two largest houses, ten 2-inch pipes in the 20-foot houses, eight 2-inch pipes in the 16-foot house and five 2-inch pipes in the 10-foot house. Run the pipes up one side of the bench and down the other. This is figured as two pipes. Run the flow across the ends of the houses in the shed, and also the return. Put the boiler down below the level of the greenhouses. Tee each house off of the main flow and return. A Kroeschell No. 4 boiler will be just right, but would advise putting in a larger one to provide for the future growth of the place.

A TWO SECTION HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse eighty feet long and thirty feet wide, divided by a glass partition into two parts of thirty feet and fifty feet respectively. The height of the walls is five feet, with eighteen inches of glass, double boarded, with building paper between. The roof is even-span, twelve feet to the ridge. One end of the house is glass, the other end built against the shed. The benches all are raised. The temperature in the smaller part is to be 65 degrees; in the larger section, 55 degrees. The minimum outdoor temperature in winter is 10 degrees above zero. How would you advise me to pipe this house? I have 2-inch pipe for the returns and I have some 3-inch pipe, but do not know if the latter would be large enough for the flows. How many overhead flows and how many returns will be needed in each part of the house? How far above the

ANOTHER THING TO THINK OVER

You know how a chicken will start on a keen run from a neighboring field, to run across in front of a wagon? The chicken lacks sense, that's sure. But what of the growers who go out of their way to install boilers that, in their fundamental principles, are for residence heating? Residence heating is not greenhouse heating. You must have a greenhouse boiler to heat your greenhouse economically. We have two greenhouse boilers—the tried and proven Vertical Sectional, and our new friend, the Round Sectional. Send for our boiler booklet.

The Market.

Business is opening up rather slowly this week, but still the week is young and there is plenty of time for improvement. Last week business was fair. The demand continued good at all times, and stock of all kinds moved off at good prices. This was a decided contrast to the week before, when there was a big glut and stock had to be moved at any price.

While prices are low, still it is gratifying to see the stock all sold up at night. Beauties are coming fast and they are selling at the lowest price so far this season. It is so much per hundred now, instead of so much per dozen. Brides and Maids are also plentiful and the quality in most cases is poor, which has a little to do with the price. Carnations are equal to the demand. There is quite an assortment of flowers on the market now, besides the usual roses and carnations, and they take well. The public likes a change now and then.

We are having some decidedly bad weather. It is cloudy and raining most of the time and it is also pretty cold. These conditions, if they continue for any length of time, will be sure to cut down the supply of flowers and will also work an improvement in the prices.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club room Saturday, May 8, and was well attended. Many matters of importance were brought up and disposed of. The financial committee, of which R. Witterstaetter is chairman, showed that money was coming in well for the entertainment fund. Henry Schwarz read an interesting paper on the "History of the Cincinnati Florists' Society," which was well received. Nomination of officers for the ensuing year was in order and the following were nominated: For president, J. A. Peterson; vice-president, C. E. Critchell; treasurer, D. Rusconi; secretary, Albert Sunderbruch, and trustee, Gus. Adrian. As there were no other nominations, this insures the election of these gentlemen at the next meeting. This also means the reëlection of the present officers, which, of course, is the proper thing, as these officers have started the work of entertaining the S. A. F. here in August, and it is but right that they should be continued in office. It was agreed that from now till after the convention the board of directors, together with the chairmen of the various committees, would meet every Monday evening at the Sinton hotel. This will enable the officers to keep in close touch with all that is going on and is a good thing.

As a result of damage wrought by the hail storm of April 20, William K. Partridge, one of the best known florists in Ohio, was forced to file a deed of assignment in the Insolvency Court, May 4, assigning to Attorney W. W. Bellew. He estimates his assets at $40,000 and liabilities $30,000. The cause given is damage to his greenhouses and plants by hail storms during the last two years. Mr. Partridge owns a large plant at Lockland and has a store at 148 East Fourth street, this city. Two years ago he suffered considerable damage from a hail storm at Lockland, and the recent heavy hail storm cost him $8,000 in damage done to plants and greenhouses. The business will be conducted by the assignee.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The cool weather the earlier part of last week put a decided crimp in the supply of cut flowers, especially carnations, which were away short of enough to meet the demand. All orders were only partially filled for white carnations, the demand for them on Mothers' day being far in advance of what was expected. The demand for other flowers of all kinds was materially increased on the strength of Mothers' day, and this day will hereafter be looked upon as one of the best of the year. Roses are still coming in freely, the quality being fine for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

The J. M. Gasser Co. has been sending in a heavy cut of roses lately. The Killarneys are especially good.

F. H. Kramer was sending in a fine cut of Enchantress and Lawson last week.

Knoble Bros. report a heavy week of funeral work, also some large decorations.

Milford Parks has again leased the flower stand at Luna park for this season.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Reports vary somewhat as to the business of last week. Some of the florists were quite busy all the week, with funeral work, weddings and one thing and another. With others, trade was quiet. Judging from the quantity of stock on the market, the demand has not been any too great.

The condition of all the stock at present is fine. Roses and carnations are exceptionally good. Sweet peas, snapdragons, stocks, irises, etc., never were better.

Graduation exercises are creating some demand for flowers these days. Still, it is a little early in the season for these affairs.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is handling large quantities of Beauties, and finds a good demand for them.

The funeral of the late ex-mayor of Detroit, Wm. C. Maybury, caused a big demand for flowers of all kinds. Many hundred Beauties were used, as well as any number of wreaths and several large designs.

Several of the store people are contemplating alterations in their stores. G. H. Taepke is planning a fine conservatory in the rear of his store. J. F. Sullivan also expects to alter his store front and make other alterations as soon as the busy season is over.

B. Schroeter is doing a good business in bay trees and boxwoods.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House is finding a ready sale for some fine sweet peas, which it is receiving daily.

A baby boy arrived at the home of Mrs. S. Wells, daughter of E. A. Fetters, last week. Mr. Fetters now has two grandchildren, and is still but a young man himself. H. S.

The site is centrally located and is convenient for transportation. NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business last week was good, both in the cut flower trade and in funeral work. Carnations are getting scarce again; the plants are a little off crop, and this, with the recent dark weather we have had, has caused the scarcity of flowers. Carnations are now retailing at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen, and roses at $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Some good roses are now to be seen in this market. Sweet peas retail at $1 per hundred blooms. Bulbous stock from indors is about all gone. Some nice outdoor blooms of tulips and daffodils are now to be seen, and retail at from 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen. Calla lilies, Easter lilies, etc., retail at $2.50 per dozen. Violets are about all gone for this season. The year has been a fairly good one for these flowers, with fairly good prices realized for them.

Work in the gardens is still being rushed, and large forces of men are still at work. This is a good branch of the business here. Pansies are selling well, also daisies at from 25 cents to 35 cents per dozen roots. We are now having good, warm spring weather, and since the recent copious rain vegetation has been breaking forth in earnest. From present indications, hothouse flowers will be rather scarce. It looks now as if lilacs, deutzias, etc., will be in full bloom for Memorial day, but tulips and other bulbous stock will be all gone by that date. Stocks will be in good season.

Various Notes.

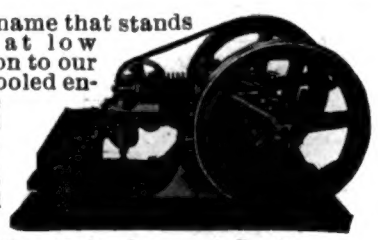
E. H. Chamberlain reports good business last week, with stock scarce.

S. S. Peckham reports a good demand for carnations, but he is a little off crop just now.

H. A. Jahn is still cutting some good Lloyd carnations. He is busy planting out dahlias just now.

William P. Peirce and R. E. Nofftz are showing fine window decorations these days.

A. B. Hathaway is still cutting some nice sweet peas.



E. Y. Peirce has his young carnation stock all planted out in the field.

R. H. Woodhouse reports funeral work quite plentiful. He has a nice batch of geraniums for the spring bedding-out.
